FOREWORD

Constitutional Conventions are the tap roots of democracy. Openly conducted, they bring the people, through the delegates, face to face with what government is all about. At such Conventions, society must arrange its priorities, safeguard its basic beliefs, and order its future. This is a large order under the best of circumstances and the wonder is that men and women from diverse backgrounds with different interests and with limited time and resources can successfully undertake the task. In 1972, in Helena, Montana, one hundred men and women did so successfully. Montana had a good Constitutional Convention.

The members of the Montana Constitutional Convention were an unusual group. They were, on the whole, inquisitive, studious, well-meaning, and sincerely interested in improving the Montana political framework. For the most part they were not seasoned politicians; with the exception of a few former state legislators they were persons interested by nature or vocation in the political process, but who had not participated before as elected officials.

The important key to the election of this rather remarkable group was an action by the Montana Supreme Court. During the legislative session at which the Convention was authorized, the issue arose whether legislators could serve in the Convention. The Supreme Court held that since legislators were already elected to a term of office extending beyond the delegate terms, they were ineligible to become candidates in the delegate election. The result was that all of the major. active politicians serving in the Legislature were frozen out of the Constitutional Convention.

The delegates brought none of the acrimony and bitterness to the Convention that sometimes develops between seasoned politicians with preconceived positions on major stateissues. Thus the delegates were able to approach the principal issues before the Convention in an objective manner, and they also avoided a good deal of the pressures to which legislators aresubjected. The probable unforeseen result of the Supreme Court's action was a constitutional body relatively free from influence and dedicated to basic changes in Montana's constitutional framework.

Organizing a Constitutional Convention is a disquieting experience. There are few local precedents, a consciousness of uninhibited freedom and a reluctance to copy other states too completely. A Convention is really two operations-one administrative and one substantive. Very little ties these functions together, and there is a tendency to prefer substantive matters to mundane administration. Yet without sound administration, a Convention flounders, and the result could be disastrous.

The Montana Convention had four procedural committees and ten substantive committees. As President, I was allowed to make committee assignments and designate committee chairmen, which selections were then approved by the Convention as a whole. Before such assignments were made, each delegate was asked to list his first, second, and third choice; 81 of the delegates were placed on their first-choice committee and 15 got either their second or third choice. Only four delegates were assigned committees without regard to their three choices.

The committee selection function was, however, more difficult than it may appear. Each committee was weighted between Republicans and Democrats in proportion to the party strength in the Convention (including special arrangements for five Independents). In addition, I balanced the committees with strong advocates of the opposing ideological positions likely to be considered by the particular committee. Finally, committee chairmen were appointed according to party proportions (including an Independent), and then a member of the opposite political party or, whenever possible, a member of an opposite faction was appointed as vice chairman.

The committees thus contained members of both parties and members of all factions likely to contend over the issues before the committee. These factions were balanced whenever practicable, and each faction given its strong leadership.

The purpose of so carefully weighting the committee membership was to force the conflict over ideas back into the committees. This had the effect of creating the first and perhaps the most significant debate among those most interested in the issue, and at the basic committee level. It had the further advantage of avoiding, at the Committee-of-the-Whole debate stage, any claim that a major faction had been overlooked or taken advantage of. Since the minority report of most committees was made by the second strongest faction involved, the Convention debate was a true contest between the principal contenders on any given point, and the committee factions were in a position to accept the final result after full committee debate in a better mood than they might have if they had been attacking the issue from outside the committee structure. The result was that no major issues split the Convention significantly, as has occurred in many other Conventions.

A convention is an unwieldy institution at its best, either lying dormant or lurching forward recklessly, depending on circumstance and (sometimes) the whim of its leadership. Because the funds available to conduct Montana's Convention were so limited, it became absolutely essential that a carefully designed schedule be devised and followed if the Convention was to completeits work within its money, not to mention time. As a result the Convention leadership early spent considerable effort in devising such a schedule and urging adherence to it.

The Convention was scheduled for nine weeks; it lasted fifty-six days, excluding Sundays. The key to the schedule was a "rolling" feature by which the hearings, reports and debates of the committees were arranged on a staggered basis so that all did not come due at once. The first week was taken up largely with orientation. There followed three weeks of intensive committee hearings, meetings, and investigation. During the fourth and fifth week each committee was required to conduct one final public hearing at a time when no other public hearings were being held so that delegates from other committees could attend the hearing. Thereafter, a Committee Report was filed with the Convention and debate in Committee-of-the-Whole took place. Debate occupied the Convention for about four weeks. After adoption by the Committee-of-the-Whole, each Article was assigned to the Style and Drafting Committee, and again reported to the Convention before final passage.

The Montana Convention overlooked no opportunity to publicize its activities and to encourage public participation. Toward that end all of its votes, all of its deliberations, including all substantive and procedural committee meetings, were open to the public and press. An open Convention is not a painless one, and there were incidents and unfavorable publicity from time to time. But the value in the long run of the image of an open and accessible Convention proved to be great.

Debate on the great issues is the heart of any Constitutional Convention. At the Montana Convention debate was unlimited. Although the rules allowed limits, this never became necessary. There was no issue on which debate was ever cut off or limited, and no motions, amendments, or viewpoints that were not fully heard and discussed. Each delegate, no matter how trivial, farfetched, or tedious the discussion might be, was given an opportunity to speak before the vote.

This completely unlimited and open debate was not easily achieved. It took time. The Convention always started debate at 9:00 a.m. and often continued after the dinner hour and, on occasion, until 11:00 p.m. On most days, however, debate lasted about seven to eight hours.

One result of this broad debate was to avoid tension and engender tolerance. After the delegates realized that their right to speak was not going to be cut off or limited, they relaxed, listened, and considered the issues without rancor. The delegates often got tired, but they never worried that their viewpoint couldn't be expressed and considered.

It seems to be a principle of Constitutional debate, perhaps of legislative debate as well, that when a major issue is first encountered, the Body must be given sufficient time to probe the issue deeply and well. Attempts to bring about an early vote on major issues of real concern to most delegates usually resulted in slowing things up because of motions to reconsider, reversals of one type or another, and even motions to suspend the rules. However, if the Convention was allowed to debate a major issue thoroughly and completely, then several significant votes could be taken quickly near the end of the debate, establishing clearly the line of principle which the Convention wished to adopt. Usually such terminal votes were by strong majorities that were not subject to later serious attack by dissident delegates.

These matters are only administrative details, possibly useful in other Conventions or of historical significance. But on the substantive side there is one absolute good that deserves comment.

The delegates seemed unconsciously to apply an overriding democratic principle to their deliberations. They asked themselves, "Does it fit the future? Can it work in the future? How will the future generations respond?" Their concern for a time far beyond the present seems to me to be a rare and remarkable trait. It certainly had the effect of promoting bipartisanism and of lessening differences. Perhaps it is a trait only natural in constitutional circumstances; certainly it is not common in governmental action at any level. But for whatever reason, it unified and improved the work of the Convention delegates and the result was a good Constitution.

THE MOVEMENTS FOR STATEHOOD AND CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION IN MONTANA, 1866-1972

The desire for statehood surfaced soon after the formation of the Territory of Montana in 1864. The system of governance of territories was never to the liking of the strong-minded pioneers of the western regions. Federally appointed officials, lack of a vote in the Federal Congress, congressional veto power over territorial acts-all frustrated the citizens transplanted from the states. In 1866, Montana held its first constitutional convention at the call of Acting Governor Thomas Francis Meagher. Montana was too young to expect statehood to be granted by the Federal government, and the body that met to write the document suffered from several irregularities, if not illegal limitations. The work of this convention had little impact and served only to emphasize the desire for statehood in the minds of Montana's citizens.

Montana Territory had grown sufficiently by 1883 to merit serious consideration for admission to the Union. Several large mining communities now existed in western and central Montana. The railroads had arrived and agriculture and the livestock industry had given further impetus to the settlement and development of the entire Territory. The 1883 Territorial Legislature called for a constitutional convention to be held the following year. In January, 1884, this body met to draft a constitution for submittance to the Congress. Reflecting the Territory's general desire for statehood, this convention finished its work in a short time. After approval by the electorate, Territorial Delegate Joseph K. Toole submitted the 1884 Montana Constitution to Congress. This document became the basis for Montana's first official constitution, later draftedin 1889. Drawn primarily from the constitutions of New York and Colorado, the 1884 Constitution also reflected the dominance of the mining industry in the Territory.

Unfortunately for territories aspiring to statehood, congressional politics in the mid- and late-1880's made impossible the admission of any new states. Neither party, each of which was dominant in one house, wished to disturb the delicate political balance by admitting any new states. Montana, as a heavily Democratic territory, had its proposed constitution politely tabled by the Republican Senate. This situation continued until the election of 1888. In that general election Republicans secured control of both houses of Congress for the coming session, Further, because of Democratic party strife, Montana elected a majority of Republicans to territorial offices that year. With these changes, the "lame duck" Congress determined to grant authority to several states under the "Omnibus Act" to begin the process of writing their constitutions and seeking admission to the Union. By the provisions of this act, Montana held delegate elections in the spring of 1889. The Convention began deliberations on July 4, 1889.

Convention membership accurately reflected the population which had changed Montana from a frontier to an emerging society. Irish and German immigrants, descendants of old New England families, the wealthy, workingmen, the highly educated and the self-taught, were all elected to the body. Understandably, they represented a variety of economic interests: mine owners, cattlemen, a brewer, storekeepers, lawyers, miners, farmers, teachers, bankers, freighters, and public officials. One interest above all dominated their thinking-the mining industry. The delegates recognized the importance of the mineral industry in Montana's development and its potential for the future.

The Convention, although dominated by Democrats, experienced little partisanship. Major issues were decided more by economic interests, regional differences, and the dominant social philosophies than by strictly partisan politics. Most crucial to the mining interests was the inclusion in the Constitution ofthe "Net Metal Mines Tax" provision which in later operation proved to be little more than a tax exemption for the large mining companies. The Mines Tax provision was the most glaring example of "legislation" in the new constitution. The late nineteenth century's distrust of government, corporations, and particularly the interest& railroads, caused the inclusion of further "statutory" provisions in an attempt to curb and control these interests. The delegates did debate such issues as the eight-hour day, women's suffrage, and child labor prohibition, but the general conservatism of the area and era allowed little of a "progressive" nature to be written into the final document. The most debated and divisive issue concerned the placement of the state capital. This led to heated exchanges, secret agreements, and heavy lobbying. Ultimately, they postponed the issue until later elections, but the tenor of later contests, including a major battle in the Clark-Daly Feud and the cause of the scattering of state institutions, was set in the Convention.

This is not to suggest that the Constitution of 1889 contained little of merit, for it did provide a workable framework of government, particularly within the context of its era, and it did contain one provision which was remarkably farsighted. This is the inviolate Public School Trust Fund which established a basis for funding Montana's educational system. The trust fund has since proven its worth and stands in marked contrast to the poor handling of public lands income in some other western states.

The document written by the 1889 Constitutional Convention metlittle oppositionin the Territory. It won easy approval at the polls, 24,676 to 2,274. Montana was admitted to the Union by the order of President Benjamin Harrison, November 8, 1889.

With statehood, government was structured and began operation under the newly adopted constitution. Its success was probably no better or worse than that experienced by the many new states admitted between 1864 and 1912. Increasingly, as conditions changed and new problems arose, the need to amend the Constitution became periodically apparent. Between 1890 and 1971 the basic document was amended thirty-seven times. This frequency of change indicated that the Constitution had flaws and did not have sufficient flexibility to meet new challenges. This situation grew worse after World War II. The changing roles of the federal, state, and local governments; the change in relationships between the legislative and executive branches; citizen activism; and the traumas and uncertainties of the mid-twentieth century-all caused a basic reevaluation of our governmental framework. Major constitutional revision seemed a necessity.

In 1967 and 1968, the Legislative Council staff studied the various problems associated with the Constitution and many suggested solutions. They reported to the legislature that the Constitution required substantial revision if it was to be workable in coming decades. The Forty-first Legislative Assembly created a Constitution Revision Commission in 1969 to study methods of revising Montana's fundamental law. The appointive body in 1969-1970 investigated the various options available to the state for revision of the document and ultimately recommended that by referendum a constitutional convention be called. With the passage of Referendum 67, which empowered the calling of a convention to draft a new constitution, the Forty-second Legislature authorized the election of convention delegates, established a Constitutional Convention Commission, and provided funding for the operations of the Commission and the Convention. The Convention Commission and its staff conducted the necessary research and prepared for the convening of the Convention.

The election of delegates was held in November of 1971 and the preliminary sessions of the Convention took place at the State Capital, November 29 -December 1, 1971. Theregularsession of the Convention first met on January 17 and completed its deliberations March 24, 1972. Because public officials serving at the time were not eligible for election as delegates, the individuals selected were relatively new to government. Among them were ministers, a student, educators, bankers, ranchers, journalists, retired people, housewives, business people, a pilot, farmers, and an architect. The variety of experience, age, and origin combined to produce a constitution which has been called a "model document." Among other things it changed the governance of Montana's educational systems, gave more power to the legislature, and restructured the Public Service Commission. Written in clear, precise language, the new Constitution is much less than half the length of the 1889 Constitution.

After a heated campaign, the Constitution was accepted by the people of Montana at an election held June 6, 1972. The vote on adoption was 116,415 to 113,883. The document was proclaimed as officially adopted by Governor Forrest H. Anderson, June 20, 1972.

Any change in government and its procedures will encounter opposition. This occurred with the implementation of the new Constitution. Its opponents challenged the document in court, arguing that it had not been accepted by the electorate on June 6, 1972. Based on wording in the 1889 Constitution, the challengers maintained that a majority of those receiving ballots had to approve the constitution not just a majority of those voting on the constitutional question. Ultimately, this suit was heard by the State Supreme Court and the opponents' argument was rejected, effectively declaring the 1972 Constitution in force. Over the course of the next two years, the provisions of the document were implemented by the three branches of government under the transition schedule established by the Constitution.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION ENABLING ACT

(Chapter 296, Laws of 1971, As Amended by Chapter 1, Laws of 1971, Extraordinary Session)

Section 1. A constitutional convention to propose revisions, alterations, or amendments to the constitution of the state of Montana is hereby called.

Section 2. The number of members of the convention and the districts from which they areelected shall be the same as that provided for the election of members of the house of representatives of the Montana legislative assembly at the general election to be held November 7, 1972.

Section 3. The qualifications of members shall be the same as that of members of the senate of the Montana legislative assemby as provided in article V, section 3 of the constitution of the state of Montana: "No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained the age of twenty-four (24) years, and who shall not be a citizen of the United States and who shall not (for at least twelve (12) months next preceding his election) have resided within the county or district in which he shall be elected."

Section 4. (1) Delegates to the constitutional convention shall be elected in the same manner as members of the house of representatives, except the special primary election shall be held September 14, 1971 and the special general election shall be held November 2, 1971.

Thirty (30) days or more before the special general election, the secretary of state shall certify to the registrars the name and description of each person nominated, as specified on the certificate of nomination filed with him.

Section 5. Each member, before entering upon his duties, shall take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation prescribed by section 1 of article XIX of the constitution of the state of Montana: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support, protect and defend the constitution of the United States, and the constitution of the state of Montana, and that I will discharge the duties of my office with fidelity; and that I have not paid, or contributed, or promised to pay or contribute, either directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing to procure my nomination or election (or appointment) except for necessary and proper expenses expressly authorized by law; that I have not knowingly violated any election law of this state, or procured it to be done by others in my behalf; that I will not knowingly receive, directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing for the performance or non-performance of any act or duty pertaining to my office other than the compensation allowed by law, so help me God."

Section 6. Vacancies occurring in the convention shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the legislative assembly as provided in sections 43-215 and 43-216, R.C.M., 1947.

"43-215. Filling vacancies in legislative assemby-appointment by board of county commissioners-calling of board meeting. When a vacancy occurs in either house of the legislative assembly, the vacancy shall be filled by appointment by the board of county commissioners, or, in the event of a multicounty district, the boards of county commissioners comprising the districtsitting as one appointing board. The chairman of the board of county commissioners of the county in which the person resided whose vacancy is to be filled shall call a meeting for the purpose of ap pointing the member of the legislative assembly, and he shall act as the presiding officer of the meeting."

"43-216. Alternative method of selection-failure of one candidate to receive majority vote, In the event that a decision cannot be made by the appointing board because of failure of any candidate to receive a majority of the votes, the final decision may be made by lot from a number of candidates, not exceeding the number of counties comprising the district, in accordance with rules of selection adopted by the appointing board."

Section 7. (1) It shall be the duty of the delegates elected to assemble in the chambers of the house of representatives in the state capitol building in the city of Helena at 10:00 a.m. on November 29, 1971, for an organizational meeting of no longer than three (3) days duration.

(2) This meeting shall be for the purpose of electing permanent convention officers, adopting rules of procedure, and providing for such interim committees and staff members as may be necessary to prepare for the plenary meeting of the convention.

(3) Until the convention has adopted rules of procedure, "Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure" shall govern the procedure of the convention. A majority of the whole number of delegates to the convention shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day. The convention may compel the attendance of its members.

(4) The governor shall call the first meeting of the constitutional convention to order and shall preside until a temporary president is elected. The governor shall:

(a) call the roll of the members-elect, (as shown by the official election returns on file in the office of the secretary of state);

(b) cause the oath called for by this act to be administered to those members-elect who are present;

(c) call for nominations of convention members for the office of temporary president;

(d) cause the roll of members to be called for the purpose of voting for temporary president, and

(e) declare to be elected the person receiving a plurality of votes cast for the office of temporary president.

(5) The temporary president shall then assume the duties of the presiding officer, and the convention shall proceed to the election of a president from within its membership in like manner as the temporary president was elected except that a majority of the votes cast is required to elect the president of the convention. The convention shall then proceed to elect one of its members as vice-president of the convention to preside in the absence of the president.

(6) It shall be the duty of the delegates elected to assemble in plenary session in the chambers of the house of representatives in the state capitol building in the city of Helena at 10:00 a.m. on January 17, 1972. The convention, which may recess from time to time, shall then remain in session as long as necessary.

Section 8. In going to and returning from the convention and during its sessions, the members shall in all cases, except treason, felony or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest; and they shall not be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in the convention.

Section 9. The convention may select and employ such employees as it may deem necessary to the efficient conduct of its business, each of whom shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by the convention. The convention may make such other expenditures as it deems proper to carry out its work, but shall not authorize total expenditures in excess of the amount appropriated by law for its expenses.

Section 10. (1) The convention shall determine the rules of its procedure, and be the judge of the election, returns and qualifications of its members. The convention shall keep a verbatim journal of its proceedings and a transcript of its debates. Each committee of the convention shall keep a record of its proceedings and reports. The convention may also provide for the publication of any of its other documents and reports.

(2) The verbatim journal of its proceedings, the transcript of the debates of the convention, and the committee reports and proceedings shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state.

Section 11. (1) It shall be the duty of all public officers and employees to furnish the convention with any and all statements, papers, books, records and public documents that the convention requires on request of the convention or its committees, and appear before the convention or any committee thereof. The convention, and its committees, may compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, records and documents. Oaths may be administered by the president or any other officer of the convention. Subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum may be issued over the signature of the president or any other officer of the convention, and may be served by any adult person designated by the issuing officer.

(2) Any district court judge, upon application of the convention, may compel the attendance of witnesses, the production of books, records or documents, and the giving of testimony before the convention by an attachment for contempt or otherwise in the same manner as production of evidence, not privileged by law, may be compelled before the court.

Section 12. (1) The convention may use the facilities of the state, municipal or county government when such use is not disruptive of regular governmental activities.

(2) State, municipal and county officers and employees, at the request of the convention and with the consent of the employing agency, may be granted leave with or without pay from their agency to serve as consultants to the constitutional convention. If leave with pay is granted they shall receive no other compensation, except mileage and per diem, from the convention.

Section 13. The convention may also prepare a schedule of proposed legislation for submission to the 1973 legislative assembly that will complement the proposed revisions, alterations or amendments.

Section 14. The convention shall prepare a schedule of transitional provisions and fix the date or dates upon which revisions, alterations or amendments, if adopted by the voters, take effect.

Section 15. (1) Sections 43-801 to 43-808, R.C.M., 1947 providing for the licensing of legislative lobbyists shall apply to lobbying at the constitutional convention.

(2) Licensed lobbyists shall file with the secretary of state a report on February 1, 1972; February 15, 1972; March 1, 1972; March 15, 1972; April 1, 1972; June 14, 1972. The report, under oath, must include all expenditures made by him relative to promoting or opposing constitutional provisions. On the fifth day a report is delinquent, the secretary of state shall suspend the license of any licensed lobbyist who fails to file a report until such report is filed. The suspension shall be entered on the docket, and the president of the convention notified.

(3) Reports must be filed even though no expenditure may have been made.

(4) Reports need not include:

(a) reasonable internal expenditures such as office expenses, mailing and routine research; and

(b) reasonable expenditures for his personal food, lodging and travel.

(5) Expenditures of twenty-five dollars ($25) or less may be reported in total amounts rather than in detail.

(6) A lobbyist who terminates his duties shall give the secretary of state, within thirty (30) days after the date of such termination, written notice and shall include a report of his expenditures covering the period of time since his last report. Such reports shall be final.

(7) The secretary of state shall provide forms and shall keep such reports on file for three (3) years. All records are to be open to the public.

(8) Failure to file reports or the filing of incomplete information is a violation of section 43.808, R.C.M., 1947.

Section 16. (1) For each day of the organizational plenary and signing sessions of the convention, members of the convention shall be paid the same per diem, and expenses as provided in section 43-310, R.C.M., 1947, for members of the legislative assembly.

(2) The president and vice-president of the convention shall be paid the same per diem, and expenses as the president of the senate and speaker of the house ofrepresentatives as provided in section 43-311, R.C.M., 1947.

(3) Members and officers shall be entitled to mileage for three (3) trips to and from their residences and Helena by the nearest traveled route at the rate provided for the legislative assembly in section 43-310, R.C.M., 1947.

(4) Officers and employees of the state and its political subdivisions who are not prohibited by the Montana Constitution or laws of Montana from serving as delegates and who are elected and serve as delegates to the convention shall have leave, without pay, from their employment during the time the convention is in session, and they shall be entitled to the per diem, expenses and mileage for delegates as provided in this section.

Section 17. (1) The revision or alteration of, or the amendments to the constitution, adopted by the convention, shall be submitted to the electors of this state for ratification or rejection, at an election appointed by the convention for that purpose, not less than two (2) months nor more than six (6) months after the adjournment of the convention.

(2) The convention may submit proposals to the electorate for ratification in any of the following forms:

(a) submitted as a unit in the form of a new constitution;

(b) submitted as a unit with the exception of separate proposals to be voted upon individually, or

(c) submitted in the form of a series of separate amendments.

(3) The proposals adopted by the convention shall be certified by the president and secretary of the convention to the secretary of state.

(4) Each proposed revision, alteration, or amendment, together with appropriate information explaining each revision, alteration, or amendment, shall be published in full and disseminated to the electors upon adjournment of the convention but not later than thirty (30) days preceding the election and in such manner as the convention prescribes.

(5) The convention shall also publish a report to the people explaining its proposals.

(6) Notice of the election shall be given in the manner and form prescribed by the convention.

(7) The convention shall prescribe the manner and form of voting at such election.

(8) The votes cast at such election shall be tabulated, returned and canvassed in such manner as may be directed by the convention.

(9) If a majority of the electors voting at the special election shall vote for the proposals of the convention the governor shall by his proclamation declare the proposals to have been adopted by the people of Montana. The new constitutional provisions shall take effect as provided therein, or as provided in a schedule of transitional provisions atached thereto.

(10) The election laws of the state of Montana shall apply in all other respects to the election conducted under this section.

Section 18. Every person who, at the time of holding of the elections provided for in this act, is a qualified voter under the constitution and laws of this state shall be entitled to vote in such election.

Section 19. All state and local officials shall do all those things which are appropriate to the holding of each of the special elections provided for in this act and which are required under the general election laws.

Section 20. (1) A temporary state agency known as the Montana constitutional convention commission consisting of sixteen (16) members is hereby created to prepare for the constitutional convention. Legislators whose terms of office have not expired shall not be appointed to the commission. Members of the commission shall be appointed for a term ending upon sine die adjournment of the constitutional convention, consideration being given to geographic, economic, and other pertinent factors as follows:

(a) four (4) members appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives, no more than two (2) of whom shall be affiliated with the same political party;

(b) four (4) members appointed by the committee on committees of the senate, no more than two (2) of whom shall be affiliated with the same political party;

(c) four (4) members appointed by the governor, no more than two (2) of whom shall be affiliated with the same political party;

(d) four (4) members appointed by the supreme court, no more than two (2) of whom shall be affiliated with the same political party.

(2) Commission members shall be reimbursed for actual and necessary expenses incurred as commission members.

(3) Vacancies in the membership of the commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointments, except when the legislature is not in session a vacancy among members appointed by the Speaker of the House and the committee on Committees of the Senate may be filled by selection of another member by the remaining members of commission.

(4) The commission shall select from its membership a chairman and any other officers it considers necessary.

(5) The commission may employ and fix the compensation and duties of necessary staff.

(6) State, municpal and county officers and employees, at the request of the commission and with the consent of the employing agency, may be granted leave with or without pay from their agency to serve as consultants to the constitutional convention commission. CHAPTER I
GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule 1 - Quorum and Majority

A majority of Delegates, as hereinafter defined, shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but a smaller number may adjourn the Convention from day to day and may also compel the attendance of absent Delegates by the means approved by a majority, but not less than twelve (12) of the Delegates present and voting. A majority of Delegates may prescribe penalties for the nonattendance of Delegates.

When a quorum is obtained, the affirmative vote of a majority of the Delegates present and voting is sufficient for the adoption of any motion or resolution or the taking of any action by the Convention or the Committee of the Whole except that under order of business No. 5 and No. 6 and as otherwise specified in these rules an affirmative vote will require the majority of the elected Delegates for which no vacancy exists by resignation, expulsion under Rule 19, or death.

Rule 2 - Seat of Convention

The House of Representatives chambers in the State Capitol in the City of Helena, Montana, the foyer to said chambers and the south Senate lobby is designated "Convention Hall" and shall be the seat of the Convention. Sessions and hearings of the standing committees of the Convention may be held throughout the state as provided in Rule 42 of these rules.

Rule 3 - Sessions of the Convention

All sessions of this Convention and all meetings of its committees shall be open to the public and the news media.

Rule 4 - Admission to Floor - Defined

Only Delegates, officers, employees, members of the news media, and such other persons as may be authorized by the President shall be admitted to the Convention hall one-half (½) hour prior to the commencement of the session, during the session, and within one-half (½) hour after adjournment.

CHAPTER II
OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

Rule 5 - Officers of the Convention

There shall be elected from the delegates, by majority vote, the following permanent officers: a President, a First Vice President, two additional Vice Presidents, one from each Congressional District, and a Secretary.

The President shall nominate an Executive Director, whose nomination shall be ratified by the Convention and who shall be subject to removal by the Convention. The salary of the Executive Director shall be established by resolution of the Convention

Rule 6 - Duties of the President

The President shall preside at sessions of the Convention and of the Committee of the Whole, and exercise the usual powers and perform the usual duties of a presiding officer. He shall preserve order and decorum and fairly assign floor rights. He may speak to points of order and, subject to an appeal to the Convention or to the Committee of the Whole, shall decide points of order.

The President shall be chief executive of the Convention, and all other officers and employees shall be responsible to his general supervision.

Together with the Secretary of the Convention, he shall authenticate by signature all proposals, resolutions or other formal acts adopted by the Convention.

He shall cause to be prepared and furnished to each delegate a daily calendar and agenda of business for each session of the Convention.

He shall, with the advice of the Committee on Administration, prepare a budget and submit it to the Convention for its approval on or before January 21, 1972. Every two weeks thereafter, he shall submit to the Convention a report of the expenditures of the Convention for the preceding two weeks.

He shall, with the advice of the Committee on Administration, let bids and award contracts for materials and services.

He may vote in all elections, on all decisions called for by any delegate, and on all questions taken by ayes and nays, except that the President may not vote twice, once to cause a tie vote and then again to break it.

He may appoint any Delegate to preside temporarily at any session of the Convention or any Committee of the Whole, but not for longer than one day at a time without leave of the Convention.

Rule 7 - Duties of the Vice Presidents

The First Vice President shall have such duties as the President may assign, and shall preside as President in case of the sickness or absence of the President, or in case of a vacancy in the office of President. The two additional Vice Presidents shall have such duties as shall be assigned by the President: neither shall have the right of succession.

Rule 8 - Duties of the Secretary

The Secretary shall have custody and preserve all proposals, resolutions, committee reports and all other records, books, documents and papers of the Convention. He shall not permit them to be taken out of his custody except in the regular course of the business of the Convention.

He shall certify and deliver to the Secretary of State the revisions, alterations or amendments to the Constitution as approved by the Convention for submission to the electorate.

The Secretary shall keep a journal of the proceedings of the Convention in conformity with the rules, supervise the daily publication thereof, and make such corrections as may be necessary. He shall furnish each Delegate a copy of the proceedings of the previous day. The journal shall be considered the approved journal of the Convention, unless otherwise ordered thereby. The Convention Reporter shall keep a verbatim record of Convention proceedings and shall, within the time prescribed by the Convention, provide a verbatim transcript of all proceedings had in Convention, sessions and the sessions of the Committee of the Whole.

He shall have such other duties as stipulated in these rules, but, after consultation with the President, he may delegate part of these duties to the Executive Director or another employee designated by the President. He may not, however, delegate the duty of certifying the revisions, alterations or amendments to the Constitution approved by the Convention for submission to the electorate.

Rule 9 - Duties of the Executive Director

The Executive Director of the Convention shall be primarily responsible for the administration of the Convention under the authority and supervision of the President.

Rule 10 - Vacancies

If a permanent vacancy occurs in both the offices of President and First Vice President, the Secretary shall temporarily preside until the Convention elects a President and First Vice President to fill the office in the same manner in which the officers were first elected.

If a permanent vacancy occurs in the office of any of the other Vice Presidents or in the office of the Secretary, the President shall appoint a member to exercise the powers of that vacant office until the Convention fills the vacancy in the same manner in which the officer was first elected.

Rule 11 - Employees of the Convention

The Committee on Administration, after consultation with the President, shall appoint such employees as may be necessary for the effective operation of the Convention. The titles of their positions and their salaries shall be established by the Convention.

CHAPTER III
DELEGATES

Rule 12 - Assignment of Seats

The permanent seats of the Delegates shall be assigned by the President in the following order: alphabetically from left to right while facing the Chair and from the front to the rear. Variations in this seating may be authorized by the President for the officers of the Convention. If a vacancy occurs, the person selected to fill the vacancy shall continue to have the seat of the Delegate who vacated the position.

Rule 13 - Conduct in Debate - Questions of Privilege

When any Delegate is about to speak in debate or to present any matter to the Convention, he shall rise from his seat and address himself to "Mr. President" except when in the Committee of the Whole and then to "Mr. Chairman"; he shall not speak until recognized, and when recognized he shall confine himself to the question under consideration and avoid personalities and offensive language, Questions of privilege shall be governed by Chapter 23 of Mason's Legislative Manual.

Rule 14 - Delegates Called to Order

The President or any Delegate may challenge any other Delegate who, in speaking, violates the rules of the Convention. Upon such challenge, the President may order the speaker to sit down. The President's order to sit down, or the failure of the President to order the speaker to sit down may be appealed.

Rule 15. - Dissent of Delegates

Any two or more Delegates shall have the liberty to dissent from and protest in respectful language against any action or resolution relating to the Convention which they thinkinjurious to the public or to any individual, and. have the reasons for their dissent entered upon the Journal.

Rule 16 - Times a Delegate May Speak

Except as provided by Rule 28, no Delegate may speak more than once on the same question without leave of a majority of those present and voting unless he be the mover of the matter pending or Chairman of the committee that reported it, in which case he shall be privileged to speak twice.

Rule 17 - General Limit on Debate

No Delegate shall speak longer than ten minutes at any one time, nor more than once on the same question, except by leave of the Convention; except that the Delegate handling a proposal shall have the right to speak no longer than five minutes to close debate, even if the previous question has been ordered and even if he has spoken once before on the issue. The restriction imposed by this rule shall not be applicable to Chairmen and vice Chairmen of committees when the latter are presenting a report of their committee to the Convention or to the Committee of the Whole, and the same exemption from the requirement of this rule shall also be applicable in the case of the chief spokesman for a minority report of a committee of the Convention. Any Delegate shall have one minute to explain his vote on any roll call vote on proposals or amendments to proposals anytime prior to the closing of the vote on the question.

Rule 18 - Absence of Delegates

No Delegate shall absent himself from the sessions of the Convention unless he have leave or be sick, or his absence be unavoidable.

Rule 19 - Contemptuous Behavior of Delegates

Any Delegate who persists in disorderly conduct after being warned by the President or Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, that he is out of order, may, by motion duly made and carried by a two-third's majority of the Delegates elected, be held in contempt and be required to purge himself of such misconduct; and until such Delegate has purged himself, he shall not be entitled to the privileges of the floor.

Rule 20 - Disclosure of Personal Interest

Any Delegate who has a significant personal or private interest, economic or otherwise, in a matter before the Convention shall disclose this interest to the Convention.

Rule 21 - Vacancies

Vacancies occuring in the Convention shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the legislative assembly as provided in Sections 43-215 and 43-216, R.C.M., 1947.

Rule 22 - Compensation of Delegates

For each day of the organization, plenary and signing sessions of the Convention, Delegates shall be paid the same per diem and expenses as provided in Section 43-310, R.C.M., 1947, for members of the legislative assembly. Delegates shall be entitled to mileage for three trips to and from their residences and Helena by the nearest traveled route at the rate provided for the legislative assembly in Section 43-310, R.C.M., 1947.

The President and First Vice President shall be paid the same per diem and expenses as the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives, as provided in Section 43-311, R.C.M., 1947.

CHAPTER IV
COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Rule 23 - Committee of the Whole

All proposals reported by any Substantive Committee of the Convention shall be referred to the Committee of the Whole and become general orders to be placed upon the calendar and agenda of the Committee of the Whole by the President. No committee proposal shall be considered by the Committee of the Whole until forty-eight (48) hours after the duplicated committee proposal has been placed on the Delegates' desks, unless the Convention agrees to its earlier consideration. No committee proposal shall be placed on the Delegates' desks until after it has been reported to the Convention under Order of Business No. 1.

Rule 24 - Consideration of Proposals

When the Convention reaches consideration of general orders of the day, it shall resolve itself into Committee of the Whole. General orders shall be considered as follows: first, in order of referral, proposals of the Committee on Style; second, in order of referral, proposals of Substantive Committees. The Committee of the Whole may consider a particular proposal out of turn. No recorded roll call vote shall be taken, except upon the demand of five (5) Delegates.

Rule 25 - Amendments in Committee of the Whole

Every motion or amendment shall be reduced to writing if the President or any Delegate shall request it, and shall be entered upon the Journal, together with the name of the Delegate making it, unless the motion is withdrawn by the maker or is ruled out of order by the Chairman,

Rule 26 - Motion that Committee of the Whole Rise

A motion that the Committee of the Whole rise and report progress shall always be in order unless a member of the Committee is speaking or a vote is being taken, and such motion shall be decided without debate by a vote of a majority of those present and voting; and provided further, when the Committee of the Whole again sits, the subject under consideration prior to the motion to rise and report progress shall again be resumed.

Rule 27 - Reconsideration

A motion to reconsider shall be in order in the Committee of the Whole by a majority vote of those present and voting, before the Committee shall rise and finally report. A motion to reconsider shall not be renewed.

Rule 28 - Application of Convention Rules

The rules of the Convention shall be observed in the Committee of the Whole so far as they may be applicable except that:, the Committee of the Whole cannot adjourn the Convention; the previous question shall not be ordered; a majority vote is necessary to approve a proposal; the Committee may rerefer any proposal back to the Substantive Committee from which it came or may refer it to any other Substantive Committee; and a motion to postpone indefinitely or a motion to table or for a Call of the Convention shall not be in order. A member may speak more than once in the Committee of the Whole. A journal of its proceedings and a verbatim transcript of its debates shall be kept by the Committee of the Whole.

Rule 29 - Limitation of Debate

Before a proposal is taken up by the Committee of the Whole, any Delegate shall be privileged to move that a limitation be placed upon the time ofthc debate and consideration of such proposal by the Committee of the Whole, provided that equal time is to be afforded to the proponents and the opponents of such proposal, and the Committee may fix in advance of consideration of a proposal or proposals a time for Committee to rise and report progress.

CHAPTER V COMMITTEES

Rule 30 - Substantive Standing Committees

The Substantive Standing Committees are:

Bill of Rights Legislative Executive Judiciary
Local Government
Revenue and Finance
Education and Public Lands
Public Health, Welfare, Labor and Industry
Natural Resources and Agriculture

Rule 31 - Procedural Standing Committees

The Procedural Standing Committees are:

Administration
Public Information
Rules and Resolutions (Rules)
Style, Drafting, Transition and Submission (Style)

Rule 32 - President Ex Officio Member of All Standing Committees

The President shall be an ex officio member of all standing, Substantive, and Procedural Committees, but shall not vote except to break a tie and shall not he counted for the purpose of determining a quorum.

Rule 33 - Select Committees

The President may on his own initiative or at the direction of the Convention appoint such select committees as may he necessary to perform special functions.

Rule 34 - Appointment of Committee Members

The President, after consultation with the Vice Presidents shall appoint the committee members, but any appointment, on the announcement thereof, may berejected by a majority of the members of the Convention prior to adjournment on January 19, 1972. Each member, except the President, shall be appointed to serve on one Substantive Standing Committee.

Rule 35 - Appointment of Committee Chairmen and Vice Chairmen

The President, after consultation with the Vice Presidents, shall designate the Chairman and Vice Chairman of every committee, and his designees shall be subject to the approval by a majority of the members of the Convention. In case of a vacancy or the prolonged absence of the Chairman and Vice Chairman, the President of the Convention shall appoint a Chairman to act until the Chairman or Vice Chairman shall return. The Vice Chairman shall perform all of the duties and functions of the Chairman in the absence of the Chairman. Committee Chairman and vice Chairman shall vote on all items before the Committee the same as other Delegates.

Rule 36 - Quorum and Rules of Committees

A majority of any Committee constitutes a quorum, hut the question of the presence of a quorum of a Committee may not he raised on the consideration of a proposal before the Convention, unless the question has been raised before the Committee. The rules of the Convention shall be observed in all Committees as far as may be applicable, and, if applicable, may not be suspended.

Rule 37 - Calling of Committees and Agenda

Each Committee shall meet at the call of its Chairman, who shall also set its agenda, with the advice and consent of the Committee. Any three (3) members of a Committee may in writing request the Chairman to call a meeting of that Committee, and upon his failure to do so within forty-eight (48) hours not including "onsession days and legal holidays, a majority of the members of the Committee shall have the right to call a meeting of the Committee and set its agenda and place of meeting under the appropriate notice requirements. Each Delegate proposal referred to a Committee must appear on the Committee's Agenda at least once, but the Committee shall not be required to report to the Convention thereon except as provided in Rule 41.

Rule 38 - Notice of Committee Hearings

No Substantive Committee hearings may be held unless notice thereof is posted in the following manner: the Secretary of the Convention shall be furnished a" original and three (3) copies of a written notice, signed by the Chairman or members of the Committee calling the hearing. The notice shall state the date, hour, and the place of the proposed hearing and the proposal number or subject matter to be considered. The Secretary shall post one copy thereof on a designated bulletin board with an endorsement thereon of the hour and date of the posting, which may not be less than 3 days before the time of the hearing. The original notice shall be retained by the Secretary. The other copies shall be returned to the Chairman of the Committee and the Public Information Director with the endorsement of the Secretary. The Substantive Committee Secretary shall deliver a copy of the notice to all members of the Committee and to all members of the Convention who have introduced proposals on the subject matter to be considered.

Each Substantive Committee shall hold a public hearing at which time citizens of Montana will be invited to appear and testify, and file statements containing their testimony and views, upon any and all phases of the proposed constitution being considered by such Committee. Such witnesses may be questioned by Committee members to better elucidate their testimony, All Delegates to the Convention, not members of the Committee conducting the hearing, may attend the hearing as auditors, to better inform themselves of the Committee's progress.

The Substantive Committees will hold their hearings, designed to secure state-wide participation in deliberations on the Constitution, in a series at times fixed by the President of the Convention. The President will make such announcement and invitation via the news media so that Montana citizens "ear and far will have no less than five (5) days' notice so they may be able to avail themselves of a" opportunity to appear, testify and participate.

These state-wide general hearings will in no way inhibit Standing Committees to follow up with additional hearings of special character as provided elsewhere in this rule.

Rule 39 - Sitting of Committees During Sessions of the Convention

No Committee shall sit during the sessions of the Convention or of the Committee of the Whole, without having first obtained special leave of the Convention.

Rule 40 - Subcommittees

A Committee, by the affirmative vote of a majority of its members, may provide for the appointment by the Committee Chairman of subcommittees composed ofmembers ofthe committee. Reports of subcommittees shall be considered by the entire Committee before the Committee recommends any action thereon by the Convention. All rules applicable to Committees shall be applicable to subcommittees.

Rule 41 - Committee Proposals

The affirmative vote of a majority of the members of a Committee shall be necessary to report a proposal out of Committee. A Committee by a majority of its members may submit alternative proposals to the Convention and may report proposals with or without a recommendation for action. The proposal of a minority of at least twenty-five percent (25%) of the members of any Committee shall be received, duplicated in the same manner as the majority proposal, and treated as a" amendment or substitute offered to or for the report of the committee if offered as such on the floor.

All proposals reported by a Committee to the Convention shall be reported as Committee proposals and shall be referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Rule 42 - Committee Meetings and Hearings

All Committee and subcommittee meetings and hearings shall be open to the public and the news media. Committees and subcommittees shall hold meetings at which action may be taken on proposals in the city of Helena or any other place which may be temporarily the seat of the Convention, and, upon the affirmative vote of a majority of the members of the Committee and after consultation with and approval by the President, may hold hearings at any other place in the state. Committees and subcommittees may take testimony under oath of affirmation. The Chairman of a Committee or subcommittees may request the President of the Convention to subpoena documents and witneses. A witness shall have the right to be represented by counsel of his own choosing. A recorded roll call vote on any matter on the agenda of a Committee and on which a vote is to be taken shall be taken on demand of any member of the Committee. A Committee, after consultation with and approval by the President, may direct that a verbatim record be kept of any portion of its proceedings.

Committees may meet jointly with the consent of their respective Chairmen, and the consent of the President.

Rule 43 - Consideration of Proposals Without Committee Recommendation

After one day's notice the Convention, on motion passed by the affirmative vote of a majority of members, may require a Committee to return, with or without a recommendation, any proposal referred to the Committee.

Rule 44 - Last Day for Committee Proposals

The Committee of the Whole will receive no final proposal of a Substantive Committee after the deadline established under Rule 79.

Rule 45 - Power to Incur Expenses

No Delegate or Committee shall incur any expense chargeable to the Convention unless such expense is approved by the President or is authorized by resolution of the Convention. No motion or resolution calling for an expenditure of money shall be acted upon by the Convention without first being referred to the Administration Committee for consideration and recommendation.

CHAPTER VI
DELEGATE PROPOSALS, RESOLUTIONS AND CITIZEN SUGGESTIONS

Rule 46 - Proposals - Introduction

Any suggestion, proposition or draft intended to become a part of any revised constitution or amendment or alteration of the existing constitution which is introduced by one or more Delegates shall be called a Delegate Proposal. A Delegate Proposal shall be endorsed by the Delegate or Delegates introducing it. No Delegate Proposal may be introduced later than the deadline established under Rule 79. When a Delegate Proposal is introduced it shall be referred by the President to the proper Standing Committee, except when he refers it to the Committee on Rules and Resolutions to determine whether its content is on the appropriate order of business. By vote of at least one-third (1/3) of the Committee on Rules and Resolutions any proposal shall be referred to a Standing Committee.

Where a proposal embraces subject matter which falls within the proper consideration of several Committees, the President, where practicable, shall divide the proposal and refer the parts to the appropriate committees; if it is not subject to such division, the President shall refer it to an appropriate Committee with instructions to consult with other Committees on related matters.

Rule 47 - Forms

The Executive Director, under the supervision of the President, shall prepare forms in accordance with these rules for Delegate Proposals, Citizen Suggestions, Resolutions and Committee Proposals.

The Delegate Proposals shall be reproduced or duplicated. The original of all proposals shall remain in the custody of the Convention. The Secretary shall, as soon as any proposal is reproduced or duplicated, place it on the desks of the Delegates.

All proposals must be approved as to form by some person or agency designated by the President before being introduced or submitted.

Any Delegate Proposal which does not comply with the provisions of these rules as to form shall be referred to the appropriate Committee as a Citizen Suggestion.

Rule 48 - Resolutions

Resolutions may be introduced by Delegates or Committees.

Delegate resolutions shall be given to the Secretary, assigned a number and referred to the appropriate Committee by the President.

After consideration, the Committee shall report the resolution to the Convention with or without recommendation and the resolution shall be considered under Order of Business No. 1.

If the rules are suspended for early consideration the Secretary shall read the resolution and it shall be considered under Order of Business No. 7.

Committee resolutions shall be read by the Secretary under Order of Business No. 7 and considered under Order of Business No. 7.

No recorded roll call vote shall be taken under the consideration of resolutions.

Rule 49 - Citizen Suggestions

Any subject matter presented to the constitution suggested by a non-delegate shall be called a citizen suggestion.

Citizen suggestions shall be given a number by the Secretary and the original shall be referred by the President to the appropriate Committee for consideration but need not be placed on the agenda of the Committee.

Before the Convention adjourns sine die, the original shall be returned to the Convention secretary.

Rule 50 - Present Constitution - Referral

The President shall refer each section of the present Montana Constitution to the appropriate Committees.

Rule 51 - Order of Consideration of Proposals

The prescribed order in which proposals introduced in the Convention are to be considered shall be as follows:

Introduction. Delegate proposals shall be filed with the Secretary.

Delegate proposals shall be assigned a number by the Clerk, referred to the appropriate Committee by the President, duplicated and distributed to the Delegates.

Standing Committee Consideration. Standing Committees shall consider all Delegate Proposals referred to the Committee, prepare Committee Proposals, report Committee Proposals under Order of Business No. 1; Committee Proposals will be received by the Convention without a debate or vote. The President shall refer all Committee Proposals to the Committee of the Whole. The Committee Proposal shall be duplicated and distributed to the Delegates. Minority Committee Proposals signed by twenty-five percent (25%) of any Committee will be duplicated and referred to to the Committee of the Whole.

Committee of the Whole Consideration. Committee Proposals will be considered, debated and amended by the Committee of the Whole in order of reference and placed on General Orders of the Day.

The Committee of the Whole shall debate and adopt by section the Committee Proposal.

The Committee of the Whole shall report to the Convention under Order of Business No. 7 and refer the proposed Article to the Committee on Style. A motion to segregate a report of the Committee of the Whole shall not be in order.

Consideration and Report of the Committee on Style -Articles. The Committee on Style shall make only changes as to style, form and grammar. The report of the Committee on Style on each Article shall be made on Order of Business No. 1. The report shall be received by the Convention without debate or vote and the President shall refer the report to the Committee of the Whole. The report shall be duplicated and distributed to the Delegates.

Committee of the Whole Consideration of the Report of the Committee on Style. The report of the Committee on Style shall be considered, debated and amended by the Committee of the Whole section by section as to style, form and grammar. The report of the Committee of the Whole shall be referred to Order of Business No. 5 for final consideration.

Final Consideration of Articles. The Convention shall finally consider individual Articles at Order of Business No. 5, Section by Section, by a majority of elected Delegates and refer said Articles to the Committee on Style for incorporation in the proposed Constitution.

Consideration and Report of the Committee on Style of Proposed Constitution and Ballot. The Committee on Style shall prepare for submission to the electorate the proposals of the Convention and a ballot. The report of the Committee on Style on its proposals shall be made on Order of Business No. 1 and shall be received by the Convention without debate or vote and the President shall refer the report to the Committee of the Whole. The report shall be duplicated and distributed to the Delegates.

Committee of the Whole Consideration of Proposed Constitution and Ballot. The proposal on the Committee on Style shall be considered only as to the form of the proposed constitution and the form and the style of ballot. The report of the Committee of the Whole shall be referred to Order of Business No. 6. The vote on Order of Business No. 6 shall be without debate and be a recorded roll call vote of the Delegates.

Enrolling. The President shall direct the enrolling of the final proposal or proposals of the Convention.

Signing of the Constitution. The enrolled copy shall be signed by the President, attested by the Secretary and then signed by the other Delegates in alphabetical order.

Rule 52 - Required Vote on Final Consideration and Adoption

On final consideration of committee proposals, a roll call vote shall be taken section by section and entered in the journal.

On Adoption of the proposed constitution and ballot, a roll call vote shall be taken on the proposed constitution and on the ballot, and shall be entered in the Journal.

Rule 53 - Unfinished Special Orders

Any subject matter which has been made a special order for a particular day, but which is not reached on that day, shall then come up for consideration under the order of "unfinished business" at the next succeeding session of the Convention.

CHAPTER VII
TRANSACTION OF BUSINESS

Rule 54 - Order of Business

AFTER CALL TO ORDER, INVOCATION AND ROLL CALL the order of business of the Convention shall be as follows:

1. Reports of Standing Committees
2. Reports of select Committees
3. Communications
4. Introduction and reference of Delegate Proposals
5. Final consideration of Proposals
6. Adoption of proposed constitution and ballot
7. Motions and resolutions
8. Unfinished business
9. Special orders of the day
10. General Orders of the Day (Committee of the Whole)
11. Committee announcements and notices

To revert to or pass to a new Order of Business requires only a majority vote. Unless otherwise specified in the motion to recess, the Convention shall revert to Order of Business No. 1 when reconvening after a recess.

Rule 55 - Roll Call

The Secretary shall call the roll at the opening of each session of the Convention and the President shall announce whether a quorum is present. The President shall announce, and the Secretary shall enter in the Journal, the names of the Delegates absent with leave of the Convention, and the names of the Delegates absent without such leave. Vote by machine may be taken whenever a roll call or a vote by ayes and nays is directed by or in accordance with these rules.

Rule 56 - Petitions - Entered in Journal

No memorial, remonstrance, or petition shall be read or be entered in full in the Journal, unless ordered read or entered in the Journal by the Convention.

Rule 57 - Motions

When a motion is made, it shall be stated by the President; or, if in writing, it shall be handed to the clerk and read aloud to the Convention before being debated.

Rule 58 - Reduced to Writing

Every motion or amendment shall be reduced to writing if the President or any Delegate shall request it, and shall be entered upon the Journal, together with the name of the Delegate making it, unless the motion is withdrawn by the maker or is ruled out of order by the President.

Rule 59 - Withdrawal of Motions

After a motion has been stated by the President or read by the Secretary, it shall be deemed to be in the possession of the Convention, but it may be withdrawn by the Delegate at any time before being amended or put to vote.

Rule 60 - Privileged Motions

When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received except —

1. To fix the time to which to adjourn
2. To adjourn
3. To take a recess
4. To reconsider
5. To lay on the table
6. For a Call of the Convention
1. To move the previous question
8. To limit debate
9. To postpone to a day certain
10. To commit
11. To amend
12. To postpone indefinitely.

The motions listed in this rule shall take precedence in the order which they stand arranged. All of them shall be decided by the affirmative vote of a majority of those present and voting, except that a motion for the previous question requires the affirmative vote of two-thirds of those present and voting and a motion to postpone indefinitely requires the affirmative vote of a majority of elected Delegates. When a recess is taken while a question ispending, consideration of such question shall be resumed when the Convention reassembles, unless it determines otherwise. No motion to postpone to a day certain, or to commit, having been decided by the Convention, shall again be in order on the same day or at the same stage of the question. Whenever a proposal is being considered and a motion is then made, either to postpone indefinitely or to commit, amendments to the pending proposal shall first be in order before any vote is taken on any such motion.

Rule 61 - Motions not Debatable

A motion to adjourn is always in order except when a motion to fix the time to which to adjourn, or a motion to amend the calendar and agenda, is pending. A motion to adjourn, a motion to lay on the table, a motion for recess pending the consideration of other business and all matters relating to questions of order, shall be decided without debate.

Rule 62 - Order of Putting Questions

All questions shall be put in the order in which they are moved, except in the case of privileged motions.

Rule 63 - Amendments must be Germane

No motion or proposition relating to a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of an amendment or substitute.

Rule 64 - Division of Question

Any Delegate may call for a division of the question, which shall be divided if it includes propositions which are so distinct in substance that when one is removed or deferred, a substantive proposition remains for the decision of the Convention. A motion to strike out and insert shall not be subject to division within the meaning of this rule.

Rule 65 - Previous Question

The method of ordering the previous question (which shall not be made in the Committee of the Whole) shall be as follows: Any Delegate may move the previous question and, unless otherwise stated, the motion shall apply to the immediately pending question only. The presiding officer shall put the question, "Shall the main question now be put?" This shall be ordered only by the affirmative vote of two-thirds (2/3) of the Delegates present and voting. Prior to the ordering of the same, a Call of the Convention may be moved and ordered, but after ordering the previous question nothing shall be in order prior to the decision of the pending question or questions, except demands for the ayes and nays, points of order, appeals from the decision of the Chair, and a motion to adjourn or to take a recess, all of which shall be decided without debate. The effect of ordering the previous question is to put an end to all debate and bring the Convention to a direct vote upon the immediately pending question, and such other pending questions as were specified in the motion in their order down to and including the main question; provided however, that when the previous question is ordered, amendments then on the Secretary's desk shall be acted upon. When a motion to reconsider has been taken under the previous question and decided in the affirmative, the fact that the previous question had been ordered shall have no operation or effect with respect to the question for which reconsideration has been ordered. If the Convention refuses to order the previous question, it shall resume consideration of the pending subject as though no motion for the previous question had been made.

Rule 66 - Motion for Reconsideration

Any Delegate who voted on the prevailing side may move for a reconsideration of any question at the same session day of the Convention or may give notice that he will make such a motion not later than the next succeeding session day. If the Delegate who gave the notice does not make the motion at the next succeeding session day, any Delegate may do so. The Committee on Style may move for reconsideration on any subsequent day if one session day's notice of its intention to do so is given in writing to the Secretary and entered upon the Journal. A motion to reconsider shall take precedence over all other questions, except a motion to fix the time to which to adjourn, a motion to adjourn and a motion to recess. A motion to reconsider shall not be renewed.

Rule 67 - Ordering Calls of the Convention

Calls of the Convention may be ordered upon motion by the affirmative vote of a majority of the Delegates present and voting, but the total vote in favor of such Call shall not be less than twelve (12).

Rule 68 - Procedure on Call of Convention

After a Call of the Convention is ordered the doors shall be closed and the Delegates shall not be permitted to leave the floor of the Convention without permission of the President of the Convention. The Sergeant at Arms shall notify all members within the bar of the Convention of the Call. The roll of the Convention shall be called and the absentees noted. The Sergeant at Arms may, upon motion, be dispatched after the absentees. In such case, a list of the absentees shall be furnished by the Secretary to the Sergeant at Arms, who shall bring such absentees to the floor of the Convention with all possible speed. In case the Sergeant of Arms requires assistance in addition to the regularly appointed assistant Sergeants at Arms of the Convention, the President, upon motion, may deputize as a special assistant Sergeant at Arms any person properly qualified. The Convention may proceed to business under a Call of the Convention pending the arrival of any absentees.

CHAPTER VIII
LOBBYISTS

Rule 69 - Registration and Regulation

Section 15 of the Enabling Act regulating lobbying during the Montana Constitutional Convention is adopted by this Convention by reference. Lobbying on the floor and foyer of the Convention Hall and South Senate Lobby is prohibited one-half(%) hour prior to the commencement of the session, during the session and within one-half (½) hour after adjournment.

CHAPTER IX
MISCELLANEOUS

Rule 70 - Reading of Documents

When the reading of a document is called for and an objection is raised to such reading, the Convention shall determine without debate whether the document shall be read.

Rule 71 - Putting the Question

The President or Chairman shall put all questions substantially in this form: "As many as are in favor of (as the question may be) say 'aye';" and after the affirmative vote is expressed, "as many as are opposed say 'no'." If the President or Chairman is in doubt as to the vote, he may order a division or roll call of the Convention.

A division of the Convention may be had upon the demand of five (5) Delegates, When a division of the Convention is ordered, the President shall declare the result.

A recorded roll call may be had upon the demand of five (5) Delegates.

On a tie vote the question shall be determined as lost.

Rule 72 - Recognition During Roll Call

After a question has been stated by the President, and the call of the roll has been started, the President shall not recognize a Delegate for any purpose except upon points of order, or for the purpose of explaining his vote on a proposal or amendment thereto, until after the announcement of the vote. The clerk shall enter upon the Journal the names of those voting "aye" and the names of those voting "no."

Rule 73 - Roll Call

At the roll call to be taken at the opening of each session and upon calls of the Convention, the names of the Delegates shall be called alphabetically or the voting machine shall be used, and the absentees noted, after which the names of the absentees shall not be called.

Rule 74 - Amendment or Suspension of Rules

These rules may be amended by the affirmative vote of a majority of Delegates after the proposed amendment has been submitted in writing, has been considered by the Committee on Rules, and has been in the possession of the Delegates not less than two (2) session days prior to its consideration. The Committee on Rules may be discharged from further consideration of any proposed amendment upon the same notice and by the same vote as is provided in Rule 43 for proposals. One or more rules may be suspended for a specified purpose by the affirmative vote of two-thirds (2/3) of the Delegates present or a majority of all Delegates of the Convention, whichever constitutes the lesser number.

Rule 75 - Appeals - Form of Question

On all appeals from decisions of the Chair the question shall be "Shall the appeal be sustained?" A favorable vote of a majority of the Delegates present and voting shall sustain the appeal. The presiding officer may cast his vote on an appeal from his decision, and he shall have the right to explain his decision.

Rule 76 - Mason's Rules on Legislative Procedure

In all cases not covered by these rules, the controlling parliamentary authority shall be the latest edition of Mason's Rules of Legislative Procedure.

Rule 77 - Voting by the Electrical Roll Call System

When the Convention is ready to vote upon any question requiring a recorded roll call, and the vote is to be taken by the electrical roll call system, the presiding officer shall announce: "The question is on the passage of (designating the matter to be voted upon). All in favor of such question shall vote 'aye', all opposed shall vote 'nay'. The Convention will now proceed to vote."

After affording the Delegates sufficient time in which to vote, the presiding officer shall announce "Has every Delegate voted?" then, "Does any Delegate wish to change his vote?" and after a short pause he shall then say "The vote is now closed and the clerk shall proceed to record the vote."

The clerk shall immediately start the vote recording equipment, and when completely recorded, the President shall announce the result. The Secretary shall enter upon the Journal the result in the manner provided by the Rules of the Convention.

No Delegate may cast the vote of another Delegate in any session of the Convention, Committee of the Whole or Committee meeting, nor shall any person not a Delegate cast a vote for any Delegate. Any Delegate who votes or attempts to vote for another Delegate may be punished in such manner as the Convention determines. If a person not a Delegate votes or attempts to vote for any Delegate, he shall be barred from the floor of the Convention for the remainder of the session and may be further punished in such manner as the Convention determines proper. Proxy voting is not permitted.

At no time shall the voting machine show a running tally of the votes being cast by Delegates, and the colored lights next to the Delegates names shall be used at all times.

Rule 78 - "Present" Votes

Votes cast as "present" shall be recorded in the Journal as "present," but such votes shall not be counted in determining the required number of votes on those measures or questions needing the affirmative vote of those "present and voting."

Rule 79 - Convention Schedule

The Convention shall have a schedule, which shall be prepared by the President, with the advice of the Committees on Rules and Administration and submitted to the Convention for its approval. Said schedule shall be attached to these rules as an appendix.

Rule 80 - Pairing

Two delegates may pair on a proposal before the Convention under Orders of Business No. 5 and No. 6. Pairing is permitted only when one of the paired delegates is absent when the vote is taken.

An agreement to pair must be in writing and dated and signed by the delegates agreeing to be bound, must specify the duration of the pair, and must be filed with the Secretary. The pair shall bind the delegates signing until the expiration of time for which it was signed, unless the paired delegates sooner appear and ask that the agreement be cancelled.

III 8, 23; VIII

A PROPOSAL FOR A NEW JUDICIAL ARTICLE, AMENDING ARTICLE III, SECTIONS 8 AND 23, AND REPEALING ARTICLE VIII OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA.

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. There shall be a new Constitutional Article to provide as follows:

"ARTICLE ---

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENTS

Section 1. The Judicial power of the state shall be vested in the senate sitting as a court of impeachment, and in a Supreme Court and district courts which shall be courts of record.

SUPREME COURT

Section 2. The Supreme Court, except as otherwise provided in this constitution, shall have appellate jurisdiction, which shall be coextensive with the state, and shall have a general supervisory and administrative control over all inferior courts.

Section 3. The Supreme Court may appoint an administrative director and staff, who shall serve at its pleasure, to assist the court and the chief justice in the Performance of administrative duties.

Section 4. The Supreme Court shall have power to make and promulgate rules and regulations in all civil and criminal cases for all courts relating to practice, procedure, Pleading, evidence, and judicial administration, which shall have the force and effect of law.

Section 5. The appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court shall extend to all cases at law and in equity, subject, however, to such limitations and regulations as may be prescribed by law. Said court shall have power in its discretion to issue and to hear and determine writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, injunction, supervisory control and such other original and remedial writs as may be necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the justices of the Supreme Court shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the state, upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before the Supreme Court, and such writs may be heard and determined by the court.

Section 6. The Supreme Court shall consist of a chief justice and four associate justices, a majority of whom shall be necessary to form a quorum or pronounce a decision, but one or more of said justices may adjourn the court from day to day, or to a day certain, and the legislative assembly shall have the power to increase the number of associate justices to six. In case any justice of the Supreme Court shall be in any way disqualified to sit in a cause brought before such court, the iemaining justice or justices shall have power to call on one or more of the district judges of this state as in the particular case may be necessary to constitute the full number of justices of which the said court shall then be composed, to sit with them in the hearing of said cause, In all cases where a district judge is invited to sit and does sit as by this section provided, the decision and opinion of such district judge shall have the same force and effect in any cause heard before the court as if regularly participated in by a justice of the Supreme court. The chief justice shall preside at all sessions of the Supreme Court. In case of his absence, he shall appoint an associate justice to preside in his stead.

Section 7. There shall be a clerk of the Supreme Court. He shall be appointed by and hold his office at the pleasure of the Supreme Court. His compensation shall be fixed by law, and his duties by the rules of the Supreme Court.

DISTRICT COURTS

Section 8. lhe district courts shall have original jurisdiction of all justiciable matters, both civil and criminal, including jurisdiction to issue original and remedial writs. Their process shall extend to all parts of the state, and injunctions, writs of prohibition and habeas corpus, may be issued and served on legal holidays and nonjudicial days. Jurisdiction to review administrative action shall be provided by law. They shall have power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor, in all cases where they are authorized to do so by the laws of the United States.

DELEGATE PROPCSAL
No. 7 - Judicial Article

Section 9. The judge or judges cf each district may, with the approval of the chief justice of the Supreme Ccurt, provide fcr divisions and assign judges tc particular types cf cases and create one or more magistrates' offices. Magistrates shall be appointed by the district judge or judges cf each district and assigned to such matters and such cases as shall be prescribed by the judge or judges of each district, except criminal cases amounting tc felonies in which magistrates may act cnly as committing and examining courts. Magistrates shall exercise the jurisdiction of district courts in all matters and cases assigned to them and shall serve at the pleasure of the appointing judge or judges. Compensation of magistrates shall be fixed by the appointing judge or judges.

Section 10. The state shall be divided into judicial districts as provided by law, in each of which there shall be the number of judges prcvided by law. The Supreme Ccurt may increase or decrease the number of judges in any judicial district, and may divide the state or any part thesecf, intc new districts, prcvided that each be formed cf ccmpact territcry and be bounded by county lines. Changes by the Supreme Court in districts cr the number of judges therein shall be effective unless rejected by the legislature at the legislative session fcllcwing the change. No change in the number or boundaries of districts cr diminution of the number of judges, shall have the effect cf remcving a judge from office. Such change in districts or the number of judges therein shall not take place more frequently than every four years.

Section 11. There shall be a clerk cf the district court in each ccunty. He shall be appointed by the judge or judges of the district in which the county is situated and shall hold his office at the pleasure of that ccurt. Deputy clerks may be appointed by the judge or judges cf each district, and shall hold office at the pleasure of the appointing judge or judges. The number of deputy clerks to be appointed shall be subject tc the approval of the chief justice of the Supreme Court. The duties of clerks and deputy clerks shall be prescribed by the appointing judge or judges.

QUALIFICATIONS, SELECTION AND REMOVAL OF JUSTICES, JUDGES ABD MAGISTRATES; JUDICIAL COUNCIL

Section 12. No person shall be eligible tc the office of justice of the Supreme Court, judge of a district ccurt, or district court magistrate, unless he shall have been admitted to practice law in the Supreme Court cf Montana, and be a citizen cf the United States, except that a district court magistrate need not have been admitted to the practice cf law if a judge cf the district for which the appointment shall have been made shall certify that no person who has been admitted to the practice cf law in the Supreme Court cf Montana is available and shall file such certification with and secure the approval Of the Supreme court of Montana. No person shall be eligible to the office of justice cf the Supreme Court unless he shall be at least thirty years of age and shall have resided in the state at least twc years next preceding his appointment. Nc person shall be eligible to the cffica of district judge or district ccurt magistrate unless he shall be at least twenty-five years cf age and have resided within the stat2 at least one year next preceding his appointment. District judges and magistrates need not be residents cf the district for which they are chcsen at the time cf thsir appointment, but after his appointment a district court judge shall reside in the district for which he was chcsen during his term of office.

Section 13. There shall be a nonpartisan Judicial Council, composed of members divided equally between the judiciary, tha bar and the public. The Legislature shall provide the numbers, qualifications and method of selection. The chief justice of the Supreme court shall be a member and chairman cf the Council. The Council shall appoint the following committees and establish their procedural regulations:

(1) A Noninating Committee. A majority of the Committee shall be members of the public and the remainder shall be members of the bar and none of the Committee shall be members cf the legislative, executive or judicial branches of government.

All vacancies for chief justice and associate justices cf the Supreme Court and district court judges shall be filled by appointment by the Governcr from a list submitted to him by the Nominating Committee of not less than two nor more than four qualified nominees for each vacancy. Justices and judges appointed by the Governcr shall serve such terms as shall be fixed by law. Each justice or judge who desires to remain in office upon the expiration of his term shall be subject to approval or rejection in an uncontested general election on a nonpartisan ballot, as the legislature shall provide.

(2) A Research and Qualifications Committee. A majority of the Committee shall be members of the judiciary and bar and the remainder shall be members cf the public. Members of this Committee may also be members of the Nominating Committee.

The Committee shall have the power to investigate, upon complaint by any citizen or on its own motion, charges which would be the basis for retirement, censure, or removal of an* justice, judge or magistrate. For this purpose, it shall be authorized to conduct hearings and subpoena witnesses and documents. Such proceedings shall be confidential. Upon finding charges tc be well founded, the Committee shall file a formal complaint before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court shall hear such complaint, and if it be substantiated may retire, censure, or remove from office any justice, judge, or magistrate. If the complaint he against a justice, the court shall call in a district judge as provided in Section 6 of this article.

The Research and Qualificaticcs Committee also shall conduct continuing studies cf the administration of justice in Montana and shall report to the legislature and to the Supreme Ccurt as provided by law. Its studies shall include, but not be limited to, rules of procedure. practice, pleading, and evidence, the division of the state into judicial districts and the number cf judges to be assigned tc each district, and methods for the imprcvement of the administration cf justice.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISICNS

Section 14. The justices cf the Supreme Court and the judges of the district courts shall be paid by the state a salary which shall not be diminished during the term of office. Other costs cf the judicial system shall be borne by the state, or by the state, counties, cities and towns in such proporticns and in such manner as the legislature shall provide; and revenues from fines and fees charged by the courts cf Montana shall be distributed as the legislature shall Frcvide.

Secticn 15. No justice of the Supreme court nor judge or magistrate shall accept or receive any compensation, fee, allowance, prerequisite or emolument fcr or on account of his office, in any form whatever, except mileage, per diem and salary provided by law.

Section 16. No justice or clerk of the Supreme court, nor judge cr clerk of any district court shall act cr practice as any attorney or counsellor at law in any court of this state cr hold any public office during his continuance in cffice. This prohibition shall nct apply to magistrates or deputy clerks of district courts.

Section 17. Each municipal ccurt judge, police judge, and justice cf the peace, in office at the effective date of this article shall continue tc hold office and perform his present judicial functions until the expiration of his term. Each Supreme Court justice and district court judge in cffice on the effective date cf this article shall continue to hold office and perform his judicial functions until rejected, removed, or retired as provided in Section 13.

Section 18. On the effective date of this article:

(1) Each court into which jurisdiction of cther courts is transferred shall succeed to and assume jurisdiction of all causes, matters and proceedings then Fending, with full pcwer to carry into execution or ctherwise give effect to all crders, judgments and decrees entered by the predecessor courts.

(2) The files, bocks, papers, records, dccuments, moneys, securities, and cther property in the possessicn, custcdy cr under the contrcl cf courts hereby abolished, cr any cfficer thereof, are transferred tc the district court; and thereafter all proceedings in all courts shall be matters cf record."

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. CREATION OF DISTRICTS. The state shall be divided intc districts.

Section 2. AUTHORITY OF CISTRICTS. Each district shall be a body politic and corporate and have full gcvernmental authority except to the extent to which that authority is in this constitution reserved to the state or otherwise restricted.

Section 3. BOARD OF SUPERVISORS. The authcrity of the district shall be exercised through a board of supervisors ccnsisting of five members elected in the district at large for overlapping six year terms.

The legislature may prescribe the manner in which district authority is to be exercised, insofar as necessary for reasonable uniformity among the districts.

Section 4. IMPLEMENTATICN. Counties, cities, schcol districts and other local subdivisions existing cn the effective date of this constitution shall continue to exercise their pcwers and functions under present law pending enactment of legislation to carry out the provisions of this constituticn; but new subdivisions shall be created only in accordance with this constitutien.

In event such legislation has not been enacted by January 1, 1980, and transition thereunder effected, this article shall on that date become automatically and fully effective and self-executing, all presently existing laws inconsistent therewith shall expire except for the purpose of and to the extent necessary for the discharge of any outstanding obligations of particular subdivisions, each of the existing counties of the state shall become a district under this article, existing subdivisions therein shall be merged in such district and the respective districts shall be the lawful successors thereto and responsible for the orderly liquidation thereof; and the offices of the several members of district boards of supervisors shall be filled as in the case of vacancies otherwise ordinarily arising or existing therein.

In any county which has not already become a district or part of a district established under this article the question of early local implementation of this article may be submitted to the qualified electors of the county at any time in accordance with procedures under this constitution or any applicable law for submission of questions to popular vote by initiative or referendum; and if such procedures do not make provision for such submission in subdivisions such as counties the same shall nevertheless be adapted to the extent necessary therefor and implemented and applied as so adapted with the same force, effect and validity as if such adaptation had been incorporated in the procedures as originally established or enacted. If such question upon any such submission is decided in the affirmative, the provisions of this article shall thereupon become fully effective and self-executing, in accordance with and as set forth in the provisions hereof fixing a definite time for such article to become automatically effective and self-executing, and all of such provisions shall be applied but without regard to the definite time fixed therein, within such county.

Section 5. FIRST ELECTION OF SUPERVISORS. Of district supervisors first elected the term of office of the successful candidate receiving the highest number of votes shall be six years, the term of each of those two receiving the next highest numbers shall be four years and the term of each of the two successful candidates receiving the lowest numbers of votes shall be two years."

A PROPOSAL REPEALING ARTICLE XVI, SECTION 4 OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA AND ADDING A NEW SECTION PROVIDING FOR THE ELECTION OF BOARDS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. Article XVI, Section 4 of the present Constitution, which reads as follows, is repealed:

~~"Sec. 4. In each county there shall be elected three county commissioners, whose term of office shall be six years; provided that each county in the state of Montana shall be divided into three commissioner districts, to be designated as commissioner districts, numbers one, two and three, respectively.~~

~~The board of county commissioners shall in every county in the state of Montana, at their regular session, on the first Monday in May, 1929, or as soon thereafter as convenient or possible, not exceeding sixty days thereafter, meet and by and under the direction of the district court judge or judges of said county, divide their respective counties into three commissioner districts as compact and equal in population and area as possible, and number them respectively, one, two and three, and when such division has been made, there shall be filed in the office of the county clerk and recorder of such county a certificate designating the metes and bounds of the boundary lines and limits of each of said commissioners districts, which certificate shall be signed by said judge or judges, provided, also that at the first regular session of any newly organized and created county, the said board of county commissioners, by and under the direction of the district court judge or judges of said county, shall divide such new county into commissioner districts as herein provided.~~

~~Upon such division, the board of county commissioners shall assign its members to such districts in the following manner, each member of the said board then in service shall be assigned to the district in which he is residing or the nearest thereto, the senior member of the board in service to be assigned to the commissioner district No. 1, the next member in seniority to be assigned to commissioner district No. 2, and the junior member of the board to be assigned to commissioner district No. 3, provided, that at the first general election of any newly created and organized county, the commissioner for district No. 1, shall be elected for two years, for No. 2, for four years, and for No. 3, for six years, and biennially thereafter there shall be one commissioner elected to take place of the retiring commissioner, who shall hold his office for six years.~~

~~That the board of county commissioners by and under the direction of the district court judge or judges of said county, for the purpose of equalizing in population and area such commissioner districts, may change the boundaries of any or all of the commissioner districts in their respective county, by filing in the office of the county clerk and recorder of such county, a certificate signed by said judge or judges designating by metes and bounds the boundary lines of each of said commissioner districts as changed, and such change in any or all the districts in such county, shall become effective from and after filing of such certificate, provided, however, that the boundaries of no commissioner district shall at any time be changed in such a manner as to affect the term of office of any county commissioner who has been elected, and whose term of office has not expired, and provided, further, that no change in the boundaries of any commissioner district shall be made within six months next preceding a general election.~~

~~At the general election to be held in 1930, and thereafter at each general election, the member or members of the board to be elected, shall be elected from the residents and electors of the district or districts in which the vacancy occurs, but the election of such member or members of the board shall be submitted to the entire electorate of the county, provided, however, that no one shall be elected as a member of said board, who has not resided in said district for at least two years next preceding the time when he shall become a candidate for said office.~~

~~When a vacancy occurs in the board of county commissioners the judge or judges of the judicial district in which the vacancy occurs, shall appoint someone residing in such commissioner district where the vacancy occurs, to fill the office until the next general election when a commissioner shall be elected to fill the unexpired term."~~

Section 2. There shall be a new Constitutional Section to provide as follows:

DELEGATE PROPOSAL
NO. 17 - Elections

"Section . BOARDS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. Each county shall have an--elected board of county commissioners of no less than three nor more than seven members. Each commissioner shall be a resident of, and elected only by the voters of, a single member district; such districts within a county shall be as equal in population as is practicable and shall be redrawn periodically as may be required by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and by law. The legislature shall provide by law for such reapportionment, for division of each county into districts, for overlapping terms of office for commissioners and for methods by which residents and boards of commissioners of each county may decrease the membership of the board to not less than three or increase the membership to no more than seven."

Section 1. There shall be a new Ccnstitutional Article to provide as fcllcws:

"ARTICLE ----

'IRE LEGISLATURE

Section 1. LEGISLATIVE POWER. The legislative power of the state shall be vested in the legislative assembly, but the people may propose and enact laws by initiative and they may approve or reject legislative acts by referendum.

Section 2. LEGISLATIVE COBPOSITION. The legislative assembly shall be composed of one (1) chamber cf nct less than seventy-five (75) and nct more than one hundred (100) members.

Section 3. LEGISLATIVE DISTRICTS AND APPCRTICNMENT. (1) Fcr the purpose of electing members cf the legislative assembly, the state shall be divided into as many districts as there shall be members of the legislative assembly. Each district shall ccnsist of compact and contiguous territcry. All districts shall be so nearly equal in population as is practicable.

(2) Immediately fcllowing each federal census cf pcpulaticn there shall be a redistricting of legislative districts and reapportionment of voters within the districts. In the sessicn preceding each federal census, the majority and minority leaders of the legislative assembly shall each appoint two (2) members tc a reapportionment commission. Together, the fcur (Y) members shall select a chairman. No member of the reapportionaent commission shall be a legislator or a state official. The commissicn plan shall be submitted to the legislative assembly at the next session after the federal census is made public and shall become law when approved by a majority of the legislative assembly. If it is not approved, the legislative assembly shall return the plan to the commission with its recommendations for change, and the commission shall within thirty (30) days cause the secretary of state to announce and publish its final plan in the manner provided for acts of the legislative assembly and the plan shall have the force of law upon such publication.

Section 4. ELECTION AND TERM OF MEMBERS. The members of the legislative assembly shall be elected by the qualified voters of the state in each odd-numbered year for a term of two (2) years.

Section 5. LEGISLATIVE IMMUNITY. The members of the legislative assembly shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, violation of their oath of office, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of the legislative assembly, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in the assembly they shall not be questioned in any other place.

Section 6. CITIZENS COMPENSATION COMMISSION. Legislators shall receive an annual salary and reasonable expenses and allowances set by a citizens compensation commission composed of seven (7) members. The Governor shall appoint three (3) members and the majority and minority leaders of the legislative assembly shall each appoint two (2) members. Members of the legislature and officers and employees of the state or of any county, municipality or other governmental unit of the state shall not be eligible for appointment to the commission. The legislature may further specify the requirements for membership. The commission shall meet every two (2) years. Within a period after its appointment set by law, the commission shall submit to the legislature its proposals which the legislature may decrease but not increase. The commission will then dissolve.

Section 7. LEGISLATIVE SESSIONS. The legislative assembly shall be a continuous body during the term for which its members are elected. It shall meet in regular sessions annually on the fourth Monday in January, but the month and day may be changed by law. It may be convened at other times by the Governor, by the assembly's majority and minority leaders, or at the written request of a majority of the members of the legislative assembly.

Section 8. ORGANIZATION. (1) The legislative assembly shall judge the elections, returns, and qualifications of its members and choose its officers and employees. No member shall be expelled without the concurrence of two-thirds (2/3) of the membership.

(2) A majority of the membership of the legislative assembly constitutes a quorum to do business. but a smaller number may adjourn from day tc day and may compel attendarce cf absent members.

Section 9. ACCOUNTABIIITY AND CITIZEN ACCESS. (1) All sessicns and committee meetings cf the legislative assembly, including the committee of the whcle, shall be open to the public.

(2) The vote of each member in all sessicns and committee meetings of the legislative assembly, including the committee of the whole, shall be recorded and entered in the journal. The legislative assembly shall keep a journal cf its proceedings.

(3) Public notice shall be given five (5) days in advance fcr all committee hearings.

Section 10. PORM OF BILLS. (1) Every bill shall be confined to one (1) subject and properly associated matters unless it is an appropriation bill or one codifying, revising, cr rearranging existing laws. Pills for appropriaticns shall be confined to appropriations. A law shall not be judicable under this prcvisicn sixty (60) days after its enactment.

(2) The enacting clause shall be: "Be it enacted by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana."

Section 11. PASSAGE OF @ILLS. (1) No law shall be passed except by bill and no bill shall be sc altered or aaended during passage that its original purpose is changed.

(2) No bill shall become law unless it has been referred tc a committee, reported out, reprcduced with all its final amendments, and placed on the desk of each member five (5) days before final passage.

(3) No bill shall beccme a law except by a majority vote of all the members present in the legislative assembly.

Section 12. SPECIAL AND LOCAL LEGISLATICN. The legislative assembly shall pass no special cr lccal act when a general act is, cr can be made, applicable.

Section 13. VETO. (1) All bills passed by the legislative assembly shall be submitted to the Governcr, whc has the power to veto all bills but those initiated by or referred to the people. The Governor may, by veto, strike or reduce items in appropriations bills. He shall return any vetoed bill, with a statement of his objections, to the legislative assembly.

(2) Upon receipt of a veto message, the legislative assembly shall meet to reconsider passage of the vetoed bill cr item. Vetoed bills become law by affirmative vcte of two-thirds (2/3) of the membership of the legislative assembly.

(3) A bill becomes law if, while the legislative assembly is in session, the Governor neither signs nor vetoes it within fifteen (15) days, Sundays excepted, after its delivery to him. If the legislative assembly is not in session and the Governor neither signs nor vetoes a bill within twenty (20) days, Sundays excepted, after its delivery to him, the bill is vetoed.

Section 14. IMPEACHMENT. All civil officers of the state are subject to impeachment by the legislative assembly. Impeachment shall originate in the legislative assembly and must be approved by a two-thirds (2/3) vote of its members. The motion for impeachment shall list fully the basis for the proceeding. Trial on impeachment shall be conducted by the supreme court, unless a member of the supreme court is being tried, in which case the state's district court judges shall act as the tribunal. Concurrence of two-thirds (2/3) of the members of the tribunal is required for a judgment of impeachment. The judgment may not extend beyond removal from office, but shall not prevent proceedings in the courts on the same or related charges.

DELEGATE PROPOSAL NO. 56

DATE INTRODUCED: JAN. 28, 1972

Referred to Local Government Committee

A PROPOSAL FOR A NEW CONSTITUTIONAL ARTICLE ON LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. There shall be a new Constitutional Article to provide as follows:

"ARTICLE ____

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. PURPOSE AND CONSTRUCTION. The purpose of this article is to provide for maximum local self-government with a minimum of local government units, and to prevent duplication of tax-levying jurisdictions. A liberal construction shall be given to the powers of local government units.

Section 2. POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS. All local government powers shall be vested in the political subdivisions of the state. These shall include, but shall not be limited to, cities and counties. Each political subdivision shall have the power to frame and adopt a charter for its own self-government within limits and under procedures provided by law.

Section 3. CLASSIFICATION. The legislative assembly shall classify the political subdivisions of the state. Such political subdivisions shall have those powers and functions provided by charter or law, allowing for maximum local participation and responsibility.

Section 4. HOME RULE CHARTERS. The qualified voters in any political subdivision of the first class may adopt, amend, or repeal a home rule charter in a manner provided by law. The legislative assembly may extend home rule to other political subdivisions.

Section 5. HOME RULE POWER. A home rule unit may exercise all legislative powers not prohibited by law or charter.

Section 6. INTERGOVERNMENTAL COOPERATION. (1) Regardless of home rule classification, agreements, including those for cooperation and joint administration, and for transfer of functions between local subdivisions, local subdivisions and the state, or local subdivisions and the United States, may be consummated except where prohibited by law or charter.

(2) The state shall encourage intergovernmental cooperation, and shall provide for methods by which its political subdivisions may annex, consolidate, or change their form of government. A state agency on local affairs may be created by the legislative assembly to coordinate, advise and assist the various political subdivisions.

Section 7. TAXATION. The political subdivisions of the state shall have the power to tax, improve through special assessments, and to incur indebtedness, as provided by law.

Section 8. SPECIAL ACTS. Special acts of the legislature shall not be effective upon any particular subdivision of the state unless approved by a majority of the qualified electorate voting therein."

REGULATICN OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

Section 1. A public utilities comrissicner shall be appointed by the Governcr and confirmed by the senate after public hearings. A vacancy shall be filled in the same manner. The commissicner shall serve at the pleasure of the Governcr.

Section 2. The commissioner shall have such jurisdicticn and such legislative, executive acd judicial powers as are conferred upcn him by the legislature and this constitution, which are cognate and germane to the regulation of public utilities as defined by law and this constitutica. In the exercise of such powers, one of which shall be the deterainaticn of rates and tariffs of the utilities over which he may be given jurisdiction, the commissioner shall not be required to consider any particular theories, evidence, or methods for determining such rates and tariffs; and the commissioner shall determine the ueight and credibility of any evidence that is Introduced. The manner and sccpe of review, if any, of the commissioner's actions in a court of record shall be provided by law.

Section 3. In the deterrinaticn cf rates and tariffs the commissicner shall be provided with expert staff personnel and help in such determination, and recoemendaticns of the staff shall be regarded as impartial as opposed to the partiality of the applicant or the protestant. The commissioner shall protect the rights and interests of all consumers of public utility services.

Section 4. Private corporations and persons that own, operate, control or manage a line, plant, or system for the transportation of people or property, the transmission of messages or the furnishing of heat, light, water, power, or storage directly or indirectly to or for the public and common carriers are public utilities. The legislature may prescribe that additional classes of private corporations or persons are public utilities.

Section 5. No power to regulate any public utility in respect of rates, tariffs, service, finance, or any other aspect whatsoever of the management and operation of such enterprises as may be necessary or ancillary to the regulation of rates and tariffs thereof, shall be conferred on any other official or agency.

Section 6. The legislature shall provide by law for the organization and financing of public corporations for the furnishing of heat, light, water, and power; and, in the discretion of the legislature, any other services or commodities commonly produced or sold by the public utilities as defined by law or this constitution.

Section 7. Public utilities organized as public corporations or as cooperatives shall not be subject to the regulation of the commissioners as to rates, service or otherwise."

DELEGATE PROPOSAL
No. 77 - Executive Article

MONTANA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

DELEGATE PROPOSAL NO. 77

DATE INTRODUCED: FEB. 1, 1972

Referred to Executive Committee

A PROPOSAL FOR A NEW CONSTITUTIONAL ARTICLE CREATING THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OF GOVERNMENT.

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. There shall be a new Constitutional Article to provide as follows:

"ARTICLE ---

THE EXECUTIVE

Section 1. The executive power of the state shall be vested in a Governor.

The Governor shall be elected by the qualified voters of this state at a general election. The person receiving the highest number of votes shall be the Governor. In case of a tie vote, the selection of the Governor shall be determined in accordance with law.

The term of office of the Governor shall begin at noon on the first Monday in December next following his election and end at noon on the first Monday in December, four years thereafter.

No person shall be eligible for the office of Governor unless he shall be a qualified voter, have attained the age of thirty years, and have been a resident of this state for five years immediately preceding his election.

The Governor shall not hold any other office of employment or profit under the state or the United States during his term of office.

Section 2. There shall be a lieutenant Governor, who shall have the same qualifications as the Governor. He shall be elected at the same electicn, for the same term, and in the same manner, as the Governor; provided that the votes cast in the general electicn for the nominee for Governor shall be deemed cast fcr the nominee for lieutenant Governcr of the same pclitical party. He shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law and as may be delegated to him by the Gcverncr, but no power specifically vested in the Governor by this constituticn shall be delegated to the lieutenant Gcverncr pursuant to this section.

Section 3. The lieutenant Gcverncr shall be president of the senate, but shall vote only when the senate is equally divided. In case cf the absence or disgualificaticn of the lieutenant Governor, the president pro tempore of the senate shall perform the duties of the lieutenant Gcverncr until the vacancy is filled cr the disability removed.

Section 4. The compensation cf the Governor and the lieutenant Governor shall be prescribed by lar and shall not be increased or diminished during a single term cf office.

Section 5. In the event of the Governor's death, resignation or permanent removal frcm office, the cffice cf Governor is vacant, and the lieutenant Governor shall succeed to the office of Governor for the remainder of the tero, whereupon the office of lieutenant Governor is vacant.

When a vacancy occurs in the cffice of lieutenant Governor, the Governor shall nominate a lieutenant Governor who shall take office upon confirmation by the affirmative vote of a aajcrity of all members of the legislative assembly in jcint session.

If vacancies in tile offices of Governor and lieutenant Governor exist at the same time, the legislative assembly shall convene forthwith, and the office cf Governcr shall be filled for the remainder of the term by the affirmative vote cf a majority of all members of the legislative assembly in jcint session. The person SO chosen as Governor by the legislative assembly shall then nominate a person to succeed to the cffice of lieutenant Governor, upon ccnfirmaticn by the affirmative vote of a majority of all members cf the legislative assembly in the same joint session, The speaker of the house shall serve as acting Governcr until the newly elected Governcr has qualified.

When the lieutenant Governcr succeeds to the Office Of Governor, he shall have the title, powers, and duties cf the office of Governor; when the lieutenant Gcvernor serves as acting Governcr, he shall exercise only the powers and duties of the office of Governor.

Whenever the Gcverncr transmits to the supreme court his written declaration that he is unable tc perfcrs the powers and duties of his office, and until he transmits to the supreme court a vritten declaration that he is able to resume the powers and duties of his office, such powers and duties shall be performed by the lieutenant Governor as acting Governor,

The legislative assembly, by the affirmative vote of three-fifths of all its members in joint session, may adopt a resolution directing the supreme court to determine whether the Governor is unable by reason of physical or mental disability to perform the powers and duties of his office. If the supreme court determines by majority vote that the Governor is unable by reason of physical or mental disability to perform the powers and duties of his office, the lieutenant Governor shall serve as acting Governor; provided, that an advisory board composed by psychiatrists and physicians may be appointed by the supreme court to aid them in their determination.

Thereafter; when the Governor transmits to the supreme court his written declaration that no disability exists, he shall resume the powers and duties of his office unless the legislative assembly by three-fifths vote of all its members in joint session within four days challenges the ability of the Governor to resume the powers and duties of his office. Thereupon the supreme court shall decide the issue within twenty-one days,

If the Governor-elect is disqualified, resigns, or dies, the lieutenant Governor-elect shall become Governor for the full term. If the Governor-elect fails to assume office for any other reason, the lieutenant Governor-elect shall become lieutenant Governor and shall serve as acting Governor until the Governor-elect assumes office. The procedure for determination of the physical or mental disability, and of termination of the disability, of the Governor-elect shall be the same as that prescribed for determination of the physical or mental disability of the Governor.

In the event of the impeachment of the Governor or the lieutenant Governor, he shall not exercise the powers of his office until acquitted.

Section 6. The Governor shall be the commander-in-chief of the military forces of the state, except when these forces are in the actual service of the United States, and shall have power to call out any part of the whole of said, forces to aid in the executionof the laws, to suppress insurrection or repel invasion.

Section 7. The Governor may proclaim martial law when the public safety reguires it in case of rebellion or actual or imminent invasion. Martial law shall not continue for longer than twenty days without the approval of a majority of the members of the legislature in joint session.

Section 8, All executive and administrative offices, agencies and instrumentalities of the executive branch of the state government and their respective functicns, pcwers and duties, shall be allocated by law amcng and within not more than twenty principal departments. The head of each principal department shall be a single executive unless ctherwise prcvided by law. The Gcverncr with the consent of the senate shall appcint and remove the heads of all administrative departments. All cther officers in the administrative service shall be appointed and may be removed as provided by law.

Each principal department shall be under the supervision of the Gcverncr and its head shall serve at the pleasure of the Governcr. If during a recess of the senate a vacancy cccurs in any such office, the Governor shall appoint scme fit person to discharge the duties therecf until the next meeting cf the senate, when he shall nominate scme Ferscn tc fill such office. Only the Gcverncr shall make interim appcintments.

Section 9. The Governcr may make changes in the organization of the executive branch or in the assignment of functions among its units which he considers necessary fcr efficient administration. Where these changes require the force of law, they shall be set forth in executive orders. Such orders shall be submitted to the legislature, which shall have sixty days of a regular session, or a full session if of shcrter duration, to express its disapprcval. Unless mcdified or disapprcved by resoluticn concurred in by a majority cf the members cf both houses, the orders shall become effective at a date thereafter tc be designated by the Gcverncr.

Section 10. The Governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, ccmmutations and pardons after conviction and may suspend and remit fines and forfeitures subject to such prccedures as may be prescribed by law.

Section 11. The Governor shall at the beginning cf each legislative session, and may at cther times, give the legislature information and recommend measures he considers necessary. The Governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail, fcr all operating funds, the prcpcsed expenditures and estimated revenue cf the state.

Section 12. Whenever the Governor considers it in the public interest, he may convene the legislature, either house, or the two houses in joint session. At the written request of two-thirds of the members to uhich each house is entitled, the presiding officers of both houses shall convene the legislature in special session.

Section 13. Every bill passed by the legislative assembly, except bills proposing amendments to the Mcntana Constitution and bills ratifying proposed amendments to the United States Constitution uhich may not be vetoed by the Governcr, shall, before it beccmes a law, be presented tc the Governcr. He shall either sign it, whereupcn it shall become a law, or he shall return it with his objections to the hcuse in which it originated, which house shall enter the objecticns at large upon its journal and prcceed t o reconsider the bill. If two-thirds cf the members present agree tc repass the same, it shall be sent, tcgetber with the objections, to the ctber hcuse, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if repassed by two-thirds cf the members present in that house it shall become a law cctuithstanding the objections of the Gcvernor. If any bill shall nct be returned by the Governor within five days (Sunday excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the legislative assembly shall by their adjcurnment prevent its return. Rithin twenty-five days after the adjournment of the legislature, the Gcvernor shall consider all bills not disposed of prior to adjcurnment. Be shall either sign such bills into law; or if he fails to apprcve any bill, he shall return it with his objecticas tc the presiding official of the house in which it originated. The legislature, as provided in Section 12, may reccnvene itself to reconsider any bills so returned by the Governcr.

The Gcvernor, in returning with his cbjecticns a bill for reconsideration, may recommend that an amendment or amendments specified by him be made in the bill, and in such case the legislative assembly may amend and re-enact the bill, If a bill be so amended and re-enacted, it shall be presented again to the Governcr, but shall become a law only if he shall sign it within ten days after presentation: and no bill shall be returned by the Governor a seccnd tire.

Section 14. The Gcvernor may strike cut or reduce items in appropriation bills passed by the legislature and the procedure in such cases shall be the same as in the case cf the disapproval of an entire bill by the Governcr."

A PRCPOSAL FOR FOUR NEW CONSTITUTIONAL SECTICNS PROVIDING FOE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE CONSTITUTICNAL CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. There shall be a new Ccnstitutional Section to provide as fcllcus:

"Section ___. (1) The legislature, by an affirmative vote of tuc-thirds of all the members, ray at any time submit to the electors of the state the guesticn cf whether there shall be an unlimited convention to revise, alter, or amend this constitu-tion.

(2) The people may by initiative petition request the legislative assembly tc submit to the voters of the state the question of whether there shall be an unlimited ccnventicn to revise, alter, or amend this ccnstituticn. The petition must be signed by at least ten percent (10%) of the legal voters of the state, and at least ten percent (10%) of the legal voters in two-fifths (2/5) of the legislative districts cf the state. The number cf votes cast for the Governor in the general election immediately preceding the filing of the petition shall determine the number of legal voters.

The petiticn sball be filed with the secretary cf state, who shall certify the filing therecf to the legislative assembly and cause the question to be submitted to the voters at the general election immediately following the legislative session receiving notice of the filing of said petiticn.

(3) If the question of holding a convention is not cther-vise submitted to the people at some time during any period of tventy years, it shall be submitted at the general election in the tventieth year following the last submission of such question.

(4) The legislature, prior to a popular vote on the holding of a convention, shall provide for a preparatory commission to assemble information on constitutional questions, to assist the voters, and, if a convention is authorized, to be continued for the assistance of the delegates.

(5) If a majority of those voting on the question shall declare in favor of such convention, the legislative assembly shall at its next session provide for the calling thereof. The number of members of the convention shall be no greater than the largest body of the legislative assembly. The legislature may determine whether the delegates shall be elected after nomination by political parties, or on a non-partisan basis, but they shall be elected at the same places and in the same districts as the legislative body determining the number of delegates.

(6) The legislative assembly shall in the act calling the convention designate the day, hour and place of its members and officers, and provide for the payment of the same, together with the necessary expenses of the convention.

(7) Before proceedings, the members shall take the oath otherwise provided in this constitution. The qualifications of members shall be the same as the highest qualifications required for membership in the legislature. vacancies occurring shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the legislative assembly, or as otherwise provided by law.

(8) The convention shall meet within three months after the election and prepare such revisions, alterations or amendments to the constitution as may be deemed necessary which shall be submitted to the electors for their ratification or rejection as a whole or in separate articles or amendments as determined by the convention and at an election appointed by the convention for that purpose, or at the next general election, but not less than two (2) months after the adjournment thereof. Unless so submitted and approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, no such revision, alteration or amendment shall take effect.

(9) Unless otherwise provided in the amendment, it becomes effective on the first day of July after the certification of the election returns by the secretary of state."

Section 2. There shall be a new Constitutional Section to provide as follows:

"Section ___. Amendments to this constitution may be proposed by any member of the legislative assembly. If adopted by an affirmative roll call vote of two-thirds (2/3) of all the members thereof, whether one or more bodies, the proposed amendment shall become a part of the constitution if approved by either of the following procedures:

(1) The legislative assembly may refer the proposed amendment tc the voters of the state of Montana tc be voted on in the next general election held in the state. In such event the secretary of state shall cause the amendment or amendments to be published in full in at least one newspaper in each county in which a newspaper is published, twice each month fcr the tuo months previous to the next general electicn for members to the legislative assembly. If approved by a majority of the electors vcting therecn, the amendment shall become a part of this constitution on the first day of July after certification of the election returns unless the amendment otherwise provides; cr

(2) If the legislative assembly by a majcrity roll call vote, elects not to refer the amendment to the vote cf the electors of Montana as provided in the preceding subsection (1) the amendment shall be presented to the next succeeding legislative assembly. If adopted by a two-thirds (2/3) vcte cf the members of such legislative assembly, the amendment shall beccme a part of this constitution on the first day cf July fcllcving its approval unless a petition is filed with the Secretary cf State signed by five percent (5%) cf the legal voters of the state requesting such amendment he referred to a vote cf the people as provided in this Constitution for referendum, in which event the amendment shall nct become effective until the Secretary cf State certifies its approval by a majority of those voting therecn."

A PROPOSAL AMENDING ARTICLE XIX, SECTION 8, CF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA PROVIDING FOR FUTURE CONSTITUTIONAL CCNVENTIONS.

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CCNVENTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. Article XIX, Section 8 of the present Ccnstitution is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 8. ~~The legislative assembly may at any time, by a vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house, submit to the electors of the state the question whether there shall be a convention to revise, alter, or amend this constitution; and if a majority of those voting on the question shall declare in favor of such convention, the legislative assembly shall at its next session provide for the calling thereof. The number of members of the convention shall be the same as that of the house of representatives, and they shall be elected in the same manner, at the same places, and in the same districts. The legislative assembly shall in the act calling the convention designate the day, hour and place of its meeting, fix the pay of its members and officers, and provide for the payment of the same, together with the necessary expenses of the convention. Before proceeding, the members shall take an oath to support the constitution of the United States and of the state of Montana, and to faithfully discharge their duties as members of the convention. The qualifications of members shall be the same as of the members of the senate, and vacancies occuring shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the legislative assembly. Said convention shall meet within three months after such election and prepare such revision, alterations, or amendments to the constitution as may be deemed necessary, which shall be submitted to the electors for their ratification or rejected at an election appointed by the convention for that purpose, not less than two~~ ~~nor more than six months after the adjournment thereof, and unless so submitted and approved by a majority of the electors voting at the election, no such revision, alteration, or amendment shall take effect.~~ The legislature may call constitutional conventions at any time. If during any ten-year period a constitutional convention has not been held, there shall be placed on the ballot for the next general election the question: "Shall there be a Constitutional Convention?" If a majority of the votes cast on the question are in the negativthe question need not be placed on the ballot until the end of the next ten-year period. If a majority of the votes cast on the subject are in the affirmatidelegates to the convention shall be chosen at the next regular statewide election, unless the legislature provides for the election of delegates at a special election. The Governor shall issue the call for the convention. Except that delegates are to be elected on a non-partisan basis and unless other provisions have been made by law, the call shall conform as nearly as possible to the act calling the Montana Constitutional Convention of 1972, including but not limited to, number of members, dis-, election and certification of delegates and submission and ratification of revisions and ordinances. The appropriation provisions of the call shall be self-executing and shall constitute a first claim on the state treasury. Constitutional Conventions shall have plenary power to amend or revise the constitution L-Zsubjonly to ratification by the people. No call for a constitutional convention limitl these powers c f the convention."

Referred to Executive Committee

A PROPOSAL FCR A NEW CONSTITUTICNAL ARTICLE EROVICING FCR JOINT ELECTICN OF THE GOVERNOR, LIEUTENART GCVERNOR AND ATTORNEY GENERAL.

BE IT PROPOSEL BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTICN OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. There shall be a new Constitnticnal Article to provide as follcws:

"ARTICLE ----

THE EXECUTIVE

Section 1. EXECUTIVE POWER. The executive power cf the state shall be vested in the Gcverncr.

Section 2. STATE ELECTIVE OFFICERS. There shall be a lieutenant Governor and an attorney general. They shall have the same qualifications as the Governor and serve for the same term. They shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law and as may be delegated tc each by the Gcverncr.

Section 3. ELECTIONS. The Gcverncr shall be elected by the qualified voters cf the state at a general electicn every other odd-numbered year. The person receiving the highest number cf votes shall be Governor. In the case cf a tie vcte, the selection of the Gcvernor shall be determined in acccrdance with lav.

The term of office of the Gcvernor shall begin at nccn cn the first Monday in December next fcllcving his election and end at nccn on the first Monday in December, four years thereafter.

No person shall be eligible for the office cf Governor unless he shall be a qualified voter, have attained the age of 30 years and have been a resident of this state for two years inmediately preceding his election.

The Governcr shall not hold any cther cffice cr employment of profit under the state or the united States during his term cf office.

The Governor, the lieutenant Governcr and the attorney general shall belong to the same pclitical party and shall be elected jointly in both the primary and the general elections.

In both the primary and general electiccs, cne vote shall be cast jointly fcr the candidate fcr Gcverncr, lieutenant Gcvernor and attorney general.

Nc perscn shall be elected to the cffice cf attcrney general whc is nct an attorney admitted tc practice before the supreme court of the state.

Section 4. LIMIT ON TENURE. Nc person uhc has been elected Governor for twc full successive terms shall be eligible tc hcld that office until one full term has intervened.

Section 5. COMPENSATION. The compensation of the Gcvernor, the lieutenant Governor and the attorney general shall be prescribed by law and shall not be diminished during their term of office, unless by general law applying to all salaried officers of the state.

Section 6. EXECRTIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE POWERS. The Governor shall be responsible for the faithful execution of the lass. He may, by appropriate action and proceeding brought in the name of the state, enforce compliance with any constitutional cr legislative mandate or restrain violaticn cf any constitutional or legislative paver, duty or right of any cfficer, department or agency of the state or any of its civilian divisicns. This authority shall not authorize any acticn cr proceedings against the legislature.

The Governor shall commission all officers of the state. Be may at times require inforsaticn, in writing or othervise frcm the officers of any adsinistrative department, cffice or agency upon any subject relating to their respective offices. He shall be comsander-in-chief of the armed forces of the state, except when they are called into the service cf the United States and may call them out to execute the laws, to preserve order, to suppress insurrection or to repel invasion.

Section 7. PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENTS. All executive and administrative offices, agencies and instrumentalities of the executive branch of state government and their respective functions, powers and duties, except for the office of Governor and lieutenant Governor shall be allocated by law among and within twenty principal departments. They shall be grouped as far as possible according to major purposes.

Subsequent to the initial allocation, the Governor may make changes in the organization of the executive branch or in the assignment of functicns among its units which he considers necessary for efficient administration. Where these changes require the force of law, they shall be set fcrth in executive orders and submitted tc the legislature. Thereafter the legislature shall have 60 calendar days of a regular sessicn or a full regular session if of shorter duration, tc disapprove each executive order. Unless disapproved in both houses by a resolutien concurred in by a majority of the members elected to and serving in each house, each order shall becme effective at a date thereafter to be designated by the Gcverncr.

The head of each department shall be a single executive except in the case cf the Cepartment of Education which is headed by a nine member board of education elected in a manner prescribed by law.

The single executives heading principal departments shall include the attorney general and may include the lieutenant Governor unless his duties are othervise defined by the Governor.

Apart from these exceptions, each head shall be appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the senate and he shall serve at the pleasure of the Governor.

Such single executives shall hold office for a term to expire at the end of the term tor which the Governor was elected, unless sooner removed by the governor, except that the removal of the lieutenant Governor and the attorney general from executive position shall require a twc-thirds vcte of each house of the legislature.

The Governor shall nominate and by and vith the consent of the senate, appoint all officers for vhose election and appointment provision is not otherwise made by this constitution or by law. If the manner of removal is not prescribed in this constitution, his removal shall be in a manner prescribed by law.

When the senate is not in session and a vacancy occurs in an* office, appointment to which requires the confirmation of the senate, the Governor may fill the office by granting a commission uhich shall, unless such appointment is confirmed, expire at the next session of the senate; but the person sc appointed shall not be eligible for another interim appcintnent to such office if the appointment shall have failed to be ccnfirmed by the senate.

Nc person rho has been nominated for appcintment for any office and uhose appointment has not received the consent of the senate shall be eligible to an interim appointment thereafter to such office.

Every officer appointed under the provisions of this section shall he a citizen of the United States and shall have been a resident of the state for at least one year immediately preceding his appointment.

Section 8. GOVERNOR'S MESSAGES TO THE LEGISLATURE. The Governor shall at the beginning of each session and may at other times, give to the legislature information as to the affairs of state and recommend measures he considers necessary and advisable.

At the beginning of each regular session, he shall also send to the legislative assembly a statement with vouchers of the expenditures of all moneys belonging to the state and paid out by him.

He shall also at the beginning of each session, present estimates of the amount of money required to be raised by taxation for all purposes of the state.

Section 9. PARDONS. The Governor shall have power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons, after conviction, for all offenses and may delegate such powers, subject to such procedure as may be prescribed by law.

Section 10. CONVENING THE LEGISLATURE. Whenever the Governor considers it in the public interest, he may convene the legislature, either house or the two houses in joint session.

Section 11. VETO POWERS OF THE GOVERNOR. Every bill which shall have passed the senate and the house of representatives shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor. If he approves, he shall sign it: but if not he may return it with his objections to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the objections at large on its journal and proceed to reconsider the same. If after such consideration, two-thirds of the members present, which two-thirds shall include a majority of the members elected to that house, shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent together with the objections to the other house, by which it shall likewise he reconsidered and if approved by two-thirds of all members present, which two-thirds shall include a majority of the members elected to that house, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the objection.

In case the Governor shall not transmit the bill either with his approval or with his objections, within ten calendar days, Sunday and legal holidays excepted, after the same has been presented to him, it shall be a law at the expiration of that period. The Governor shall have the power to veto any particular item or items of an appropriation bill, but the veto shall not affect the item or items to which he does not object. The item or items objected to shall not take effect except in the manner heretcfcre prcvided in this sectiCn as tc bills returned to the legislature without his approval.

If the Governor approve the general purpcse of any bill, but disapprcve any part or parts therecf, be may return it with recommendations for its amendment, to the house in which it originated, whereupon the same proceedings shall be had in bcth houses upon the bill and his reccmmendaticns in relation to its amendment as is above provided in relaticn tc a hill, which he shall have returned uithcut his approval and uith his cbjections thereto; provided that, if after such reccnsideration both houses, by a vcte of a majority of the members present in each, shall agree to amend the bill in accordance with his recommendation in relation thereto or either house by such vote shall fail or refuse tc so amend it, then and in either case the bill shall be again sent tc him and he may act upon it as if it were then before him for the first time. In all cases abcve set forth, the names of the members voting fcr and against the bill, the item cr items cf an appropriation shall be entered on the jcurnal cf each house.

Section 12. SUCCESSICN TO THE CPFICES AND POWERS CF GCVERNCR AND LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR. If the Gcvernor-elect dies, resigns or is disqualified, the lieutenant Governor-elect shall succeed to the office of Governor for the full term. If the Governcr-elect fails to assume office for any cther reason, the lieutemant Governcr shall serve as acting Governor: and be shall succeed to the office of Governor if the Governor-elect does not assume his office within six months of the beginning cf his term.

In case of the removal of the Governor frcm office or his death or resignation, the lieutenant Governor shall becme Governor for the remainder of the term.

Whenever the Governor transmits to the presiding officers of the house and senate his uritten declaration that he is unable to discharge the powers and duties cf his office, and until he transmits to them a written declaration to the contrary, such powers and duties shall be exercised by the lieutenant Gcverncr as acting Governor.

Whenever the lieutenant Governor and a majority cf the heads of the executive departments transmit to the house and senate their written declaration that the Governor is unable to discharge the pooers and duties of his office, the lieutenant Governor shall immediately become the acting Governor.

Thereupon the legislature shall assemble uithin 96 hours if not in session and shall decide the issue. If the legislature. within ten days after the receipt of the latter written declaration or if not in session, within ten days after the legislature is required to assemble, determines by tao-thirds vote of the members voting in both houses tbat the Governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the lieutenant Governor shall continue to discharge the duties of acting Governor; otherwise, the Governor shall resume the powers and duties of his office.

The acting Governor shall have all the powers and duties of the Governor.

Whenever there is a vacancy in the office of lieutenant Governor, the Governor shall nominate a lieutenant Governor who shall take office upon confirmation by each house of the legislature by a majority of the members voting.

The legislature, in cases not herein provided for, may enact laws for succession to the office of Governor and lieutenant Governor.

Section 13. The legislature shall establish standard guidelines based on personal qualifications and on-the-job performance for the appointment, hiring, advancement and discontinuance of employment for all state employees other than the elected and appointed officers provided for in this constitution."

BE IT PROPOSED BY TEE CGNSTITIJTICNAL CGNVENTICN OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. Article V, Section 1 of the present Constitution is amended to read as follows:

"Section 1. ~~The legislative authority of te state shall be vested in a legislative assembly, consisting of a senate and house of representatives; but~~ The people reserve tc thenselves power to propose laws, and to enact or rejeat the same at the polls, except as to laws relating tc apprcpriations of money, and except as tc laws for the submission of constitnticnal amendments, and except as tc local or special laws, ~~as enumerated in article V, section 26, of this constitution,~~ independent of the legislative assembly; and also reserve power, at their cwn option, to approve or reject at the polls, any act of the legislative assembly, except as tc laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, or safety, and except as to laws relating to appropriations cf money, and except as to laws for the submission of constitutional amendments, and except as to local or special laws, ~~as enumerated in article V, section 26, of this constitution.~~ the people also reserve to themselves the power to remove elected officials from office. The first power reserved by the people is the initiative and eight percent of the legal voters of the state shall be required to propose any measure by petition; provided, that two-fifths of the whole number of the ~~counties~~ legislative districts cf the state must each farnish as signers of said petition eight percent of the legal voters in such ~~county,~~ district, and every such petition shall include the full text of the measure so proposed. Initiative petitions shall be filed with the secretary of state, not less than four months before the election at which they are to be voted upon.

The second power is the referendum, and it may be ordered either by petition signed by five percent of the legal voters of, the state; provided that two-fifths of the whole number of the ~~counties~~ legislative districts of the state must each furnish as signers of said petition five percent of the legal voters in such ~~county~~ district, or, by the legislative assembly as other bills are enacted.

Referendum petitions shall be filed with the secretary of state, not later than six months after the final adjournment of the session of the legislative assembly which passed the bill on which the referendum is denanded. The veto power of the Governor shall not extend to measures referred to the people by the legislative assembly or by initiative or referendum petitions.

All elections on measures referred to the people of the state shall be had at the biennial regular general election, except when the legislative assembly, by a majority vote, shall order a special election. Any measure referred to the people shall still be in full force and effect unless such petition be signed by fifteen percent of the legal voters of a majority of the whole number of the ~~counties~~ legislative districts of the state, in which case the lam shall be inoperative until such time as it shall be passed upon at an election, and the result has been determined and declared as provided by law. The whole number of votes cast for Governor at the regular election last preceding the filing of any petition for the initiative or referendum shall be the basis on which the number of legal petitions and orders for the initiative and for the referendum shall be filed with the secretary of state; and in submitting the same to the people, he, and all other officers, shall be guided by the general laws and the act submitting this amendment, until legislation shall be especially provided therefor. The enacting clause of every law originated by the initiative shall be as follows:

"Be it enacted by the people of Montana:"

This section shall not be construed to deprive any member of the legislative assembly of the right to introduce any measure.

The third power reste the people is the recall, and each elected public official of the state and of its political subdivisions is subject to recall by the voters of the area from which he is elected in the manner provided by the legislature."

A PROPOSAL REPEALING ARTICLE XII, SECTIONS 15 AND 16 ARE AMENDING ARTICLE XII, SECTION 17 OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA.

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. Article XII, Section 15 of the present Constitution which reads as follows, is repealed:

~~"Sec. 15. The board of county commissioners of ... shall constitute the county board of equalization. The duties of such board shall be to adjust and equalize the valuation of taxable property within their respective counties, and all such adjustments and equalizations may be supervised, revieved, changed, increased or decreased by the state board of equalization. The state board of equalization shall be composed of three members who shall be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate. A majority of the members of the state board of equalization shall constitute a quorum. The term of office of one of the members first appointed shall end on March 1st, 1925, of another first appointed on March 1st, 1927, and of the third first appointed on March 1st, 1929. Each succeeding member shall hold his office for the term of six years, and until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified. In case of a vacancy the person appointed to fill such vacancy shall hold office for the unexpired term in which the vacancy occurs. The qualifications and salaries of the members of the state board of equalization shall be as provided by law, provided, however, that such members shall be so selected that the board will not be composed of more than two persons who are affiliated with the same political party or organization; provided, further, that each member shall devote his entire time to the duties of the office and shall not hold any position of trust or profit, or engage in any occupation or business interfering or inconsistent with his duties as a member of such board, or serve on or under any committee of any political party or orga-~~ ~~nization, or take part, either directly or indirectly, in any political campaign in the interest of any political party or organization or candidate for office. The state board of equalization shall adjust and equalize the valuation of taxable property among the several counties, and the different classes of taxable property in any county and in the several counties and between individual taxpayers, supervise and review the acts of the county assessors and county boards of equalization; change, increase, or decrease valuations made by county assessors or equalized by county boards of equalization; and exercise such authority and do all things necessary to secure a fair, just and equitable valuation of all taxable property among counties, between the different classes of property, and between individual taxpayers. Said state board of equalization shall also have such other powers, and perform such other duties relating to taxation as may be prescribed by law."~~

Section 2. Article XII, Section 16 of the present Constitution which reads as follows, is repealed:

~~"Sec. 16. All property shall be assessed in the manner prescribed by law except as is otherwise provided in this constitution. The franchise, roadway, roadbed, rails and rolling stock of all railroads operated in more than one county in this state shall be assessed by the state board of equalization and the same shall be apportioned to the counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts in which such railroads are located, in proportion to the number of miles of railway laid in such counties, cities, towns, townships and school districts."~~

Section 3. Article XII, Section 17 of the present Constitution is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 17. The word property as used in this article is hereby declared to include moneys, credits, bonds, stocks, franchises and all matters and things. ~~(real, personal and mixed) capable of private ownership, but this shall not be construed so as to authorize the taxation of the stocks of any company or corporation when the property of such company or corporation represented by such stocks is within the state and has been taxed.~~"

(3) No bill, except general appropriation bills and bills for the codification and general revision of the laws shall be passed containing more than one subject.

(4) The general appropriation bills shall embrace nothing but appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the state, interest on the public debt and for public schools.

(5) No bill shall become a law except by a vote of a majority of all the members present in each house; nor unless the names of those voting be entered on the journal; and no law shall be revised, amended or extended, unless the revised, amended or extended part is re-enacted and published at length.

Section 9. RESTRICTIONS ON LEGISLATIVE POWER. (1) The legislature shall not pass local or special laws where a general law is or can be made applicable.

(2) Except as otherwise provided in this constitution. no law shall extend the term of any public officer.

(3) No appropriation shall be made for charitable, industrial, educational or benevolent purposes to any person, corporation or community not under the absolute control of the state, nor to any denominational or sectarian institution or association.

Section 10. IMPEACHMENT. The Governor, executive officers, heads of principal departments, judicial officers and such other officers as may be made subject to impeachment by law may be removed from office upon conviction of impeachment.

The legislature shall, by lam, provide for the manner, procedure and causes for removal by ispeachsent and may select itself as tribunal.

No conviction for impeachment shall be made except by a vote of two-thirds (2/3) or more of the members of the tribunal bearing the charges.

Such conviction shall only extend to removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office under the state, but the party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall also be liable to prosecution according to law.

Section 11. REFERENDUM AND RECALL. The people may propose and enact laws by the initiative, including constitutional amendments and approve or reject acts of the legislature by referendum.

(1) Initiative petitions must be signed by eight percent (8%) or more of the legal voters in each of one-fourth (1/4) or more of the legislative districts and the total number of signers must be eight percent (8%) or more of the (total legal) voters of the state. Each petition must contain the full text of the proposed measure and shall be confined to one subject. Petitions must be filed with the secretary of state three (3) months or more prior to the election at which they will be voted upon.

(2) A referendum may be ordered by the legislative assembly, or upon petitions signed by eight percent (8%) or more of the legal voters in each of one-fourth (1/4) or more of the legislative districts and the total number of signers must be eight percent (8%) or more of the total legal voters of the state. Petitions must be filed with the secretary of state no later than three (3) months after adjournment of the legislature.

(3) All measures referred to the people shall be voted upon at the regular biennial election unless a special election is ordered by the legislature.

(4) Measures referred to the people are in full force and effect unless suspended by petitions signed by fifteen percent (15%) or more of the (legal voters) in each legislative district and filed with the secretary of state. The measures suspended become operative if approved by a majority of the (legal 9oters) at an election.

(5) The number of legal voters for each legislative district and for the state is determined by the votes cast for Governor in the regular election immediately preceding filing of petitions for initiative or referendum.

(6) The Governor does not have the power to veto initiative or referendum measures.

(7) The initiative shall not be used to make or repeal appropriations or to enact local or special legislaticn. The referendue shall not he applied to appropriations, to local or special legislaticn or to laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety.

(8) All elected public officials in the state are subject to recall by the voters of the state or political subdivision from vhich elected. Procedure and grounds for recall shall be prescribed by the legislature.

Section 12. APPORTIONMENT. In the sessicn preaoding each federal decennial census a reapportionment commissicn shall be established by the state legislature. The commission will have the power to reapportion if the legislature fails tc dc so within sixty (60) days of the first day of the first (1st) session after the census ennaeration. The commissicn's apportionment plan shall be filed vith the secretary of state. The commission shall be balanced geographically and politically. Legislatcrs may serve on the commission but shall not be in the majority.

(1) Any person aggrieved by the preliminary plan shall have thirty (30) days to file exceptions vith the commissicn in vhich case the commission shall have thirty (30) days after the date the exceptions were filed to prepare and file a revised plan, If no exceptions vere filed within thirty (30) days, or if filed and acted upon, the commission's plan shall be final and have the force of lav.

(2) Any aggrieved person say file an appeal fror the plan directly to the supreme court vithin thirty (30) days after the filing. If the appellant establishes that the final plan is contrary to lav, the supreme court shall issue an order remanding the plan to the commission and directing the commission to reapportion and redistrict in a manner not inconsistent vith such order.

(3) When the supreme court has finally decided an appeal taken, the reapportionment plan shall have the force of the law and the districts shall be used thereafter in elections to the legislature until the next reapportionment is required.

Section 13. EMERGENCY LEGISLATION. The legislature, in crder to insure continuity of state and local governmental operations in a period of emergency resulting from a disaster caused by enemy attack may enact lavs:

(1) To provide for prompt and temporary succession to the povers and duties of elected and appointed public officers vho are killed or incapacitated.

(2) To adopt other measures that may be necessary to insure the continuity of governmental operations. Such laws shall be effective only during the emergency that affects a particular office or qcvernmental operation, and such laws may deviate frcm other provisions of the Mcntana Constitution.'

"ARTICLE ____

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

Section 1. The executive department shall ccnsist of a Governor, lieutenant Governor, secretary cf state, attorney general, state treasurer, superintendent of public instruction and state auditor, each of whom shall hcld cffice fcr four (4) years, or until a successor is elected and qualified, beginning on the first Mcnday of January next succeeding electicn. The cfficers of the executive department, excepting the lieutenant Governor, shall during their terms cf office reside at the seat of government, where they shall keep the public reccrds. They shall perform such duties as are prescribed by this ccnstitoticn and by the laws of the state.

Section 2. The officers prcvided for in Section 1 of this article, shall be elected by the qualified electcrs of the state at the time and place of voting for members of the legislative assembly, and the persons respectively, having the highest number of votes for the cffice voted for shall be elected: tot if two cr more shall have an equal and the highest number cf vctes for any one of said offices, the two houses of the legislative assembly, at its next regular session, shall by jcint ballot, elect one of the perscns tc the office. The returns of election for the officers named in Secticn 1 shall be made in a manner prescribed by law, and all contested electicns cf the same, cther than provided fcr in this section, shall be determined as prescribed by lau.

Section 3. No person shall be eligible tc the office of Governor, lieutenant Governor or superintendent of public instruction unless he has attained the age of thirty (30) years at the time of his election, nor to the office of secretary of state, state auditor, or state treasurer, unless he has attained the age of twenty-five (25) years, nor to the office of attorney general unless he has attained the age of thirty (30) years, and has been admitted to practice in the supreme court of the state, of Montana, and be in good standing at the time of his election. In addition to the qualifications above prescribed, each of the officers named shall be a citizen of the United States, and have resided within the state two (2) years next preceding his election. No elected officer of the executive department while holding an elective office shall seek or hold any other elective office.

Section 4. The lieutenant Governor, shall have the same qualifications as the Governor and shall be elected at the same election, for the same term, and in the same manner, as the Governor; provided that the votes cast in the general election for the nominee for Governor shall be deemed cast for the nominee for lieutenant Governor of the same political party. The lieutenant Governor shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by law and as may he delegated to him by the Governor, but no power specifically vested in the Governor by this constitution shall be delegated to the lieutenant Governor pursuant to this section.

Section 5. The lieutenant Governor shall have those duties as given by the Governor and shall also be F-resident of the senate, but shall vote only when the senate is equally divided. In case of the absence or disqualification of the lieutenant Governor, the president pro tempore of the senate shall perform the duties of the lieutenant Governor until the vacancy is filled or the disability removed.

Section 6. The compensation of the Governor and other executive officers shall be prescribed by law and shall not be increased or diminished during a single term of office.

Section 7. The executive power of the state shall be vested in the Governor, who shall see that the laws of the state are faithfully executed.

Section 8. The Governor shall be the commander-in-chief of the military forces of the state, except when these forces are in the actual service of the United States, and shall have power to call out any part of the whole of said forces to aid in the execution of the laws, to suppress insurrection or repel invasion.

Section 9. The Governor may proclaim martial law when the public safety requires it in case of rebellion or actual or imminent invasion. Martial law shall not continue for longer than twenty (20) days without the approval of a majority of the members of the legislature in joint session.

Section 10. The Governor shall nominate, and by and with the consent of the senate, appoint all officers whose offices are established by this constitution, or which may be created by law, and whose appointment or election is not otherwise provided for. If during a recess of the senate a vacancy occurs in any such office, the Governor shall appoint some fit person to discharge the duties thereof until the next meeting of the senate, when he shall nominate some person to fill such office. If the office of secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, attorney general or superintendent of public instruction shall be vacated by death, resignation or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the Governor to fill the same by appointment, and the appointee shall hold his office until his successor shall be elected and qualified.

Section 11. All executive and administrative offices, boards, bureaus, commissions, agencies and instrumentalities of the executive department of state government and their respective functions, powers, and duties, except for the office of Governor, lieutenant Governor, secretary of state, attorney general, state treasurer, state auditor and superintendent of public instruction shall be allocated by law among and within not more than twenty (20) departments. Subsequently, all new powers or functions shall be assigned to departments, divisions, sections, or units in such manner as will tend to provide an orderly arrangement in the administrative organization of state government. Temporary commissions may be established by law and need not be allocated within a principal department.

Section 12. The Governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after conviction, reinstate citizenship and may suspend and remit fines and forfeitures subject to procedures prescribed by law.

Section 13. The Governor shall at the beginning of each legislative session, and may at other times, give the legislature information and recommend measures he considers necessary. The Governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail, for all operating funds, the proposed expenditures and estimated revenue of the state.

Section 14. Whenever the Governot considers it in the public interest, he may convene the legislature, either house, or the two houses in joint session. At the written request of two-thirds (2/3) of the members of each house, the presiding officers of both houses shall convene the legislature in special session.

Section 15. Every bill passed by the legislative assembly, except bills proposing amendments to the Montana Constitution and bills ratifying proposed amendments to the United States Constitution which may not be vetoed by the Governor, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governcr. He shall either sign it, whereupon it shall beccme a law, cr he shall return it with his objections to the house in uhich it criginated, which house shall enter the objections at large upcn its journal and proceed to reconsider the bill. If two-thirds (2/3) of the me*-bers present agree to repass the same, it shall be sent, together with the cbjections, tc the cther house, by which it shall like-wise be reconsidered, and if repassed by tuc-thirds (2/3) of the members present in that house it shall become a law notwithstand-ing the objections of the Gcvernor. If any bill is nct returned by the Governor within five (5) days (Sunday excepted) after it has been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like man-ner as if he had signed it, unless the legislative assembly shall by their adjcurnment prevent its return. Within twenty-five (25) days after the adjcurnment of the legislature, the Gcverncr shall consider all bills not disposed cf pricr tc adjournment. He shall either sign such bills into law; or if he fails tc approve any bill, he shall return it uith his cbjections tc the presiding official of the house in which it criginated. The legislature, as provided in Secticn 14, may reccrvene itself to reconsider any bills sc returned by the Governor.

The Governcr, in returning with his cbjecticns a bill fcr reconsideration, may recommend that an amendment cr amendments specified by him be made in the bill, and in such case the legis-lative assembly may amend and re-enact the bill. If a bill be cc amended and re-enacted, it shall be presented again to the Gover-nor, but shall become a law only if be shall sign it within ten (10) days after presentaticn; and no bill shall be returned by the Governor a second time.

Secticn 16. The legislative assembly shall prcvide a seal fcr the state, which shall be kept by the secretary cf state and used by him officially, and known as the great seal of the state of Mcntana.

Section 17. All grants and commissicns shall be in tbe name and by the authority of the state cf Mcntana, sealed with the great seal of the state, signed by the Gcverncr, and ccunter-signed by the secretary cf state.

Section 18. In case cf the failure tc gualify, the impeach-ment or conviction of felcny or infamous crime of the Gcvernor, or his death, removal frcm cffice, resignation, absence from the state, or inability to discharge the powers and duties cf his office, the powers, duties and emcluments cf the office, for the residue cf the term, or until the disability shall cease, shall devolve upon the lieutenant Governor.

Section 19. The lieutenant Gcvernor shall be president of the senate, but shall vcte only when the senate is equally divided. In case of the absence or disqualification cf the lieu-tenant Governor, from any cause uhich applies tc the Governor, or when he shall hold the office of Governor, then the president pro tempore of the senate shall perform the duties of the lieutenant Governor until the vacancy is filled or the disability removed.

Section 20. In case of the failure to qualify in his office, death, resignation, absence from the state, impeachment, conviction of felony or infamous crime, or disqualification from any cause, of both the Governor and the lieutenant Governor, the duties of the Governor shall devolve upon the president pro tempore of the senate until such disqualification of either the Governor or the lieutenant Governor be removed, or the vacancy filled, and if the president pro tempore of the senate, for any of the above named causes, shall become incapable of performing the duties of Governor, the same shall devolve upon the speaker of the house.

Section 21. The Governor may rule out amounts in appropriation bills passed by the legislature and the procedure in such cases shall be the same as in the case of the disapproval of an entire bill by the Governor."

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The General Government and Constitutional Amendment Committee submits herewith a proposed Suffrage and Elections Article. The proposed Article is intended to replace all sections of the present Constitution dealing with suffrage and elections.

The committee addressed itself to the fundamental problems concerning suffrage and elections. The committee worked with the basic purpose of making the electoral process as effective and meaningful as possible for the individual Montanan. In doing so the committee gave careful consideration to several citizen and delegate proposals. Our end product is composed of a majority and a minority report. In signing either report, a Committee member does not necessarily endorse each and every statement in it.

The committee utilized the services of the following people: James Grady (Research Analyst), Bobbie Murphy (Secretary) and Robert Skaggs (Intern).

COMMENTS ON MAJORITY PROPOSAL

Section 1. All elections by the people shall be by secret ballot.

The wording in this section differs from the present Article IX, section 1 only in that it includes the word "secret." The committee feels that the guarantee of secrecy in voting is important enough to warrant inclusion in the Constitution.

Section 2. Any citizen of the United States who is 18 years of age or older, and meets the registration and residence requirements of the state and political subdivision is a qualified elector, except that no person who is serving a sentence for a felony in a penal institution or who is judged of unsound mind by a Court may vote.

This section embodies all of the proposed Constitutional qualification for and disqualifications from voting. In the 1889 Constitution, these qualifications and disqualifications are scattered through six sections of Article IX. The proposed Article Constitutionally gives the legislature tha major burden for establishing explicit registration and residence requirements. The rationale for individual segments of section 2 follows:

"(a) Any citizen of the United States who is 18 years of age or older,. . . "

Eighteen is the voting age for all elections as established by the 26th Amendment to the national Constitution. The 1971 Montana Legislature was among the state legislatures that ratified the amendment.

"(b) . . . and meets the registration and residence requirements of the state and political subdivision is a qualified elector,.."

This section is self-explanatory.

"(c) . . . except that no person who is serving a sentence for a felony in a penal institution or who is judged of unsound mind by a Court may vote . . ."

The present Constitution automatically disenfranchises felons (Article IX, section 2), and extends this disenfranchisement even after the person is released from prison. The convicted felon must apply for often difficult-to-receive pardons before he may again vote. The committee feels that this system of permanent punishment is contrary to the best interests of society, in that it does nothing to aid rehabilitation of a criminal. Indeed, a provision disenfranchising a felon attaches a stigma to the person, and hinders rehabilitation. Additionally, a disqualification provision flys in the face of the rational for prisoner release: The presumption is that when a man comes out of prison he should be encouraged to resume normal civic relationships.

As for the provision disenfranchising those adjudicated as "unsound" in mind, the committee feels that with the new and ever-expanding developments in mental hygiene, it is unwise to freeze arbitrary mental disqualifications by label into the Constitution. Consequently, the committee has left such decisions for judges to make on an individual case basis.

Section 3. The legislature shall provide by law the requirements for residency, registration, absentee voting and administration of elections.

This section allows the legislature to determine the voting residency and registration requirements. In a large part this has been done by section 23-2701, Revised Codes of Montana, 1947, which established the residency period for most elections at 33 days. This statute, enacted in 1971, conflicts with the present Constitutional requirements of one year, though this section has a proposed amendment which would change the time limit to 33 days. Approximately 63% of the states include specific residency and registration requirements in their Constitutions, but most of the newer state Constitutions follow the example of the proposed article and leave those matters to the legislative assembly. This section will help avoid conflict with rapidly changing federal laws and court decisions.

This section also allows the legislature to determine the time that all elections are held. The committee closely examined several delegate proposals regarding constitutionally establishing the grouping and scheduling of elections. It is the committee's considered opinion that the legislature is capable of scheduling and providing administration for all elections. The committee is extremely reluctant to freeze "for all time" the schedule and administration process of all elections.

Section 4. Any person qualified to vote at general elections and for state officers in this state is eligible to any public office except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, subject to any additional qualifications provided by the legislature.

This section enables any Montana voter to participate as an office holder in the electoral process. It does not prohibit the legislature from establishing necessary technical qualifications for specialized jobs (say licensed attorney for the office of attorney general), but it does stop the legislature from Creating arbitrary age qualifications for certain offices.

Section 5. In all elections held by the people under

This section is identical to article IX, section 13 of the present Constitution, and merely guarantees the tradition of majority rule. The committee feels its retention is necessary as both a statement of principle and a practical directive.

As can be seen in Appendix A, the proposed Suffrage and Elections Article deletes several provisions contained in the present Constitution, Article IX. These sections. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, and 12, have either been superseded by judicial review or federal action or do not have enough redeeming value to be left in the Constitution. Discussion by section of these sections of the present Constitution follows:

> "Sec. 3. For the purpose of voting no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the state, or of the United states, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of the state, or of the United States, nor while a student at any institution of learning, nor while kept at any almshouse or other asylum at the public expense, nor while confined in any public prison."

Section 3 does not limit anyone from establishing residency in Montana, if the person is otherwise eligible, if that person can show an honest intent to do so. This section is ineffectual, and covered in the proposed section 3.

> "Sec. 4. Electors shall in all cases, except treason, felony or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at elections and in going to and returning therefrom."

Section 4 given all its exceptions, is of little value and can be implemented just as effectively by legislation. There is no comparable section in the proposed article.

> "Sec. 5. No elector shall be obliged to perform military duty on the days of election, except in time of war or public danger."

Section 5 serves no real function, and is probably not enforceable. Consequently, there is no comparable section in the proposed article.

> "Sec. 6. No soldier, seaman or marine in the army or navy of the United States shall be deemed a resident of this state in consequence of being stationed at any military or naval place within the same."

Section 6 suffers from the same limitations as section 3 and is redundant with that section. It too has no comparable section in the proposed article, though its basic intent is covered in proposed section 3.

"Sec. 7. NO person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state, civil or military, who is not a citizen of the United states, and who shall not have resided in this state at least one year next before his election or appointment."

"Sec. 10. All persons possessing the qualifications for suffrage prescribed by section 2 of this article as amended and such other qualifications as the legislative assembly may by law prescribe, shall be eligible to hold the office of county superintendent of schools or any other school district office."

Sections 7 and 10 are of parallel intent with section 11 of the present Constitution, and as such are revised by section 4 of the proposed article.

"Sec. 12. Upon all questions submitted to the vote of the taxpayers of the state, or any political division thereof, women who are taxpayers and possessed of the qualifications for the right of suffrage required of men by this Constitution, shall equally with men have the right to vote."

Section 12 is nationally unconstitutional on two counts: property qualification for voting and implied disenfranchisement on a sexual basis. There is no comparable section in the proposed article.

All of the other sections of Article IX of the present Constitution have been incorporated or revised in the proposed article.

MINORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT AND CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on the Legislature to read as follows:

ARTICLE ---

Section 1. All elections by the people shall be by secret ballot.

Section 2. Any citizen of the United States who is eighteen (18) years of age or older, and meets the registration and residence requirements of the state and political subdivision is a qualified elector, except that no person who is serving a sentence for a felony in a penal institution or who is judged of unsound mind by a court may vote.

Section 3. The legislature shall provide by law the requirements for residency, absentee voting and administration of elections. Voter registration prior to election day shall not be a condition for voting. The legislature shall provide for a system of poll booth registration, insure the purity of elections and guard against abuses of the electoral process.

Section 4. Any person qualified to vote at general elections and for state officers in this state, is eligible to any public office except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, subject to any additional qualifications provided by the legislature.

Section 5. In all elections held by the people under this Constitution, the person or persons receiving the highest number of legal votes is elected.

/s/ Robert Vermillion /s/ Peter "Pete" Iorello

COMMENTS CN MINORITY PROPOSAI

The minority proposal differs from the majority prcpcsal only in its wcrding cf sectien 3. The minority wording is as follcws:

> Section 3. The legislature shall provide by law the requirements for residence, absentee vcting and administration of elections. voter ragistraticn prior to election day shall not be a condition for voting. The legislature shall provide for a system of poll bccth registraticn, insure the purity cf elections and guard against abuses of the electoral process.

CCMMENTS

The main purpose of the rincrity prcpcsal on Suffrage and Elections is centered on the word "registraticn" in section 3. The change in the wording is aimed Primarily at eliminating antiquated requirements which unnecessarily burden the potential voter. The primary purpose for registration laws is to prevent fraud, yet North Dakota has had pcll booth registration for twenty-cne (21) years. Poll bccth registration provides that the voter say register at the time acd place cf voting. As Professor Lloyd omdahl stated in his study of the effect of pcll bocth reqistraticn in North Dakota that since 1951 nct cne vcting inspector in the state has ever requested legal actien against a supposedly unqualifiad elector.

The thrust of the nincrity prcposal is that the requirement to vote is a basic right which shculd nct be abridged without very strcng reasons. Therefore, the burden of proof for showing the necessity of registration rests with those who would maintain registraticn laws. They must show first that there is a great threat cf vcter fraud in the state of Mcntana and secondly, that laws governing pcll booth registration would not deter abuses cf the franchise. It is not the minority proposal which must show a need for registration because of possible voter fraud, but rather the supporters of registration who must show that there will be voter fraud. The voters of Montana must be assumed innocent until prcven guilty.

The questica arises: Should the Constitution leave matters regarding registration tc the Legislature? Since the right to vote is basic and it has been thwarted through outdated ragistraticn procedures, the Legislature has denied the right to vote and therefore, it must be set forth in the Constitution.

lature to pass laws to keep the election process free of fraud. Poll booth registration has been proven effective in North Dakota, the likelihood of fraud is minimal and such a system must be adopted in Montana.

PROPOSALS CONSIDERED BY COMMITTEE

The following delegate proposals were examined and considered by the committee during its deliberations:

Number of Proposal	Chief Sponsor	Subject Matter and Disposition
1. 29	Erdmann	This proposal would hold school elections in conjunction with other elections. The committee feels this matter should be decided by the legislature, and provided for such consideration under section 3 of the proposed Article.
2. 47	Cain	This proposal would establish three types of elections. The committee feels this matter should be decided by the legislature, and provided for such consideration under section 3 of the proposed Article.
3. 82	Brown	This substance of this proposal comprises the committee report.
4. 95	Erdmann	This proposal Constitutionally provided for auxiliary canvassing boards. The committee feels this is a legislative decision, and allows the legislature to do so in Sec. 3 of the proposed article.
5. 131	Bugbee	This proposal provides for a system of poll booth registration, essentially eliminating registration for voting. The committee carefully considered such a measure, but feels that the legislature should make such a determination, as administration of elections can best be handled by the legislature. The committee allows the legislature to do so in section 3 of the proposed article.

6.	147	Cate	This proposal provides for a presidential primary system in Montana. The committee feels the history of such systems in Montana shows that such systems should not be Constitutionally created. However, under the proposed Article, the legislature could provide for such a system.
7.	178	McKeon	The basic difference between this proposal and the proposed Article is a system similar to the one in Delegate Proposal 131, and was not adopted for the same reasons.

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT AND CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Constitutional Revision to read as follows:

ARTICLE___

CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

Section 1. CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION. (1) The legislature, by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the members, may at any time submit to the electors of the state the question of whether there shall be an unlimited convention to revise, alter, or amend this Constitution.

(2) The people may by initiative petition request the legislative assembly to submit to the voters of the state the question of whether there shall be an unlimited convention to revise, alter, or amend this Constitution. The petition must be signed by a least ten percent of the legal voters of the state, which shall include at least ten percent of the legal voters in two-fifths of the legislative representative districts of the state.

The petition shall be filed with the Secretary of State, who shall certify the filing thereof to the legislative assembly and cause the question to be submitted to the voters at the general election immediately following the legislative session receiving notice of the filing of said petition.

(3) If the question of holding a convention is not otherwise submitted to the people at some time during any period of 20 years, it shall be submitted at the general election in the twentieth year following the last submission of such question.

(4) The legislature, prior to a popular vote on the holding of a convention, shall provide for a preparatory commission to assemble information on Constitutional questions, to assist the voters, and, if a convention is authorized, continued for the assistance of the delegates.

(5) If a majority of those voting on the question shall declare in favor of such convention, the legislative assembly shall at its next session provide for the calling thereof. The number of members of the convention shall be the same as the largest body of the legislative assembly. The legislature may determine whether the delegates shall be elected after nomination by political parties, or cn a non-partisan basis, but they shall be elected at the same places and in the same districts as the legislative body determining the number of delegates.

(6) The legislative assembly shall, in the act calling the convention, designate the day, hcur and place cf its meeting, fix the pay of its members and officers, and prc-vide for the payment of the same, tcgether with the neces-sary expenses cf the ccnvention.

(7) Before proceeding, the members shall take the cath otherwise provided in this Cccstituticn. The qualifications of members shall be the same as the highest qualificatcns required for membership in the legislature. Vacancies occurring shall be filled in the manner prcvided for filling vacancies in the legislative assembly, cr as cthrruise prc-vided by law.

(8) The ccnvtnticn shall meet within three months after the electicn of the delegates and prepare such revi-sions, alterations or amendments to the Ccnstituticn as may be deemed necessary, which shall be submitted to the elec-tors for their ratificatcn or rejectico as a whole or in separate articles cr amendments as determined by the ccnven-tion and at an electicn appointed by the convention for that purpose, or at the next general election, but not lass than two months after the adjournment therecf. Unless so submit-ted and approved b y a majority cf the electcrs vcting thereon, no such revision, alteratien or amendment shall take effect.

(9) Unless otherwise provided, any revisicn becomes effective on the first day cf July after the cfrtificatcn of the election returns by the Secretary cf State.

Section 2. CONSTITUTICNAL AMENDMENT BY THE LEGIS-LATURE. Amendments tc this Constitutcn may be proposed by any member of the legislative assembly. If adopted by an affirmative roll call vcte of two-thirds cf all the members thereof, whether one cr more bodies, the propcsed amendment shall become a part of the Ccnstitutcn when approved by either of the fcllowing procedures:

(1) The legislative assembly may refer the prcposed amendment to the voters of the state cf Hcntana to be voted on in the next general election held in the state. In such event the Secretary cf State shall cause the amendment or amendments to be published in full in at least one newspaper in each county in which a newspaper is published, twice each month fcr the two months previcus to the next general elec-tion for members to the legislative assembly. If approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, the amendment shall become a part of this Constitution on the first day of July after certification of the election returns unless the amendment otherwise provides; or

(2) The legislative assembly by a majority roll call vote, may elect not to refer the amendment to the vote of the electors of Montana as provided in the preceding subsection (1) in which event the amendment shall be presented to the next succeeding legislative assembly after a general election. If adopted by a two-thirds vote of the members of such legislative assembly, the amendment shall become a part of this Constitution on the first day of July following its approval unless a petition is filed with the Secretary of State signed by five percent of the legal voters of the state requesting such amendment be referred to a vote of the people as provided in this Constitution for referendum, in which event the amendment shall not become effective until the Secretary of State certifies its approval by a majority of those voting thereon.

Section 3. CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT BY INITIATIVE. The people of Montana may also propose Constitutional amendments by initiative process. Petitions shall include the full text of the proposed amendment and shall be signed by not less than 15 percent of the legal voters in Montana, which shall include at least 15 percent of the legal voters in two-fifths of the legislative representative districts of Montana. The petitions shall be filed with the Secretary of State, who shall cause the same to be checked and certified as to the validity of the signatures thereon and, if found to be signed by the required number of voters, cause the same to be published in full in at least one newspaper in each county (if such there be) twice each month for two months previous to the next regular state-wide election, at which time the proposed amendment shall be voted on.

At said election the proposed amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors of the state for their approval or rejection. If approved by a majority voting thereon it shall become a part of the Constitution effective the first day of July following its approval, unless otherwise provided in the amendment.

Section 4. LEGAL VOTERS. The number of votes cast for the office of Governor in the general election immediately preceding the filing of the petition shall determine the number of legal voters.

Section 5. SUBMISSION. Should more amendments than one be submitted at the same election, they shall be so prepared and distinguished by numbers or otherwise that each can be voted upon separately.

Section 6. GUBERNATORIAL VETC. Ihe veto pcwer Of the Governor shall nct extend tc prcpcsed Ccnstituticnal revisicns or amendments.

COMMENTS OF MAJORITY PROPOSAL

Section 1. (1) The legislature, by a affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the members, may at ary time submit to the electors of the state the question of whether there shall be an unlimited convention to revise, alter, or amend this Constitution.

(2) The people may by initiative petition request the legislative assembly to submit to the voters of the state the question of whether there shall be an unlimited convention to revise, alter, or amend this Constitution. The petition must be signed by a least ten percent of the legal voters of the state, which shall include at least ten percent of the legal voters in two-fifths of the legislative representative districts of the state.

The petition shall be filed with the Secretary of State, who shall certify the filing thereof to the legislative assembly and cause the question to be submitted to the voters at the general election immediately following the legislative session receiving notice of the filing of said petition.

(3) If the question of holding a convention is not otherwise submitted to the people at some time during any period of twenty years, it shall be submitted at the general election in the twentieth year following the last submission of such question.

(4) The legislature, prior to a popular vote on the holding of a convention, shall provide for a preparatory commission to assemble information on Constitutional questions, to assist the voters, and, if a convention is authorized. continued for the assistance of the delegates.

(5) If a majority of those voting on the question shall declare in favor of such convention, the legislative assembly shall at its next session provide for the calling thereof. The number of members of the convention shall be thr same as the largest body of the legislative assembly. The legislature may determine whether the delegates shall be elected after noninaticn by political parties, or on a non-partisan basis, but they shall be elected at the same places and in the same districts as the legislative body determining the number of delegates.

(6) The legislative assembly shall, in the act calling the convention, designate the day, hour and place of its meeting, fix the pay of its members and officers, and provide for the payment of the same, together with the necessary expenses of the convention.

(7) Before proceeding, the members shall take the oath otherwise provided in this Constitution. The qualifications of members shall be the same as the highest qualifications required for membership in the legislature. Vacancies occurring shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the legislative assembly, or as otherwise provided by law.

(8) The convention shall meet within three months after the election of the delegates and prepare such revisions, alterations or amendments to the Constitution as may be deemed necessary, which shall be submitted to the electors for their ratification or rejection as a whole or in separate articles or amendments as determined by the convention and at an election appointed by the convention for that purpose, or at the next general election, but not less than two months after the adjournment thereof. Unless so submitted and approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, no such revision, alteration or amendment shall take effect.

(9) Unless otherwise provided, any revision becomes effective on the first day of July after the certification of the election returns by the Secretary of State.

sec. 1. (1) The legislature, by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the members, may at any time submit to the electors of the state the question of whether there shall ha an unlimited convention to revise, alter, or amend this Coostitution.

This subsection is identical to the first part of Article XIX, section 8 of the present Constitution. The committee feels that given the additional provisions of the proposed article on Constitutional revision, this portion of the proposed article is adequate.

Sec. 1. (2) The people may by initiative petition request the legislative assembly to submit to the voters of the state the yuestion of whether there shall be an unlimited conventior to revise, alter, or amend this Constitution. The petition must be signed by at least ten percent of the legal voters of the state. which shall include at least ten percent of the legal voters in two-fifths of the legislative representative districts of the state.

The petition shall be filed with the Secretary of State, who shall certify the filing thereof to the legislative assembly and cause the question to be submitted to the voters at the general election immediately following the legislative session receiving notice of the filing of said petition.

The people of Montana do not now have the power to call a Constitutional convention by the initiative. The committee feels that this is a basic political right of the peopleUnder a government line Montana's. The committee set the petition qualification, at ten percent of the legal voters of the state, with the additional qualification that at least ten percent of the legal voters of the state in two-fifths of the legislative representative districts of the state be included in that percentage, because it feels such a number is high enough to prevent frivolous attempts at Constitutional change and yet low enough to insure citizen Constitutional control. The division of the percentage of petitioners by legislative representative districts helps insure a somewhat diversified body of petitioners on a successful petition without violating the principle of one-man, one-vote. It should be noted that this provision (and all subsequent provisions) in its phrase "legislative assembly" allows the provision to keep its intent and internal integrity in either a bicameral or unicameral situation.

> sec. 1. (3) if the question of holding a convention is not otherwise submitted to the people at some time during any period of twenty years, it shall be submitted at the general election in the twentieth year following the last submission of such question.

Subsection 3 of section 1 is a further guarantee that the peoplewill retain a firm hold on the power of constituting government. This provision calls for the consideration of a Constitutional convention at least once every 20 years. The committee feels periodic consideration strengthens rather than weakens a Constitution and a government, as it builds into the Constitution recognition of and a remedy for changing times. While there is no magic number that precisely delineates the different Constitutional periods, the committee feels on the average it would take at least 20 years for political changes and their relationship to the Constitution to be clear. A shorter period of time may subject the Constitution to changes based more on short term whimsy than considered need. A longer period may breed dangerous stagnation into the body politic.

> sec. 1. (4) The legislature, prior to a popular vote on the holding of a convention, shall provide for a preparatory commission to assemble information on Constitutional questions, to assist the voters, and, if a convention is authorized, continued for the assistance of the delegates.

Subsection 4 of section 1 was added by the committee on the basis of their experience at the convention. The committee believes that without preparatory work, any Constitutional convention would be traversing trcubled waters in a flimsy craft.

> sec. 1. (5) If a majority cf thcse vcting on the question shall declare in favcr cf such ccnventicn, the legislative assembly shall at its next ssssicn prcvide for the calling thereof. The number of members of the convention shall be the save as the largest bcdy of the legislative assembly. The legislature may determine whether the delegates shall be elected after ncminaricn by pclitical parties, cr on a ncn-partisan basis, but they shall be elected at the same places and in the same districts as the legislative body determining the number cf delegates.

Subsection 5 of section 1 mandates the legislative assembly to provide for the calling of the conventicn, and tc scme degree dictates the manner in which the convention shall be called and initially organized. The ccmmittee feels this is necessary, as without some clear directions, the convention though scheduled and called, could be togged dcwr befcre it ever gets off the grcund.

The committee heard testimcny on several delegate prcpcsals (See Appendix B) calling for determinaticn of the political complexicn of any future convention. The ccmmittee after careful consideration. feels the present Ccnctitutiocn should nct make such a determination. The pclitical climate cf Montana and indeed the whole country is such that the prcblems cf partisanship and political parties as we know them tcday may be quaint hictcrical anachronism tomcrrcw. If, in 2052 (EC years hence), another Constitutional conventicn is called and the Montana pclicy is characterized by tcwn meeting type councils, then partisan provisions would be wholly inapplicable. If the Ccnstitutiocn ccntains partisan provisions, there is alsc the danger that future electcrates may be vexed and irritated by thcse prcvisicns as many of the Mcntana electorate were at the mandated &artisan nature cf this convention.

> sec. 1. (E) The legislative assembly shall, in the act calling the conventicn, designate the day, hcur and place of its meeting, fix the pay cf its members and officers, and provide for the payment cf the same, together with the necessary expenses of the ccnvention.

Subsection 6 was designed by the committee as a prctectiocn device for future Ccnstitutiocnal ccnventicns. Throughout history (ncteably in the Western European traditicn) cbstreperous and unresponsive representative bodies had thwarted the will of their constitutients by tokenism. The legislature may call a ccnvention, or it may be confronted with the fait accompli, through initiative, but it could frustrate popular will by withcldding the necessary materials and funds, thus destroying the ccnvertion's ability to do anything.

sec. 1. (7) Before proceeding the members shall take the oath otherwise provided in this Constitution. The qualifications of members shall be the same as the highest qualifications required for membership in the legislature. Vacancies occurring shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the legislative assembly, or as otherwise provided by law.

Subsection 7 was designed by the committee to help insure continuity of the convention itself. Again, the committee feels such measures are necessary to assist future conventions in their task, and that such assistance should be provided in the Constitution.

sec. 1. (8) The convention shall meet within three months after the election of the delegates and prepare such revisions, alterations or amendments to the Constitution as may be deemed necessary, which shall be submitted to the electors for their ratification or rejection as a whole or in separate articles or amendments as determined by the convention for that purpose, or at the next general election, but not less than two months after the adjournment thereof. Unless so submitted and approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, no such revision, alteration or amendment shall take effect.

Subsection 8 was also designed to help structure future conventions, but as with other sections, the structuring is flexible enough to allow for changing conditions.

sec. 1. (9) Unless otherwise provided, any revision becomes effective on the first day of July after the certification of the election returns by the Secretary of state.

Subsection 9 allows the convention to provide for its own adoption schedule, and it also provides a general guideline and a schedule should some revision not be scheduled by the convention.

Section 2. CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT. Amendments to this Constitution may be proposed by any member of the legislative assembly. If adopted by an affirmative roll call vote of two-thirds of all the members thereof, whether one or more bodies, the proposed amendment shall become a part of the Constitution when approved by either of the following procedures:

(1) The legislative assembly may refer the proposed amendment to the voters of the state of Montana to be voted on in the next general election held in the state. In such event the Secretary of State shall cause the amendment or amendments to be published in full in at least one newspaper in each county in which a newspaper is published, twice each month for the two months previous to the next general election for members to the legislative assembly. If approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, the amendment shall become a part of this Constitution on the first day of July after certification of the election returns unless the amendment otherwise provides; or

(2) The legislative assembly by 3 majority roll call vote, may elect not to refer the amendment to the vote of the electors of Montana as provided in the preceding subsection (1) in which event the amendment shall be presented to the next succeeding legislative assembly after a general election. If adopted by a two-thirds vote of the members of such legislative assembly, the amendment shall become a part of this Constitution on the first day of July following its approval unless a petition is filed with the Secretary of State signed by five percent of the legal voters in the state requesting such amendment be referred to a vote of the people as provided in this Constitution for referendum, in which event the amendment shall not become effective until the Secretary of State certifies its approval by a majority of those voting thereon.

The introductory paragraph to this section establishes one method by which constitutional amending may be commenced. It is important to note that two-thirds of the members of the total membership of the legislative assembly is required to begin the amending process. This means that in a bicameral situation with 20 members in the upper house and 40 members in the lower house, a vote of the lower house would be sufficient to begin on the vote of 20 members of the upper house and 1? members of the lower house, or any 2/3 mixture of the membership.

The committee feels such a measure is restrictive enough to prevent frivolous legislative action, yet is open enough to overcome stringent opposition of a few well-placed members of one bicameral house. If the provision were 2/3 of the members of both houses in our hypothetical legislature 7 members of the upper house could thwart the wishes of their 53 fellow legislators. In that situation, the plurality of elected officials necessary to achieve a legislatively originated Constitution amendment is 90 percent or 9/10 rather than 2/3.

To facilitate flexibility, the committee has provided for two proposed methods of constitutional amendment by the legislature. The first procedure (outlined in subsection 1 of section 2) is analagous to the method of amending the Constitutioc in the present Constitution's Article XIX, section 9. The proposed section, however, does not go into the cumbersome procedural detail contained in the present Constitution. This cumbersome detail has been a burden to often-popular Constitutional change. In one instance the Supreme Court of Montana voided a proposed Constitutional amendment for the slight procedural irregularity of failure to follow the Constitutional directive in Article XIX, section 9 and enter the proposed amendment in full in the journals of both houses [Dufree, v. Harper, 22 Mont. 354 (1899)]

Subsection 2 of section 2 provides for a new method of Constitutional amendment. After the legislature has once passed a proposed amendment by the required 2/3 vote, it is referred to the next legislative assembly. If the proposed amendment again passes the assembly by the necessary 2/3 vote, the amendment takes effect on the specified day. The people have a check on this process, as they can, with a petition from five percent of the voters, cause such an amendment to be directly voted on by the people. The small percentage of required petitioners makes this check on legislative abuse extremely viable.

One of the bigger assets of this new method of Constitutional amendment is recency. Legislative action is much cheaper than popular action when the cost of an election is compared with the cost of a fairly routine legislative function, the passage of a bill. Yet the state does not lose careful consideration to economic benefit. The people, in addition to the explicit check of petition previously discussed, have the check of making their views known in the time span between legislative sessions. They also have the opportunity to choose those who make the final decision after the substance of the decision has been stated.

> Section 3. The people Of Montana may also propose Constitutional amendments by initiative process. Petitions shall include the full text of the proposed amendment and shall be signed by not less than 15 percent of the legal voters in Montana, which shall include at least 15 percent of the legal voters in two-fifths of the legislative representative districts of Montana. The petitions shall be filed with the Secretary of State, who shall cause the same to be checked and certified as to the validity of the signatures thereon and, if found to be signed by the required number of voters, cause the same to be published in full in at least one newspaper in each county (if such there be) twice each month for two months previous to the next regular state-wide election, at which time the proposed amendment shall be voted on.
> At said election the proposed amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors of the state for their approval or rejection. If approved by a majority voting thereon it shall become a part of the Constitution effective the first day of July followuing its approval, unless otherwise provided in the amendment.

Section 3 of the proposed article creates a new power for the people of Montana, the right to initiate Constitutional amendments. The committee feels this is an inherent right in a body politic whose Constitution is to be the embodiment of the will of the people. The committee's proposal sets up the exact machinery for expressing this will through establishment of the petition requirements and the administration process. The 15 percent petition requirement and the geographical requirement are high, but the committee feels it is not unreasonable to demand strict standards when dealing with something as fundamental and important as Constitutional change. Although the standard is high, the committee does not feel it is so high that pressing popular and needed Constitutional reforms could not be initiated by the people. The standard, the committee feels, will operate to check erratic whimsy.

> Section 4. The number of votes cast for the office of Governor in the general election immediately preceding the filing of the petition shall determine the number of legal voters.

Section 4 of the Article is merely an administrative and technical section in that it defines the number of legal voters for computation of the petition requirements. It does not and cannot be used to infringe and inhibit the initiative and referendum processes through technical circumvention. Indeed, this section, by setting up such a standard, guards against such abuses.

> Section 5. Should more amendments than one be submitted at the same election, they shall be so prepared and distinguished by number or otherwise that each can be voted upon separately.

Section 5 is designed to aid voters in casting their votes on Constitutional issues, and as a check on the possible action of grouping several issues under one innocuous title.

> Section 6. The veto power of the Governor shall not extend to proposed Constitutional revisions or amendments.

The committee feels that one man, the Governor, should not have the power to override proposed Constitutional measures when the requirements for proposing those measures are as stringent as this article creates.

The proposed articles on Constitutional revision are lengthy and at times somewhat detailed. However, the committee feels this necessary. This is the article that to a large degree determines whether this Constitution, and through it the state, will be flexible or frozen, responsive or rigid, basic or erratic. In order to hit a happy and workable medium in the dilemma of those determinations, the process for control and change of a Constitution must be clear. This clarity can be thwarted by a two-edged sword: On the one hand, there must be enough detail to spell out procedure and readily accomplish desired ends. On the other hand the detail must not proliferate and degenerate into entrapping trivia that obscures and thwarts the desired end. The committee feels this proposed article solves the problem.

To: MONTANA CONSTITUTICNAL CCNVENTICN

From: Legislative Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The Legislative Committee submits herewith a prcpcsed new Legislative Article which combines Article V and Article VI cf the present Ccnstituticn. The proposed article is intended to replace all secticnc of Article V and Article VI of the present Constitution with the excepticns cf the prccedure for suhmittinq initiative and referendum petitions, and the procedures for legislative action in times cf emerqancy, which were assigned to the committee cn General Government.

Throughout its deliberaticns, the committee has addressed itself to drawing up, to the best cf its ability and judgment, a proposed Legislative Article containing chcices between a bicameral and a unicameral Legislature. The bicameral and unicameral proposals are both submitted as majority reports.

It is the committee's reccmmendation that the unicameral and bicameral proposals should te presented on the ballot as alternative legislative articles.

The proposed revisions in the majority reports include major substantive changes, prccedural and technical improvements, and stylistic changes in the language. Morecver, the Legislative Committee proposes a more coherent and unified organization of the article than the existing cne.

The unicameral and bicameral reports, fcr the most Fart, differ only as to the structure of the legislature.

Minority reports express variance from the thinking of the majority of the members.

The members of this Committee, by signing the majority report, do not necessarily endorse each and every statement contained therein; and minority reports on various sections are also presented in this report.

The committee utilized the testimony of many witnesses. A list of witnesses is contained in this report.

The committee wishes to express its thanks to Richard F. Bechtel, its Research Analyst and, Judith A. Pratt, its secretary, and Steve Jones, its Student Intern.

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on the Legislature to read as follows:

ARTICLE V

THE LEGISLATURE

Section 1. POWER AND STRUCTURE. The legislative power of the state is vested in the legislature, consisting of one chamber whose members are designated senators. The people reserve to themselves the power of initiative and referendum.

Section 2. SIZE. The number of senators shall be prescribed by law, but there shall be no less than 75 and no more than 100 members.

Section 3. ELECTION AND TERMS OF MEMBERS. A senator shall be elected for a term of four years. One-half of the senators shall be elected every two years. A senator's term shall begin on a date provided by law.

Section 4. QUALIFICATIONS. A legislative candidate shall be a qualified voter. He shall be a resident of the state for at least one year, and a resident of the district from which he seeks election for at least six months preceding the general election.

Section 5. COMPENSATION. (1) Each member of the legislature shall receive an annual salary and such allowances as may be prescribed by law; provided that no legislature shall fix its own compensation.

(2) A salary commission shall be created by the legislature to recommend legislative compensation.

Section 6. SESSIONS. The legislature shall be a continuous body for two year periods beginning on the date newly elected members take office. Any business, bill, or resolution pending at adjournment of a session shall carry over with the same status to any further session of the legislature during the biennium. The legislature shall meet at least once a year in regular sessions of 90 legislative days or less. Any legislature may increase the limit on the length of any subsequent session. The legislature may be convened in special sessions by the governor or at the written request of a majority of the members.

Section 7. VACANCIES. A vacancy in the legislature shall be filled by special election for the unexpired term unless otherwise provided by law.

Section 8. IMMUNITY. The members of the legislature shall, in all cases, except felony and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of the legislature, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in the legislature, they shall not be questionfi ir any other place.

Section 3. DISQUALIFICATION. No legislator shall, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the state of Montana created during such time.

Section 10. ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURE. (1) The legislature shall judge the election and qualifications of its members and may by law vest in the courts the trial and determination of contested elections of its members. It shall choose its officers from among its members; keep a journal; make rules for its proceedings; and may expel or punish a member with the concurrence of tws-thirds of all its members.

(2) A majority of the membership of the legislature constitutes a quorum to do business. A smaller number may adjourr from day to day and compel attendance of absent members.

(3) All proceedings of the legislature, including committee meetings, shall be open to the public.

(4) Adequate public notice of committee hearings must be given.

(5) The legislature may establish interim committees which may meet and exercise all legislative authority delegated to them.

Section 11. BILLS. (1) A law shall be passed by till, and a bill shall not be so altered or amended on its passage through the legislature as to change its original purpose.

(2) On any vote which advances or changes the status or substance of a bill, resolution, or rule the vote of each member must be recorded.

(3) A hill shall become law upon a majority vote of the members present.

(4) Each bill, except general appropriation bills, and bills for the codification and general revision of the laws, shall contain only one subject. A law may be challenged on the grounds of non-compliance uith this section within one year after its effective date but not after that period.

(5) General appropriation bills shall contain only appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the state, interest on the public debt and for public schools. All other appropriations shall be made by separate bill, each containing but one subject.

(6) tic appropriation shall be made for religious, charitable, industrial, educational or benevolent purposes to any private individual, private association, or private corporation not under control of the state.

Section 12. LOCAL AND SPECIAL LEGISLATION. The legislature may not pass a special or local act when a general act is, or can be made, applicable.

Section 13. VETO. (1) Every bill passed by the legislature shall be presented to the governor for his approval and shall become law if he neither approves nor vetoes it within 5 days while the legislature is in session or within 25 days after the legislature has adjourned.

(2) The governor may veto items in appropriation bills.

(3) The governor shall return any vetoed bill with a statement of his objections to the legislature.

(4) The legislature, upon receipt of a veto message, shall reconsider the vetoed bill or item. The legislature may amend a bill to eliminate the objections of the governor, and return the bill to the governor for reconsideration. The legislature may override the veto by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members present.

(5) The governor shall not have veto power over resolutions, initiative and referendum measures, Constitutional amendments, and appropriations for the legislature.

Section 14. IMPEACHMENT. (1) The governor, executive officers, heads of state departments, judicial officers and such other officers as may be made subject to impeachment by law may be removed from office upon conviction of impeachment. Other proceedings for removal from public office for cause may be provided by law.

(2) The legislature shall provide for the manner, procedure and causes for removal by impeachment and shall provide for a tribunal.

(3) Impeachment can be brought only by a two-thirds vote of the senate and no conviction for impeachment shall be made except by a vote of two-thirds or more of the members of the tribunal hearing the charges.

(4) Such conviction shall only extend to removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office under the state, but the party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall also be liable to prosecution according to law.

Section 15. DISTRICTING AND APPORTIONMENT. (1) For the purpose of electing members of the legislature, the state shall be divided into as many districts as there shall be members of the legislature. Each legislative district shall consist of compact and contiguous territory and be so nearly equal in population as is practicable.

(2) Immediately upon enactment of this section and in the session preceding each census made by the authority of the United States a committee of four citizens, none of whom may be public officials, shall be designated to draft a plan for redistricting and reapportioning the state into legislative and congressional districts. The majority and minority leaders of the legislature shall each designate two commissioners. The four commissioners, within 20 days after their designation, shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the commission. If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the supreme court shall appoint the chairman..

(3) NO later than 90 days after appointment of the chairman, or following the official reporting of each federal census, whichever is later in time, the commission shall file a plan with the secretary of stare.

(4) Any person aggrieved by the preliminary plan shall have 30 days to file exceptions with the commission in which case the commission shall have 30 days after the date the exceptions were filed to prepare and file a revised plan. If no excepticns are filed within 30 days, or if filed and acted upon, the commission's plan shall be Final and have the force of law.

(5) Any aggrieved person may file an appeal from the plan directly to the supreme court within 33 days after the filing. If the appellant establishes that the final plan is contrary to law, the supreme court shall issue an order remanding the plan to the commission and directing the commaission to reapportion and redistrict in a manner not inconsistent with such order.

(6) When the supreme court has finally decided an appeal taken, the reapportionment Flan shall have the force of law and the districts shall be used thereafter in elections to the legislature until the next reapportionment is required.

Section 16. THE PEOPLE'S ADVOCATE. (1) The majority and minority leaders of the legislature shall together appoint the people's advocate.

(2) The people's advocate shall have the duty to provide information to any person upon request relating to government; and shall have subpoena power and authority to investigate on complaint or on his own initiative any act or omission of any agency of government, and take appropriate action. The legislature shall provide for this office and its operation.

COMMENTS ON MAJORITY PROPOSAL

Section 1. POWER AND STRUCTURE. The legislative power of the state is vested in the legislature, consisting of one chamber whose members are designated senators. The people reserve to themselves the power of initiative and referendum.

COMMENTS

The committee believes that a unicameral legislature would be superior to a bicameral legislature for the following reasons:

(1) Rural Representation. No matter which is adopted--bicameralism or unicameralism-actual representation of rural and urban areas will be proportionally the same because both must be based on the supreme court's "one man, one vote" axiom. However, in a unicameral legislature. unlike a bicameral legislature, rural district representation is not countor-balanced by larger senate districts that are stacked in favor of urban centers. In large districts, rural areas are thrown into districts with urban areas.

(2) Deliberation. According to the Model State Constitution there is no data to support the claim that two houses result in better policies and more carefully written laws, or that a second house is a constructive check against hasty action. In fact, a study of second review made for the Maryland Constitutional convention stated that the amount of review by the second house did not justify the cost of bicameralism in Maryland.

However, there are many studies which show that a unicameral legislature results in better policies, more carefully written laws, and more thoughtfully considered legislation. A study which compared the unicameral and bicameral legislatures of Vermont proved that the laws passed by the unicameral were 98.07 Percent more stable. In otherwords, the unicameral legislature wrote better laws. A 1954 study of American state legislatures states that of all the American legislatures, the Nebraska unicameral gave its bills the best consideration.

In fact, the study mentioned that the Nebraska unicameral legislature was too careful. A 1970 study by the Citizens Conference of State Legislatures ranked the Nebraska unicameral legislature first in the nation in accountability.

(3) Lower Cost and Greater Independence. Money is saved in a unicameral legislature through the elimination of duplication in staff, printing, and other legislative operating expenses. The money saved should be used for well Paid staff, the single most important factor in counter-balancing lobbying Pressures and assuring intellectual independence.

(4) Accountable and Visible. There can be no "buck passing" from house to house. A legislator will carefully consider his actions because there is no other house to blame. The laws are passed in a "fish bowl".

(5) More Responsible. Political deadlocks and impasses will be impossible. The people want a legislature that is structured to reflect the will of the majority instead of one that traditionally operates to protect the will of the minority.

(6) Difficult for Lobbyists to Control. In a unicameral body of 100, 51 legislators would constitute a majority to pass a bill. In a senate of 43, only 21 senators can kill a bill already passed by the other house. Obviously it is easier for lobbyists to control and influence 21 than 51 legislators.

(7) More Efficient. There is less confusion. Better debate procedures result when all the pros and cons are considered before a vote is taken. Dual committees are eliminated and it is unnecessary to have two public hearings on every bill. Duplication has never been a guarantee of excellence.

Bills cannot be introduced and passed in one house on the assumption (and sometimes prior agreement) that they will be killed in the other house.

A second house is not needed because even in the bicameral system, 93 percent of all bills are killed in the house of origin. Seldom does a bill receive "worthwhile review" in the other chamber.

A unicameral legislature will completely eliminate the introduction (and expense) of identical or similar bills in both houses.

A unicameral legislature will completely eliminate the "third level" conference committee, one of the most criticized elements of bicameral bodies.

Section 2. SIZE. The number of senators shall be prescribed by law, but there shall be no less than 75 and no more than 100 members.

COMMENTS

Montana is a large state with scattered population. The committee believes that a unicameral legislature needs 75 to 100 members to allow the state's rural areas to retain a feeling of representation. The committee also believes that a unicameral legislature of this size allows Montana to preserve its traditional low ratio between a representative and his constituents. The provision provides a range to give the reapportionment commission some flexibility in redistricting and reapportioning the state.

Section 3. ELECTION AND TERMS OF MEMBERS. Senators shall be elected for a term of four years. One-half of the senators shall be elected every two years. The senators' terms shall begin on a date provided by law.

COMMENTS

The provision provides for four year staggered terms. The four year term affords continuity, experience, and stability to the unicameral house. To achieve staggered terms in the legislature, it is suggested that all the senators be elected in the first election. In that election, one-half should be elected to two year terms and one-half should be elected to four year terms.

Section 4. QUALIFICATIONS. A legislative candidate shall be a qualified voter. He shall be a resident of the state for at least one year, and a resident of the district from which he seeks election for at least six months preceding the general election.

COMMENTS

Article V, section 3 of the present Constitution requires a representative to be at least 21 and a senator to be at least 24, and both to have lived in the county or district they represent for at least one year. The committee proposal requires a legislator to be a qualified voter. This follows the line of reasoning in the Bill of Rights Committee recommendation that 18 year olds be considered adults for all purposes. This would allow the young to participate in elections as candidates as well as voters. The committee believes that state and district residence requirements are needed to prevent candidates from moving into a district shortly before the election to run for the legislative seat. It is believed that one of the major purposes for single-member districts--representation of a district by a true representative of that district-would be defeated if there are no residence requirements,

Section 5. COMPENSATION. (1) Each member of the legislature shall receive an annual salary and such allowances as may be prescribed by law; provided that no legislature shall fix its own compensation.

(2) A salary commission shall be created by the legislature to recommend legislative compensation.

COMMENTS

This section replaces part of Article V, section 5, which permits the legislature to set its own compensation. The committee believes an annual salary is appropriate for a legislature which is to be a continuous body. The committee believes that a legislator's responsibility to his constituents is year around, not just when the legislature is in session. An annual salary is also an effective incentive for legislators to end their sessions as soon as possible. This provision also permits such allowances as "per diem and mileage". The proposal does not set a minimum salary in the Constitution for fear that the legislature might then be reluctant to increase that amount. This was the history of the original six dollar a day allowance which remained the legislative salary for approximately 50 years. The proposal retains the provision from Article V, section 8 that no legislature can fix its own compensation.

It is the general belief of the committee that legislative compensation is inadequate and will continue to be inadequate as long as the legislature must set its own salary. To alleviate this problem, the proposal provides for a compensation commission to either set or recommend legislative salaries. This commission would "promote public confidence in proposals to raise legislative compensation to reasonable levels and would minimize accusations by the public and the press of legislative self help". (Council of State Governments, 1970 Suggested State Legislation, p. 1.).

Section 6. SESSIONS. The legislature shall be a continuous body for two year periods beginning on the date newly elected members take office. Any business, bill, or resolution pending at adjournment of a session shall carry over with the same status to any further session of the legislature during the biennium. The legislature shall meet at least once a year in regular sessions of 90 legislative days or less. Any legislature may increase the limit on the length of any subsequent session. The legislature may be convened in special sessions by the governor or at the written request of a majority of the members.

COMMENTS

The committee believes that the most important limitation on the legislature's effectiveness is the Constitutional limitation of the length and frequency of sessions. Sixty days every other year does not allow the legislature enough time to given its legislation adequate consideration. It also does not allow the legislature to give adequate public notice of its hearings, so the people of Montana are unable to fully participate in its deliberations. In 61 years since 1911--only six Montana legislatures have been able to complete their business in 60 days. Academic, state, and federal studies stress the disastrous effect session limits have upon the consideration of legislation.

The committee proposal makes the legislature a continuous body. This does not mean that the legislature will remain in session indefinitely. "Continuous body" is a legal term which ensures the legislature that its committees will have the authority to meet during the interim, that the legislature will have continuity, and that the legislature will have the ability to develop its staff.

The committee proposal provides for annual sessions. In 1948, six states held annual sessions. This number increased to 26 in 1970 and to 33 in 1971. The states are adopting annual sessions because of the growth in demand for legislative services, the need to restore the balance of power between the legislature and a permanent executive, and the difficulties in formulating an accurate biennial budget.

All studies recommend that no limits be placed on the length of session because:

> The restrictions on length of sessions are the real reasons for bad legislation-not extended periods of discussion. Certainly it would be impossible to say that legislation or the quality of legislators has been improved by limiting the sessions. (Belle Zeller, American State Legislatures, p. 93.)

There was long discussion in the committee because several members believed unlimited sessions would make it impossible for rural people to serve in the legislature. The committee consensus was to place a 90 legislative day limit on sessions. The committee believes this is a reasonable restriction for 1972. However, the committee in its debates was worried that the legislature may at a later date need more time, so it added a provision that any legislature could increase the length of session for any subsequent legislature. This provision does not lock a 90 legislative day limit in the Constitution. The length of session may grow to meet the future needs of the citizens of Montana. This also meets the argument that a legislature needs a time limit to force it to finish its work, although it has been proven that an annual salary causes a legislature to finish its work as soon as possible.

All Constitutions allow the governor to call the legislature into session, but many also allow the legislature to call itself into session. The committee believes that the legislature needs this power if it is to be equal to the other two branches of government. For this reason, the committee proposal allows a majority of the members to call the legislature into session.

> Section 7. VACANCIES. A vacancy in the legislature shall be filled by special election for the unexpired term unless otherwise provided by law.

COMMENTS

Presently the Montana Constitution does not provide for the filling of legislative vacancies. It is left to law. In 1889 the Constitution provided for vacancies to be filled by elections, but the people amended the Constitution in 1931 to allow the county commissioners to fill by appointment vacancies caused by death. Legislative vacancies caused by other reasons were still filled by election. In 1966 the people repealed the entire section by amendment.

The committee believes that with single-member districts throughout the state, the cost of a special elfction will not be great enough to justify appointment. The committee believes that the citizens of Montana should have the opportunity to elect their representatives to the legislature and that the people should fill legislative vacancies by election rather than by appointment. By adding "unless otherwise provided by law", the proposal provides flexibility for the future, especially in instances where the tern might be nearly expired.

Section 8. IMMUNITY. The members of the legislature shall, in all cases, except felony and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of the legislature, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in the legislature, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

COMMENTS

This section contains the substance of Article V, section 15. The committee feels that the protections provided by this section are still needed. However, it should be noted that Charles Mahoney's statement that he would not allow the proposed Constitution to hi accented without this provision had tremendous influence on the committee's decision.

Section 9. DISQUALIFICATION. No legislator shall, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the state of Montana created during such time.

COMMENTS

This proposed section is not as stringent as the present provision contained in Article V, section 7. The committee believes that the present provision has in many cases prevented qualified persons from assuming public office. The proposed section allows a member of the legislature to be appointed to another public office during the term for which he was last elected if that office was not created during that term. The section also permits public officers to become members of the legislature during their continuance in office, but this can be prevented by legislation. In fact, the whole section could be provided for in legislation.

Section 10. ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURE. (1) The legislature shall judge the election and qualifications of its members and may by law vest in the courts the trial and determination of contested elections of its members. It shall chocse its cfficerc frcm among its members; keep a journal; make rules fcr its prcceedings; and may expel cr punish a member with the ccncurrence of two-thirds of all its members.

COMMENTS

Subsection 1 is self-explanatcry. It combines pcrticns cf sections 9, 11, and 12 of Article V cf the present Constitution.

Sectien 10. (2) A majority of the membership cf the legislature ccnstitutfs a qucrum tc do business. A smaller number may adjourn frcm day to day and compel attendance of absent members.

COMMENTS

Subsection 2 is self-snplanatcry. It ccntains the substance of sectien 10, Article V, of the present Ccsstitutien.

Section 10. (3) All prceeedings cf the legislature, including committee meetings, shall be cpen to the public.

COMMENTS

Subsection 3 is self-explanatory. This subsection changes the present Constitutien (section 13, Article V) which allcws the legislature to conduct secret prceedings when it determines secrecy is required. The committee believes that the benefits to be derived from an cpen and visible legislature far outweigh any need for the peoples' representatives to discuss the pecples' needs and problems behind closed dccrs.

Section 10. (4) Adequate public nctice cf committee hearings must be given.

COMMENTS

Subsection 4 is a new sectien. Neither the present Ccnstitution ncr this proposed article require the legislature to ccnduct hearings (see section 22, Article V of the present Ccnrtitution). However, the committee ccncludes that public nctice shculd be required when hearings are conducted. The committee believes that it should be left to the legislature to determine what "adequate public notice" is, taking into consideration the amcunt cf its business and the time it has tc conduct that business.

Section 10. (5) The legislature may establish interim committees which may meet and exercise all legislative authority delegated to them.

COMMENTS

Subsection 5 is a new section. The committee believes that the legislature has the power to establish interim committees under this proposed article, especially under section 6 which makes the legislature a continuous body. This section is included, however, because of the problem past Montana legislatures have had in establishing the legislative council. The committee wishes to include this section to remove any doubt about legislative authority in this area.

Section 11. BILLS. (1) A law shall be passed by bill, and a bill shall not be so altered or amended on its passage through the legislature as to change its original purpose.

COMMENTS

Subsection 1 is self-explanatory. It is a positive statement of Article V, section 19 of the present Constitution.

Section 11. (2) On any vote which advances or changes the status or substance of a bill, resolution, or rule the vote of each member must be recorded.

COMMENTS

Subsection 2 is a new section. This proposed section is much stronger than Article V, section 24 of the present Constitution which requires a recorded vote only on final passage and Article V, section 12 which allows any two legislators to compel a recorded vote. The proposed section makes a recorded vote the rule, not the exception. Under the present Constitution and legislative rules, the legislators are not completely accountable because the votes taken during second reading (the committee of the whole) are not recorded. In theory, they are committee votes. The proposed section eliminates this loophole.

To properly evaluate what a legislator does, his votes should be visible. The committee relieves that this proposed section is 3 large step towards making the Montana legislature an accountable one.

Section 11. (3) A bill shall become law upon a majority vote of the members present.

COMMENTS

Subsection 3 is self-explanatory. It contains a portion of Article V, section 24 of the present Constitution.

Section 11. (4) Each bill, except general appropriation bills, and bills for the codification and general revision of the laws, shall contain only one subject. A law may be challenged on the grounds of non-compliance with this section within one year after its effective date but not after that period.

COMMENTS

Subsection 4 is Article V, section 23 of the present Constitution in an amended form. It retains the single subject provision which prevents the attachment of undesirable riders to desirable bills. The section specifies, however, that laws may be challenged under this section within one year after their effective date but not after that period. The statute of limitations permits a law to be declared void for a reasonable period after its enactment; but prohibits it being voided long after it has been published and a matter of general public knowledge.

'The proposed section eliminates the title provision. The committee removed the title provision because many good laws have been declared invalid under it.

> Section 11. (5) General appropriation bills shall contain only appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the legislative, executive ard judicial departments of ths state, interest on the public debt ana for public schools. Ail other appropriations shall be made by separate bills, each containing but one subject.

COMMENTS

Subsection five is self-explanatory. It is Article V, section 33 of the present Constitution with "embrace" charged to "contain".

> Section 11. (6) NO appropriation shall be made for religious, charitable, industrial, educational or benevolent purposes to any private individual, private assaciation, or private corporation not under control of the state.

COMMENTS

Subsection six is self-explanatory. It is essentially the same as Article V, section 35 of the present Constituticr with a few modifications in language. The word "community" was removed from the section at the request of the local government committoe.

> Section 12. LOCAL AND SPECIAL LEGISLATION. The legislature may not pass a special or local act when a yeneral act is, or can be made, applicable.

COMMENTS

This proposed section is a replacement for Article V, section 26 of the present Constituticc. It is simply a restatement of the last sentence of section 26. The committee believes that this concise statement adequately covers the prohibitions set out at length in the original section. The committee wishes to remove the laundry list of prohibitions because of its tendency to become rapidly obsolete. An added protection would be an equal protection clause in the United States Constitution. In addition the prohibition against special and local laws is well established in Montana and United States jurisprudence.

Section 13. VETO. (1) Every bill passed by the legislature shall be presented to the governor for his approval and shall become law if he neither approves nor vetoes it within 5 days while the legislature is in session or within 25 days after the legislature has adjourned.

COMMENTS

The committee spent several days considering the executive veto and its effect on the legislature. The committee developed an extensive section on the veto and then met with the Executive Committee to resolve the differences between the two committees. The two committees agreed on all but one point--the governor's power to veto appropriations for the legislature.

Subsection one eliminates the pocket veto which the governor has under Article VII, section 12 of the present Constitution. The committee believes that the governor should be required to either take a definite stand on bills or let them become law. The committee believes in a responsible legislature as well as a responsible governor. The proposed article retains the provision that the governor must veto a bill within five days during the session. The proposed article, however, extends the number of days the governor has to consider bills after adjournment from 15 to 25 days.

Section 13. (2) The governor may veto items in appropriation bills.

COMMENTS

Subsection two retains the item veto which the governor has under Article VII, section 1.3 of the present Constitution. However, subsection five partially restricts this power.

Section 13. (3) The governor shall return any vetoed bill with a statement of his objections to the legislature.

COMMENTS

Subsection three is self-explanatory.

Section 13. (4) The legislature, upon receipt of a veto message, shall reconsider the vetoed bill or item.

The legislature may amend a bill to eliminate the objections of the governor, and return the bill to the governor for reconsideration. The legislature may override the veto by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members present.

COMMENTS

Subsection four gives the legislature the new power to amend laws to conform with the objections of the governor. If the legislature does not wish to concede to the governor's veto, the proposed article allows the legislature to override his veto by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. The legislature has this power under Article V, section 4C of the present Constitution.

Section 13. (5) The governor shall not have veto power over resolutions, initiative and referendum measures, Constitutional amendments, and appropriations for the legislature.

COMMENTS

The restriction that the governor cannot veto appropriations for the legislature is new. The committee debated this at length and would not concede to the wishes of the Executive Committee on this point. Presently the governor does not have the power to veto initiative or referendum measures under Article V, section 1. However, because of a court decision, the governor does have the power to veto proposed Constitutional amendments. The Committee feels this power should be removed from the governor. For this reason, Constitutional amendments is added to the subsection.

Section 14. IMPEACHMENT. (1) The governor, executive officers, heads of state departments, judicial officers and such other officers as may be made subject to impeachment by law may be removed from office upon conviction of impeachment. Other proceedings for removal from public office for cause may be provided by law.

(2) The legislature shall provide for the manner, procedure and causes for removal by impeachment and shall provide for a tribunal.

(3) Impeachment can be brought only by a two-thirds vote of the senate and no conviction for impeachment shall be made except by a vote of two-thirds or more of the members of the tribunal hearing the charges.

(4) Such conviction shall only extend to removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office under the state, but the party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall also be liable to prosecution according to law.

COMMENTS

This proposed section is Article V, sections 16, 17, and 18 in an amended form, The proposed section allows the legislature to establish impeachment procedures. The committee believes that the same body which brings the charges should not hear the case. For this reason, the proposed section allows the legislature to bring the charges and provides that it should select some other body to serve as the tribunal. The proposed section also requires a two-thirds vote to bring the charges and a two-thirds vote to convict. Article V, section 16 requires only a majority vote to bring charges.

The proposed article also allows the legislature to establish other procedures for the removal of officers from public office for cause.

Section 15. DISTRICTING AND APPORTIONMENT. (1) For the purpose of electing members of the legislature, the state shall be divided into as many districts as there shall be members of the legislature. Each legislative district shall consist of compact and contiguous territory and be as nearly equal in population as is practicable.

(2) Immediately upon enactment of this section and in the session preceding each census made by the authority of the United States a committee of four citizens, none of whom may be public officials, shall be designated to draft a plan for redistricting and reapportioning the state into legislative and congressional districts. The majority and minority leaders of the legislature shall each designate two commissioners. The four commissioners, within 20 days after their designation, shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the consission. If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the supreme court shall appoint the chairman.

(3) No later than 90 days after appointment of the chairman, or following the official reporting of each federal census, whichever is later in time, the commission shall file a plan with the secretary of state.

(4) Any person aggrieved by the preliminary plan shall have 30 days to file exceptions with the commission in which case the commission should have 30 days after the date the exceptions were filed to prepare and file a revised plan. If no exceptions are filed within 30 days, or if filed and acted upon, the commission's plan shall be final and have the force of law.

(5) Any aggrieved person may file an appeal from the plan directly to the supreme court within 30 days after the filing. If the appellant establishes that the final plan is contrary to law, the supreme court shall issue an order remanding the plan to the commission and directing the commission to reapportion and redistrict in a manner not inconsistent with such order.

(6) When the supreme court has finally decided an appeal taken, the reapportionment plan shall have the force of law and the districts shall be used thereafter in elections to the legislature until the next reapportionment is required.

COMMENTS

The committee believes that large multi-member districts are not conducive to effective representation, are too large in area, and are legally vulnerable. The committee unanimously approves of single member districts for a unicameral legislature,

The committee has considered many different methods of reapportionment. The committee considers reapportionment and redistricting to be a troublesome and time consuming matter for a legislative body because of the legislature's difficulty in being objective. Therefore, the committee proposal provides for the creation of a reapportionment commission which has considerable independence and which will be reasonably free from legislative pressures. The commission initiates a redistricting and reapportionment plan and the legislature and private citizens can make recommendations.

The committee recognized that redistricting and reapportionment has political repurcussions, so the proposed section provides for bipartisanism in the method of selection of the first four members. The fifth member of the commission becomes the key vote and his selection by the other four members is to insure impartiality.

The proposed section allows any citizen to indicate his objections to the plan, and forces the commission to consider these objections. This provision is intended to offer redress to legitimate complaints without the necessity of filing suit against the plan.

The termination of the commission once a valid reapportionment plan is produced is provided for in the last sentence, The life of the commission ends when its work is satisfactorily completed.

Section 16. THE PEOPLE'S ADVOCATE. (1) The majority and minority leaders of the legislature shall together appoint the people's advocate.

(2) The people's advocate shall have the duty to provide information to any person upon request relating to government; and shall have subpoena power and authority to investigate on complaint or on his own initiative any act or omission of any agency of government, and take appropriate action. The legislature shall provide for this office and its operation.

COMMENTS

The committee believes that a people's advocate is necessary to bring about a responsible bureaucracy. Today government is so complicated that the average citizen does not know where to go for help or where to place responsibility. A people's advocate can disseminate this kind of information. Armed with the power of subpoena, he can produce action by cutting through the red tape that sometimes characterizes government today.

Several states provide by statute for a weak ombudsman or people's advocate, but in each case the law has been passed only by luck. Once the position is created, as happened in one state, the legislature has tried not to appropriate it funds. For this reason the committee believes that the office should be included in the Constitution. Since executive oversight is a responsibility of the legislature, the committee also believes the section should be included in the legislative article.

The proposed section allows the majority and minority leaders of the legislature to appoint the people's advocate so that responsibility for the appointment is fixed. The proposed section leaves to the legislature the responsibility for providing for the office and its operation. However, the committee recommends to the legislature that the office have the prestige and salary of a district judge. To guarantee his independence, the committee further recommends that the legislature provide the peoples' advocate with a six year term.

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

HE IT PROPOSED BY THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE:

'That there be a new Article or the legislature to read as follows:

ARTICLE V

THE LEGISLATURE

Section 1. POWER AND STRUCTURE. The legislative power of the stat; is vested in the legislative assembly consistirg of a senate and a house of representatives. The people reserve to themselves the power of initiative and referendum.

Section 2. SIZE. The size of the legislature stall be prescibed by law, but the senate shall consist of not more than 40 nor less than 30 members and the house of not more than 80 nor less than 60 members.

Section 3. ELECTION AND TERMS OF MEMBERS. A member of the house of representatives shall be elected for a term of tuc years and a member of the senate for a term of four years. One-half of the senators shall be elected every two years. The tern of the members shill begin on a date provided by law.

Section 4. QUALIFICATIONS. A legislative candidate shall be a qualified voter. He shall be a resident of the state for at least one year, and a resident of the district frca which he seeks election for at least six months preceding the general election.

Section 5. COMPENSATION. (1) Each member of the legislature shall receive an annual salary and such allowances as may be prescribed by law; provided that no legislature shall tix its own compensation.

(2) A salary commission shall be created by the legislature tc recommend legislative compensation.

Section 6. SESSIONS. The legislature shall be a continuous body for two year periodc beginning on the date newly elected members take office. Any business, bill, or resolution perding at adjournment of a session shall carry over with the same status tc any further session of the legislature during the biennium. The legislature shall meet at least once a year in regular sessions of 90 loyislative days or less. Any legislature may increase the limit on the length of any subsequent session. The legislature may be convened in special sessions by the governor, or at the written request of a mdjority of the members.

filled by special election fcr the unexpired term unless cther-wise prcvided by law.

Sectiон 8. IMMUNITY. The members cf the legislature shall, in a11 cases, except felcny and t-reach cf the peace, be privi-leged frca arrest during their attendance at the sessions of the legislature, and in going to and returning frcm the same; and fcr any speech or debate ir the legislature, they shall nct be ques-ticned ir any other place.

Section 9. DISQUALIFICATICN. No legislatcr shall, during the time fcr which he is elected. be appcinted tc any civil office under the authority cf the state of Montana created during such time.

Sectiсn 10. ORGANIZATION AND PRCCEDURE. (1) Each house shall judge the election and qualificatiсns cf its members and may by law vest in the courts the trial and determination of con-tested elections of its members. Each house shall chocse its officers rrom amcng its members; keep a journal; make rules for its proceadicgs; and may expel cr punish a member with the ccn-currence of twc-thirds of its members.

(2) A majcrity cf each house constitutes a qucrum to do business. A smaller number may adjcurn frcm day to day and ccmpel attendance of absent members.

(3) All proceedings of the legislature, including ccmmittee meetings, shall be cpen tc the public.

(4) Adequate public nctice cf ccmmittee hearings must be given.

(5) The legislature may establish interim committees which may meet and exercise all legislative authcrity delegated tc them.

(6) Neither house shall, without the ccnsent of the other, adjourn or recess fcr more than three days, rcr tc any cther place than that in which the twc hcuses shall be sitting.

(7) The legislature shall adcpt and use jcint rules. One rule shall require that, except on the final sessicn day, each report cf a ccnference committee contain an explanatiсn cf com-mittee recommendations and be duplicated and distributed tc each legislatcr i4 hours before actiсn may be taken cn an affirmative repcrt.

Section 11. BILLS. (1) A law shall be passed by bill, and a bill shall nct be sc altered cr amended cn its passage through the legislature as to change its original purpcse.

(2) Cn any vote which advances or changes the status cr substance of a till, resclutiсn, cr rule the vcte of each member must be recorded.

(3) A bill shall become law upon a majority vote of the members present in each house.

(4) Each bill, except general appropriation bills, and bills for the codification and general revision of the laws, shall contain only one subject. A law may be challenged on the grounds of non-compliance with this section within one year after its effective date but not after that period.

(5) General appropriation bills shall contain only appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the state, interest on the public debt and for public schools. All other appropriations shall be made by separate bills, each containing but one subject.

(6) No appropriation shall be made for religious, charitable, industrial, educational or benevolent purposes to any private individual, private association, or private corporation not under control of the state.

Section 12. LOCAL AND SPECIAL LEGISLATION. The legislature may not pass a special or local act when a general act is, or can be made, applicable.

Section 13. VETO. (1) Every bill passed by the legislature shall be presented to the governor for his approval and shall become law if he neither approves nor vetoes it within five days while the legislature is in session or within 25 days after the legislature has adjourned.

(2) The governor may veto items in appropriation bills.

(3) The governor shall return any vetoed bill with a statement of his objections to the originating house.

(4) The legislature, upon receipt of a veto message, shall reconsider the vetoed bill or item. The legislature may amend a bill to eliminate the objections of the governor, and return the bill to the governor for reconsideration. The legislature may override the veto by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members present in each house.

(5) The governor shall not have veto power over resolutions, initiative and referendum measures, Constitutional amendments, and appropriations for the legislature.

Section 14. IMPEACHMENT. (1) The governor, executive officers, heads of state departments, judicial officers and such other officers as may be made subject to impeachment by law may be removed from office upon conviction of impeachment. Other proceedings for removal from public office for cause may be provided by law.

(2) The legislature shall provide for the manner, procedure and causes for removal by impeachment and may select the senate as tribunal.

(3) Impeachment can be brought only by a two-thirds vote of the house and no conviction for impeachment shall be made except by a vote of two-thirds or more of the members of the tribunal hearing the charges.

(4) Such conviction shall only extend to removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office under the state, but the party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall also be liable to prosecution according to law.

Section 15. DISTRICTING AND APPORTIONMENT. (1) The state shall be divided into as many house districts as there are representatives of the house and each district shall elect one representative. Each senate district shall be comprised of two representative districts for the election of one senator. Every legislative district shall consist of compact and contiguous territory and be so nearly equal in population as is practicable.

(2) Immediately upon enactment of this section and in the session preceding each census made by the authority of the United states a committee of four citizens, none of whom may be public Officials shall be designated to draft a plan for redistricting and reapportioning the state into legislative and congressional districts. The majority and minority leaders of each house shall designate a commissioner. The four commissioners, within 20 days after their designation, shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the commission. If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the supreme court shall appoint the chairman.

(3) No later than 90 days after appointment of the chairman, or following the official reporting of each federal census, whichever is later in time, the commission shall file a plan with the secretary of state.

(4) Any person aggrieved by the preliminary plan shall have 30 days to file exceptions with the commission in which case the commission shall have 30 days after the date the exceptions were filed to prepare and file a revised plan. If no exceptions are filed within 30 days, or if filed and acted upon, the commission's plan shall be final and have the force of law.

(5) Any aggrieved person may file an appeal from the plan directly to the supreme court within 30 days after the filing. If the appellant establishes that the final plan is contrary to law, the supreme court shall issue an order remanding the plan to the commission and directing the commission to reapportion and redistrict in a manner not inconsistent with such order.

(6) When the supreme court has finally decided an appeal takes, the reapportionment plan shall have the force of law and the districts shall be used thereafter in elections to the legislature until the next reapportionment is required.

Section 16. THE PEOPLE'S ADVOCATE. (1) The majority and minority leaders of each house shall together appoint the people's advocate.

(2) The people's advocate shall have the duty to provide information to any person upon request relating to government; and shall have subpoena power and authority to investigate on complaint or on his own initiative any act or omission of any agency of government, and take appropriate action. The legislature shall provide for this office and its operation.

COMMENTS OF MAJORITY BICAMERAI EFCECSAL

Section 1. POWER AND STRUCTURE. The legislative pcwer of the state is vested in the legislative assembly consisting cf a senate and a house cf representatives. The people reserve tc themselves the power cf initiative and referendum.

COMMENTS

The power to mike laws in a representative government is a power delegated tc a specific unit cf gcvernment. section 1 merely states that a body in which the pecple vest that pcwer. The people alsc reserve the pcwer tc remain a part Of the law-making structure ty reserving tc themselves the pcwer tc initiate laws and repeal them.

Respcnsibility must be delegated tc scmecne. An elected grcup cf legislators is the prcper place tc delegate this authcrity. In vesting this power in a legislative bcdy consisting of a House and Senate we feel the checks and balances cf a twc-house body will prcvide the best representaticn and respcnsiveness to and for th? people cf Mcntana prcviding fcr the peoples' right cf referendum and initiative.

Arguments for a unicameral bcdy must be given serious consideraticn; however, the minority feels that althcugh Nebraska apparently has been satisfied with its system, it does not necessarily guarantee that it would alleviate the prcblems in Mcntana.

The subcommittee feels the criticism directed at the last session cf the legislature does not warrant a complete overhaul of the present system. The subccmmittee feels that adjustments made as provided in the prcpcsed legislative Article mill give the needed time and flexibility tc cvercome the shcrtccnirgs which created an impasse in the Fast.

Much ado has teen made abcut the ccnference ccmmittee; the bicameral adherents feel this is prccf in itself there is need for another tody tc take ancther lcck at legislation proposed by a single bcdy; the conference committee is an attempt to ccmprcmise differences; if there are shcrtccmings in the ccnference committee, let's correct those inadequacies and not thrcw cut the whcle system.

The bicameral may not te as respcnsive tc the tide cf public opinicn; however, public cpinicn is oftentimes emcticnal and really, in the long run prefers to mcve slcwly. Democracy, at its best, is a slcw process.

Secticn 2. SIZE. The size cf the legislature shall be prescribed by law, but tbe senate shall consist of nct more than 49 nor less than 3C members and the house of not more than 80 ncr less that 60 members.

COMMENTS

The majority contends prcpcrticnately the representaticn remains the same nc matter what the tctal may be.

A lesser number of 6C-8C in the House and 30-4C in the Senate will make fcr a more dedicated and mcre qualified membership. Responsibility can be mcre easily pin-pointed in the smaller body.

The smaller bcdy will decrease the amcunt of legislaticn introduced and will alsc make a mcre functicnal law-making body.

Tc those whc are economy minded, the smaller body will require a smaller payrcll and make mcre funds available fcr research staff.

The need fcr more physical plant is apparent, the smaller body will require less outlay fcr such expansicn.

The Califcrnia legislature has 4C Senators and 8C Representatives. If that state can functicn with a larger populaticn and greater land area, sc can Mcntana.

Sectic n 3. ELECTION AND TERMS CF MEMEEHS. A member of the house of representatives shall be elected fcr a term of two years and a member cf the senate for a term of four years. Cne-half of the senators shall be elected every two years. The term cf the members shall begin on a date prcvided by law.

COMMENTS

The two year terms cf the representatives makes them responsive tc the will cf the electorate while the staggered terms cf the senators insures continuity of the bcdy. No day certain for convening the legislature is fixed sc that the legislature can exert its wisdom and changes of date in the future can be made without Constitutional changes.

Sectic n 4. QUALIFICATIONS. A legislative candidate shall be a qualified voter. He shall be a resident cf the state for at least one year, and a resident of the district from which he seeks electicn for at least six months preceding the general election.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of this section are identical to those of section four cf the unicameral article.

Section 5. COMPENSATICN. (1) Each member of the legislature shall receive an annual salary and such allowances as may be prescribed by law; provided that no legislature shall fix its own compensation.

(2) A salary commission shall be created by the legislature to recommend legislative compensation.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of this section are identical to those of section five of the unicameral article.

Section 6. SESSIONS. The legislature shall be a continuous body for two year periods beginning on the date newly elected members take office. Any business, bill, or resolution pending at adjournment of a session shall carry over with the same status to any further session of the legislature during the biennium. The legislature shall meet at least once a year in regular sessions of 90 legislative days or less. Any legislature may increase the limit on the length of any subsequent session. The legislature may be convened in special sessions by the governor, or at the written request of a majority of the members.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of this section are identical to those of section six of the unicameral article.

Section 7. VACANCIES. A vacancy in the legislature shall be filled by special election for the unexpired term unless otherwise provided by law.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of this section are identical to those of section seven of the unicameral article.

Section 8. IMMUNITY. The members of the legislature shall, in all cases, except felony and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of the legislature, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in the legislature, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of this section are identical to those of section eight of the unicameral article.

section 5. DISQUALIFICATION. No legislator shall, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the state of Montana created during such time.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of this section are identical to those of section nine of the unicameral article.

Section 10. ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURE. (1) Each house shall judge the election and qualifications of its members and may by law vest in the courts the trial and determination of contested elections of its members. Each house shall choose its officers from among its members; keep a journal; make rules for its proceedings; and may expel or punish a member with the concurrence of two-thirds of its members.

COMMENTS

Section 10. (1) The language of subsection one is the same as that of section 10, subsection one of the unicameral article except that the words "each house" replace the word "legislature". The subsection combines portions of sections 9, 11, and 12 of Article V of the present Constitution. The rection removes the lieutenant governor from the legislative process and allows the senate to select its own presiding officer.

Section 10. (2) A majority of each house constitutes a quorum to do business. A smaller number may adjourn from day to day and compel attendance of absent members.

COMMENTS

Section 10. (2) The language and explanation of subsection two are the same as those of section 10, subsection two of the unicameral article except that the words "each house" replace the words "the membership of the legislature".

Section 10. (3) All proceedings of the legislature, including committee meetings, shall be open to the public.

COMMENTS

Section 10. (3) The language and explanation of subsection three are the same as those of section 10, subsection three of the unicameral article. The committee did not change the words "the legislature" to the words "each house" because it wants the section to also apply to conference committees between the two houses.

Section 10. (4) Adequate public notice of committee hearings must be given.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of subsection four are the same as those of section 10, subsection four of the unicameral article.

Section 13. (5) The legislature may establish interim committees which may meet and exercise all legislative authority delegated to them.

COMMENTS

section 10. (5) The language and explanation of subsection five are the same as those of section 10, subsection five of the unicameral article.

Section 10. (6) Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn or recess for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

COMMENTS

Subsection six is self-explanatory. It is Article V, section 14 of the present Constitution with words "or recess" added. This subsection pertains only to a bicameral legislature so it is not found in the unicameral article.

Section 13. (7) The legislature shall adopt and use joint rules. One rule shall require that, except on the final session day, each report of a conference committee shall contain an explanation of committee recommendations and be duplicated and distributed to each legislator 24 hours before action may be taken on an affirmative report.

COMMENTS

Section 10. (7) Subsection seven is new. It is not included in the unicameral article because it pertains only to the conference committees of a bicameral legislature. The committee includes this subsection because it believes conference committees should act in a responsible manner.

Section 11. BILLS. (1) A law shall be passed by bill, and a bill shall not be so altered or amended on its passage through the legislature as to change its original purpose.

COMMENTS

Section 11. (1) The language and explanation of subsection one are the same as those of section 11, subsection one of the unicameral article.

Section 11. (2) On any vote which advances or changes the status or substance of a bill, resolution, or rule the vote of each member must be recorded.

COMMENTS

Section 11. (2) The language and explanation of subsection two are the same as those of section 11, subsection two of the unicameral article.

section 11. (3) A bill shall become law upon a majority vote of the members present in each house.

COMMENTS

Section 11. (3) The language and explanation of subsection three are the same as those of section 11, subsection three of the unicameral article except the words "in each house" have been added.

Section 11. (4) Each bill, except general appropriation bills, and bills for the codification and general revision of the laws, shall contain only one subject. A law may be challenged on the grounds of non-compliance with this section within one year after its effective date but not after that period.

COMMENTS

Section 11. (4) The language and explanation of subsection four are the same as those of section 17, subsection four of the unicameral article.

Section 11. (5) General appropriation bills shall contain only appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the state, interest on the public debt and for public schools. All other appropriations shall be made by separate bills, each containing but one subject.

COMMENTS

Section 11. (5) The language and explanation of suksection five are the same as these of section 11, subsection five of the unicameral article.

Section 11. (6) No appropriation shall be made for religious, charitable, industrial, educational or benevolent purposes to any private individual, private association, or private corporation not under control of the state.

COMMENTS

Section 11. (t) The language and explanation of subsection six are the same as those of section 11, subsection six of the unicameral article.

Section 12. LOCAL AND SPECIAL LEGISLATION. The legislature may not pass a special or local act when a general act is, or can be made, applicable.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of this section are identical to those of section 12 of the unicameral article.

Section 13. VETO. (1) Every bill passed by the legislature shall be presented to the governor for his approval and shall become law if he neither approves nor vetoes it within 5 days while the legislature is in session or within 25 days after the legislature has adjourned.

(2) The governor may veto items in appropriation bills.

(3) The governor shall return any vetoed bill with a statement of his objections to the originating house.

(4) The legislature, upon receipt of a veto message, shall reconsider the vetoed bill or item. The legislature may amend a bill to eliminate the objections of the governor. and return the bill to the governor for reconsideration. The legislature may override the veto by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members present in each house.

(5) The governor shall not have the veto power over resolutions, initiative, referendum or Constitutional amendments.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of this section are identical to those of section 13 of the unicameral article except that the words "in each house" are added.

Section 14. IMPEACHMENT. (1) The governor, executive officers, heads of state departments, judicial officers and such other officers as may be made subject to impeachment by law may be removed from office upon conviction of impeachment. Other proceedings for removal from public office for cause may be provided by law.

(2) The legislature shall provide for the manner, procedure and causes for removal by impeachment and may select the senate as tritural.

(3) Impeachment can be brought only be a two-thirds vote of the house and no conviction for impeachment shall be made except by a vote of tuc-thirds or more of the members of the tribunal hearing the charges.

(4) Such conviction shall only extend to removal from office and dicqualificaticc to hold and enjoy any office under the state, but the party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall also be liable to prosecution according to law.

COMMENTS

This proposed section is Article V, secticrs 16, 17, and 18 in an amended form. The proposed section allows the legislature to establish impeachment procedures. The committee believes that the same body which brings the charges should not hear the case. For this reason, the proposed secticn allows the house to bring the charges and allows the legislature to select either the senate or some other body to be the tritural. The proposed section also requires a two-thirds vote to bring the charges and a two-thirds vote to convict. Article V, section 16 requires only a majority vote to bring charges.

The proposed article also allows the legislature to establish other procedures for the removal of officers from public office for cause.

Section 15. DISTRICTING AND APPORTIONMENT. (1) The state shall be divided into as many house districts as there representatives of the house and each district shall elect one representative. Each senate district shall be comprised of two representative districts for the election of one senator. Every legislative district shall consist of compact and contiguous territory and be so nearly equal in population as is practicable.

(2) Immediately upon enactment of this section and in the session preceding each census made by the authority of tha United States a committee of four citizens, none of whoa may be public officials shall be designated to draft a plan for redistricting and reapportioning the state into legislative and congressional districts. The majority and minority leaders of each house shall designate a commissioner. The four commissioners, within 20 days after their designation, shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the coamission. If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the supreme court shall appoint the chairnan.

(3) No later than 90 days after appointment of the chairman, or following the official reporting of each federal census, whichever is later in time, the commission shall file a plan with the secretary of state.

(4) Any person aggrieved by the preliminary plan shall have 30 days to file exceptions with the commission in which case the commission shall have 30 days after the date the exceptions were filed to Prepare and file a revised plan. If no exceptions are filed within 30 days, or if filed and acted upon, the commission's plan shall be final and have the force of law.

(5) Any aggrieved person may file an appeal from the plan directly to the supreme court within 30 days after the filing. If the appellant establishes that the final plan is contrary to law, the supreme court shall issue an order remanding the plan to the commission and directing the commission to reapportion and redistrict in a manner not inconsistent with such order.

(6) When the supreme court has finally decided an appeal taken, the reapportionment plan shall have the force of law and the districts shall be used thereafter in elections to the legislature until the next reapportionment is required.

COMMENTS

The committee believes that large multi-member districts are not conducive to effective representation, are too large in area, and are legally vulnerable. However, the committee considered allowing two representatives to run at large within a senatorial district with the provision that the districts could be divided into single-member representative districts as Provided by law. Several members saw merit in the "as provided by law" provision for it affords a degree of flexibility. By keeping the senatorial districts intact, the number of representative districts would be One-half their number otherwise. They believed this would simplify the redistricting process.

However, a majority of the committee dislike this idea because it eliminates one of the major arguments for a bicameral legislature--two houses that represent different constituencies. The committee believes that senators should represent a larger constituency than the members of the house. In addition, the committee believes that the more accurate and accountable representation afforded by single-member districts is worth the additional problems involved in drawing boundary lines.

The rest of the explanation of this section is the sane as that found under section 15 of the unicameral article.

Section 16. THE PEOPLE'S ADVOCATE. (1) The majority and minority leaders of each house shall together appoint the people's advocate.

(2) The people's advocate shall have the duty to provide information to any person upon request relating to government; and shall have subpoena power and authority to investigate on complaint or on his own initiative any act or omission of any agency of government, and take appropriate action. The legislature shall provide for this office and its operation.

COMMENTS

The language and explanation of section 16 are identical to those in section 16 of the unicameral article except that the words "in each house" in subsection one replace the words "of the legislature".

COMMITTEE ON THE LEGISLATURE

MINORITY PROPOSAL 1

BE IT PROPOSED:

That the following be substituted for section 1 entitled "Legislative Power" of the Majority Bicameral Proposal:

> The legislative power of the state shall be vested in a Parliament consisting of one chamber; but the people reserve to themselves the initiative, including the right to amend this Constitution, and referendum powers.

/s/ Robert Lee Kelleher

/s/ Mae Nan Robinson

/s/ Miles Romney

/s/ John H. Leuthold

/s/ Daphne Bugbee

COMMENTS

The Parliamentary Proposal provides that the chief executive would be chosen by the majority Party in the legislature, rather than by a separate ballot.

The members shall serve four year terms, one-half of whom shall be elected every two years. Each candidate must be a resident of the state for one year preceding this election.

The chief executive shall appoint a cabinet out of the legislature (choosing from either the majority or minority as he sees fit).

MINORITY PROPOSAL 2

BE IT PROPOSED:

That the following be substituted for section 2 entitled "Size" of the Majority Bicameral Proposal:

> The size of the legislature shall be prescribed by law, but the senate shall consist of not more than 52 nor less than 45 members and the house of not more than 104 nor less than 90 members.

/s/ Grace Bates

/s/ Miles Romney

/s/ Torrey Johnson

/s/ R. Nutting

COMMENTS

If Montana is to maintain a citizens' legislature - it must have an adequate number of members to insure a broad base of experience and expertise in all of the fields of state government. A small legislature with large staff becomes a bureaucracy where the staff governs the legislature and the people have lost the last vestige of control over their government. Size is a compromise with existing facilities, while it is our feeling that perhaps no limits should be placed on size by the Constitution this is a figure (45-52-90-104) which could be reasonably adjusted to give adequate representation to the sparcely populated rural areas. An elected, informed citizen legislature is much more reflective of the will of the people, than a small, bureaucratic, staff dominated, assembly. True representation should never be sacrificed for the sake of efficiency and expediency.

MINORITY PROPOSAL 3

BE IT PROPOSED:

That the following be substituted for section 4 entitled "Qualifications" of the Majority Bicameral Proposal:

> Legislative candidates must be citizens of the United States and qualified voters of the State of Montana and shall have resided in of Montana for one year and residents of the district for 60 days prior to the primary election.

/s/ Grace Bates

/s/ Miles Romney

/s/ Torrey Johnson

/s/ R. T. Nutting

/s/ John H. Leuthold

COMMENTS

Qualifications are provided for suffrage. Legislators should at least possess the qualifications of the electors who name the legislators. This entails having the same residence qualifications for electors and their representatives. The primary election, being the first positive step in the election process, should be the determinative factor in such residence qualifications as the legislature fixes in its effort to provide the best possible representation for constituects. No exact time should be placed in the Constitution because changing times and mores might necessitate revision of residence as well as other qualifications.

MINORITY PROPCSAL 4

BE II PROPOSED:

That the fcllccinq be substituted fcr sfcticn 5 entitled "Compensaticn" cf the Majority Bicameral Proposal:

> Each member of the legislature shall receive compensaticn for his services and allowances as nay be prescribed by law. Nc legislature may fix its own ccmpensaticn.

/s/ Magnus Aasheim

/s/ Miles Romney

/s/ Icrrey Johnscn

/s/ R. T. Nutting

COMMENTS

The complicatiens cf trying tc specify a particular methcd cf Payment that would meet ccnditicns fox years tc come lead us to believe that the methods must be left up to legislative decision. This provisicn dces not tie the legislature tc any Particular method cf determining amcunts cr methcds cf setting pay but will allow then tc adjust as they deem necessary. A complication arises in PERS if the annual salary is less thar $7200. A daily wage might satisfy those legislators desiring tc come under PERS.

MINORITY PROPOSAL 5

BE IT PROPOSED:

That the following be substituted for section 6 entitled "Sessions" of the Majority Bicameral Proposal:

> Following the general election the legislature shall meet in regular session before March 1 or earlier as provided by law. The regular session shall not exceed 80 legislative days. Any business, bill, or resolution pending at adjournment of a session shall carry over with the same status to any future special session during the biennium.
> Special sessions not to exceed 30 days may be convened by the governor or by a majority vote of the membership of each house. Regular and special sessions may be extended by a majority vote of each house.

/s/ Torrey Johnson

/s/ Miles Romney

/s/ Magnus Aasheim

/s/ Grace Bates

/s/ R. T. Nutting

COMMENTS

The minority report allows for a date certain to convene, with an allowance for it to adjust to changing times. It provides for a deadline toward which the legislature can work, and yet, by a majority vote can extend the regular session to adjust for emergencies. The minority report specifies legislative days; thus allowing the legislature to recess without pay.

Since the present 60 day limitation includes Saturdays and Sundays, the legislature presently could actually be working only 44 days. The 80 legislative days is consequently nearly twice as many days as at present. Many legislators are asking for a limit to the days allowed. The committee feels a body should have deadlines to meet.

Setting the number of days is not as restrictive as some would like; however, the committee feels that restriction is necessary in order to keep the legislature open to as many vocations as possible; not to have a restriction will make for a professional type of law making body. The provision giving the body the right to call itself back into session by majority vote is flexible: yet there is the implied understanding they must make an accounting for the extension to their constituents. The provision is alsc flexible in that the bcdy has the ability to use interim committees which may eliminate the necessity cf the whole group meeting for planning special assignments such as the budget.

The provision a bill may be carried over tc anctber meeting will be a saving of both time and mcney.

To: MONTANA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

From: Executive Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The Executive Committee transmits herewith a proposed new executive article replacing Articles II, VII and XIV of the present Constitution.

In summary it repeals Article II relating to new abandoned military posts entirely, inserts the militia provision of Article XIV into the new executive article, and completely rewrites the executive article. The changes and reasons therefor are set forth in the comments after each new section.

The new article makes these changes.

(1) It eliminates from the Constitution, but does not abolish, the stats treasurer, state auditor, state examiner, board of pardons, board of examiners and board of prison commissioners;

(2) The lieutenant governor and governor must run as a team in the primary and general elections.

(3) The office of lieutenant governor is permitted to be a full time position.

(4) It provides the superintendent of public instruction may be made an appointive office by the legislature in the future.

(5) The salaries of elected officials may be increased but not decreased during tht term.

(6) The executive budget is given Cocstitutional recognition.

(7) The governor's veto power is modified by permitting the amendatory veto and the "pocket" veto is eliminated.

(8) The lieutenant governor will not assume the powers of governor until he is absent from the state for 45 days, unless the goerncr authorizes him in writing to so act in the first 45 day period.

(9) It establishes a comprehensive disability procedure to determine the disability of the governor.

(10) It clarifies the filling of vacancies of elected offices.

The committee is grateful to all the elected state officials, past and present, the administrative department heads, the delegates who submitted proposals and all who appeared before the committee. Special thanks go to Miss Karen Beck, our research analyst, and John Crawford, the college intern assigned to our committee and to our efficient and conscientious secretary, Mrs. Barbara Lester.

By signing the majority proposal the committee members do not necessarily endorse each and every provision therein contained.

We trust that we have submitted an improved executive article for the consideration of the delegates and will graciously accept their final decision in the premises.

Section 7. 2G DEPARTMENTS. All executive and administrative offices, boards, bureaus, commissions, agencies and instrumentalities of the executive department of state government and their respective functions, powers, and duties, except for the office of governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general and superintendent of public instruction shall be allocated by law among and within not more than 20 departments. Subsequently, all new powers or functions shall be assigned to departments, divisions, sections, or units in such manner as will tend to provide an orderly arrangement in the administrative organization of state government. Temporary commissions may be established by law and need not be allocated within a principal department.

Section 8. APPOINTING POWER. (1) The principal departments provided for in section 7 shall be under the supervision of the governor, and, except as otherwise provided herein or by law, shall be headed by a single executive appointed by the governor and subject to confirmation by the legislature. Such executives shall hold office until the end of the term of the governor, unless sooner removed by the governor.

(2) The governor shall appoint, subject to confirmation by the legislature all officers provided for by this Constitution or by law and whose appointment or election or term is not otherwise provided for. They shall hold office until the end of the term of the governor unless sooner removed by the governor.

(3) If a vacancy in any such office occurs during a recess of the legislature, the governor shall appoint some fit person to discharge the duties thereof until the next meeting of the legislature, when the office shall be filled by appointment and confirmation.

(4) No person not confirmed by the legislature for an office shall, except at its request, be renominated again for that office at the same session, or be appointed to that office during a recess of the legislature.

Section 9. BUDGET AND MESSAGES. The governor shall at the beginning of each legislative session, and may at other times, give the legislature information and recommend measures he considers necessary. The governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail, for all operating funds, the proposed expenditures and estimated revenue of the state.

Section 10. VETO POWER. (1) All bills passed by the legislature; except bills proposing amendments to the Montana Constitution, bills ratifying proposed amendments to the United States Constitution, resolutions, and initiative and referendum measures, shall be submitted to the governor who shall sign or veto every bill within five days after its delivery to him if the legislature is in session, or within 25 days if the legislature is adjourned. The governor shall return vetoed bills to the legislature with a statement cf his otjecticns.

(2) The governor may return any bill tc the legislature with his cbjecticns and with a reccmmendaticn fcr an amendment or amendments to it. If the legislature passes the bill in accordance with the governor's reccmmendation, it shall again return the bill to the governor for his reconsideraticn. The governor shall nct return a bill a seccnd time, fcr amendment.

(3) Upcn receipt of a vetc message, the legislature shall reconsider passage cf the vetoed bill. A tuc-thirds vote of the members present cverrides the vetc, and the bill shall become law.

(4) If the legislature is cct ir serricn when the governor vetces a bill, he shall return the bill with his objections to the legislature in a manner authorized ty law. The legislature, as prcvided in secticn 11, nay reccnvene itself to reconsider any bills sc vetoed by the governcr.

(5) The governor may vetc items in apprcpriation bills, ard in such instances the procedure shall be the same as upon v&to of an entire bill.

Section 11. SPECIAL SESSICN. Whenever the governor ccrsiders it in the public interest, he may ccnvene the legislature, either house, or the two houses in joint session. At the written request of two-thirds of the members of each house, the presiding officers cf both houses shall convene the legislature in special session.

Section 12. PARDONS. The governor shall have the pcwer to grant reprieves, ccmmutaticns and pardcns after ccnvicticn, reinstate citizenship and may suspend and remit fines and forfeitures subject to procedures prescribed by law.

Secticn 13. MILITIA. (1) The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the militia forces cf the state, except when these forces are in the actual service of the United States, and shall have power to call cut any part of the whole of said fcrces tc aid in the execution of the laws, tc suppress insurrection or to repel invasicn.

(2) The militia fcrces shall consist of all able-bcdied citizens of the state except such perscns as are exempted ty law.

Secticn 14. SUCCESSION. (1) If the gcvernor-elect is disqualified, or dies, the lieutenant gcverncr-elect upcn qualifying for the office shall beccme governcr fcr the full term. If the governor-elect fails to assume office for any other reason, the lieutenant governor-elect upon qualifying as such shall serve as acting governor until the governor-elect qualifies for office, or until the cffice becomes vacant.

(2) The lieutenant governor shall serve as acting governor when requested in writing by the governor to do so. He shall serve as acting governor during the absence from the state of the governor for any period in excess of 45 days.

(3) He shall also serve as acting governor when the governor is disabled and by reason of that disability is unable to communicate to the lieutenant governor the fact of his inability to perform the duties of his office. The lieutenant governor in such event shall continue to serve as acting governor until the governor resumes the duties of his office.

(4) Whenever the lieutenant governor and attorney general transmit to the presiding officer of the legislature their written declaration that the governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the legislature shall convene.

(5) If the legislature, within 21 days after convening, determines by two-thirds vote of its members present that the governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the lieutenant governor shall enter upon and discharge the same as acting governor; thereafter, when the governor transmits to the presiding officer of the legislature his written declaration that no inability exists, he shall resume the powers and duties of his office within 15 days, unless the legislature determines otherwise by two-thirds vote of its members. If the legislature so determines, the lieutenant governor shall continue to discharge the powers and duties of the office as acting governor.

(6) If the office of governor becomes vacant by reason of death, resignation, or disqualification, the lieutenant governor shall become governor for the remainder of the term.

(7) Additional succession to such vacancies shall be as provided by law.

(8) When there is a vacancy in the office of governor, the successor shall have the title, powers, duties and emoluments of that office and shall be the governor. When the successor serves as acting governor for a temporary period, he shall have only the powers and duties of the office for the period during which he serves as such.

COMMENTS ON MAJORITY PROPOSAL

Section 1. OFFICERS. (1) The executive department shall consist of a governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, and superintendent of public instruction.

(2) The superintendent of public instruction shall be the chief educational officer of the state, and shall have such qualifications, duties, salary, term of office and manner of election or selection as is provided by law.

(3) Except as herein provided for the superintendent of public instruction, each shall hold his office for a term of four years, commencing on the first Monday of January next succeeding his election and until a successor is elected and qualified.

(4) Each shall reside at the seat of government, where he shall keep the public records of his office.

(5) Each shall perform such duties as are prescribed in this Constitution, and by law.

COMMENTS

The first sentence of section 1 reveals the decision of the majority of the executive committee as to the length of the ballot--it is neither "short" nor "long". By a minority report, the "long" ballot is favored, and by an amendment to be presented on the floor the "short" ballot will be proposed. Thus, the convention will consider in all its aspects the structure of the state executive department.

The majority decision is to remove from the Constitution the offices of state treasurer and state auditor, and to place in optional elective or appointive status the superintendent of public instruction. In addition, the committee is unanimous in removing from the Constitution the office of state examiner (section 8). In reaching this decision, the committee emphasizes to the convention that removal from the Corrtitution does not automatically delete or terminate the offices affected. They remain statutory offices until changed by the legislature, and all the arguments advanced to this committee for retaining them as elective offices are equally applicable to the legislature.

The principal reason for the committee decision is that the functions of the state treasurer, state auditor and state examiner are changing materially under the reorganization plan, and we believe that their future position should therefore not be "frozen" in their present form. Similar considerations apply to the superintendent of public instruction, as will he explained later.

Having stated the essence of our decision on these subjects, we will describe briefly our procedures in making them. We interviewed practically all of the principal officers of the executive department so as to learn how their functions have been affected by reorganization under the amendment approved by the voters in 1970, and how their furctions may serve as forms of check and balance on other functions. From this information, analyzed and compared with the modern trends in other states where applicable to conditions in Montana, WE concluded with respect to the several offices:

Governor - the people having decisively voted to implement a well-ordered executive department of government in place of the 103 or more boards, bureaus, commissions, etc., it is clear that a strong and responsive chief executive is desired. WE have clarified his powers and duties accordingly.

Lieutenant Governor - consistent with the above, we have authorized an effective, full time lieutenant governor to assist the governor, and to become a trained and responsible successor to the governor should that become necessary. It is clear that the governor's increasing duties and responsibilities require more adequate staff support, and the lieutenant governor's position is an appropriate part of it. To obtain the maximum of effective cooperation between these two officers, we have provided that they shall be nominated and elected together.

Attorney General - he is the chief legal officer of the state. He prosecutes or defends all litigation in which the state is a party. He is legal counsel to all state officers and agencies. He supervises many of the functions of county attorneys, and through them the county officers and agencies. In addition to this, he is legal adviser to the governor. and here there arises divergence of opinion as to whether he should be appointed by the governor (so as to be fully compatible with his client, so to speak) or be elected by the people (so as to be primarily responsible to thee).

The majority of our committee believes he should be in independent status as an elected officer, charged with enforcement of all the law for all the people. Since the governor already has much authority, through the appointing power particularly, we favor having an independent attorney general free to inquire into the faithful performance of duty by any state official or employee. We believe the governor should have the right and opportunity to choose his own legal counsel, but that such counsel should be a part of his official staff rather than the attorney general.

Secretary of State - this office has a long historical and traditional significance, and we thick there is valid reason to retain it for practical purposes as well as tradition. As official custodian of the state's most important legislative and executive documents, we relieve he also should have the clear safeguard of independent election with Constitutional status. His principal functions are ministerial, not policy forming, and by removing certain Constitutional boards on which he has served, there is little basis for fear that his position might in the future hamper the executive function of the governor.

State Treasurer -

State Auditor - these offices are primarily charged rith duties in the financial area. With the advent of reorganization, the entire accounting and bookkeeping process of all state and local agencies is being converted into a uniform pattern. Also, the legislature has developed the process of legislative post-audit, and there is a growing pre-audit system. The committee believes it unwise to retain ir Constitutional status tuo offices whose principal service is in this very fluctuating field, and that efficient auditing and record keeping should be allowed to develop flexibly through legislation as tectnolcgy and experience permit.

Superintendent of Public Instructicc - this office is a part of the executive department, and yet it affects solely the educational function, as established by Article XI. We fully explored the duties of this office, and its rflaticn to the state board of education, in order to determine whether it should be included, excluded or modified. It performs practically cc function exclusively referable to the university system, and the board performs practically no function referable to elementary and secondary education. Thus, the board is, in net effect, a lay board charged with complex responsibilities in a professional field, and is without full-time professional counsel and assistance. There is much public support for obtaining by appointment instead of election a professional educator to fill the gap which exists by virtue of the present Constitution. There is also support for retaining the present status of the superintendent's office. There is also clear need to resolve the doubt and ambiguity which currently exist as to the respective duties and authorities of the board and the superintendent, now resolved simply by mutual forbearance. There is clear prophecy of vast change in the educational field, due to the Constitutional problems as to property tax equality now being litigated in California, Texas and Minnesota. Therefore, the committee believes the whole structure of Montana's $100,000,000 per year educational system should not remain frozen in any form in the Corstitution, and proposes to handle the superintendent's office by an optional method which allows the legislature to make the office elective or appointive as in its current judgment it finds most advantageous.

Board of Examiners - composed of the governor, attorney general and secretary of state, this board once was very powaarful.

It is no longer so, meeting once a month for a few minutes to consider unliquidated claims (if any) against the state. This change has occurred through the reorganization. Being no longer useful, the committee believes it should be deleted from the Constitution, to be revived by legislation if necessity for it should again arise.

State Examiner - most Constitutions do not create an office of state examiner, but Montana did in 1889. While he once examined the accounts of some state offices, he has become the examiner only of county and local agencies now. The legislative audit has greatly changed his function, and many more changes are anticipated. It has not yet been determined how Montana's ultimate modernized accounting and record system, on a uniform basis, will be audited, as this must await its completion. In any event, this is a statutory matter which should be free for adjustment by the legislature as changing conditions may require. The state examiner himself concurs in this view.

> Section 2. ELECTION. (1) The governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general and the superintendent of public instruction, if his election is provided by law, shall be elected by the qualified electors of the state at a general election held and finally determined as provided by law.
> (2) Each candidate for governor shall file jointly with a candidate for lieutenant governor in primary elections or otherwise comply with nomination procedures, so that the offices of governor and lieutenant governor shall be voted upon together in primary and general elections, as provided by law.

COMMENTS

The major change in this section is the provision requiring the candidates for governor and lieutenant governor to run as a team at the time of filing. This is similar to the federal pattern.

The committee's intent was to make the lieutenant governor's duties full-time with the legislature providing adequate compensation commensurate with the responsibilities to be delegated by the governor and the legislature. These would provide the lieutenant governor with an insight to governmental responsibilities which would be of great value in the event he would have to assume the governorship. The committee was aware and is in agreement with the legislative department committee's decision eliminating the Constitutional requirement that the lieutenant governor must preside over the senate. More meaningful duties thus can be assigned to this office.

Other Elective Officials

The article provides for the election of the secretary of state and the attorney general, but makes optional with the legislature the election or selection of the state superintendent of public instruction.

> Section 3. QUALIFICATIONS. (1) Any person shall be eligible to the office of governor, lieutenant governor or secretary of state if he or she is a citizen of the United States, a resident of Montana for two years next preceding the election, and is otherwise a qualified voter.
> (2) In addition to the foregoing qualifications, any person to be eligible to the office of attorney general shall be an attorney in good standing admitted to practice law in the state of Montana, and have engaged in the active practice thereof for five years before election.

COMMENTS

The major deletion in article 3 was removal of the age requirement for all candidates except the attorney general. This age deletion was discussed in detail, but the majority of the committee concluded the people, the basic power source for effective government, could be relied upon to make the proper judgment as to candidates' qualifications and abilities to cope with the responsibilities elective officials acquire with election. The majority of the committee concluded the newly franchised young voters would vote just as wisely and cautiously as do their elders.

The exception for the attorney general was to conform with the proposed judicial article requiring five years of active practice before election, which would require a candidate to be at least 26 years of age.

> Section 4. DUTIES. (1) The executive power of the state is vested in the governor, who shall see that the laws are faithfully executed. He shall have such other duties as are herein provided, and as provided by law.
> (2) The lieutenant governor shall perform the duties delegated to him by the governor, and those provided for him by law, but no power specifically vested in the governor by this Constitution may be delegated to the lieutenant governor in this manner.
> (3) The secretary of state shall maintain the official records of the acts of the legislative assembly, and of the executive department, as provided by law. He shall keep the great seal of the state of Montana, and perform any other duties provided by law.

(4) The attorney general shall be the legal officer of the state, with the duties and powers provided by law.

COMMENTS

This section retains Article VII, section 5 of the present Constitution with the deletion of the word "supreme" as superfluous. It acknowledges the governor is the chief executive and is to be in control of the executive branch of the government. Of course, he is limited in this connection by laws passed by the legislature, and is further limited by this section from direct responsibility of performing the duties assigned the secretary of state and attorney general, yet he is charged with duty to see that these officials perform the duties assigned to them by law.

In specifying dual duties for the lieutenant governor, namely those delegated to him by the governor as well as those that may be delegated to him by law, this section makes it Constitutionally permissible for the legislature to make this a full time position. However, neither the governor nor the legislature can delegate to him Constitutional duties assigned to the governor, such as, the veto power, the appointive power, the budgetary power, the pardoning power and others specifically set forth in the executive article. To assume any of these powers the lieutenant governor must become acting governor as hereinafter provided.

It is important to note that this section deletes the present Constitutional authority of the lieutenant governor to assume the powers of the governor every time the governor leaves the state.

The secretary of state is made the official keeper of the great seal and the official records. He can also continue to be the supervisor of elections as he may perform duties prescribed by law. By undertaking to set forth specific duties it is hoped that future assignment of duties by law to this office will be confined to the same general area and that the secretary of state will not be made a policy maker. However, we recognize the power of the legislature is plenary.

Similarly, this section recognizes that the principal duties of the attorney general will be to act as the legal officer of the state. The committee considered, but rejected, including his recently acquired statutory duties with respect to law enforcement and public safety. While the committee believes it is proper he shculd have such duties they shculd nct be Constituticnally required. Again it is hoped this office will nct be made a policy maker.

Sectien 5. COMPENSATION. (1) Cfficers cf the executive department shall receive salaries provided by law, which may be increased but not decreased during the term of office.

(2) NO elected cfficer cf the executive department may during his term hold any cther public cffice, cr receive compecsaticn for his services frca any gcvernmental agency. He may be a candidate for any public cffice during his term.

COMMENTS

This section changes the present Ccnstitutional provision that permits decreases but bars increases in salary during the term. The reverse is now permitted. The present Ccnstitutional prohibition regarding increases in salary have nade it impcssible to realistically adjust for inflaticnary pressures in the econcmy, and the risk that the legislature k-ill be over generous is not warranted by our histcrp.

The committee considered delegate prcpcsal 39 creating a wage board, but thought it tc be a legislative matter. The changes made in this section shculd give the legislature the courage to set just and fair salaries for elected officials.

The second paragraph makes clear an elected cfficial cannot hcld two public offices at the same time, ncr can he be cn twc government payrclls nor receive compensaticn frcm the federal and state governments for performing governmental duties. It alsc clears any ambiguity that arises frcm the last sentence cf the present Article VII, section 4, and makes it clear the cfficers of the executive department can seek ancther office without resignirg. upon election, cf course, he must resign or decline one or the other.

Section 6. VACANCY IN CFFICE. (1) If the cffice cf lieutenant gcvernct tecemes vacant his succession tc the office of governor, or by his death, resignaticn cr disability as determined by law, the governor shall appcint a qualified person to hold and serve in that office for the remainder of its term.

(2) If the office of secretary cf state or attorney general becomes vacant by death, rfsignaticn cr disability as determined by law, the gcvernor shall appoint a qualified persen to hold and serve in that office until the next general electicn, and until his successor is elected and qualified. The person elected to fill such vacancy shall hold the office until the expiration of the term for which the person he succeeds was elected.

(3) If the office of superintendent of public instruction becomes vacant, it shall be filled in the manner above provided if it is at that time an elective office; otherwise it shall be filled as provided by law.

COMMENTS

This section presupposes the governor and lieutenant governor will run as a team. It was therefore thought desirable to allow the governor to appoint his own teammate for the remainder of the term when a vacancy exists in the office of lieutenant governor. However, with the other officers we followed the established pattern of requiring election if the vacancy occurs in the first half of the term.

The appropriate except-ion is made if the superintendent of public instruction is made an appointive position by the legislature in the future.

Section 7. 20 DEPARTMENTS. All executive and administrative offices, boards, bureaus, commissions, agencies and instrumentalities of the executive department of state government and their respective function, powers, and duties, except for the office of governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general and superintendent of public instruction shall be allocated by law among and within not more than 20 departments. Subsequently, all new powers or functions shall be assigned to departments, divisions, sections, or units in such manner as will tend to provide an orderly arrangement in the administrative organization of state government. Temporary commissions may be estatliched by law and need not be allocated within a principal department.

COMMENTS

The 1889 Constitution's inherent contradiction -- the delegation of executive power to the governor, yet restricting that power due to diffusion in Constitutional boards -- has been clarified by the adoption of the executive reorganization amendment and the proposed corollary charges in this executive article.

Previously, the divided powers of boards of elective officers, such as the board of examiners, made a mockery of section 5 of the present Constitution: "The supreme executive power of the state shall be vested in the governor, who shall see that the laws are faithfully executed.". The governor, under reorganization and in this article, has the responsibility and the accountability to the electorate and the legislature. This fundamental principle of delegation of power is an important hrsakthrough in the continuing effort for effective, responsible, viable and efficient government. The state's chief executive will be chief in fact, not in rhetoric.

The majority of the committee deleted as Constituticral and elective officers the offices of state auditor and state treasurer in accordance with the conviction that the responsibilities and duties could be included under the 20 department reorganization amendment and statutes.

Section E. APPOINTING POWER. The principal departments provided for in section 7 shall be under the supervision of the governor, and, except as otherwise provided herein or by lar, shall be headed by a single executive appointed by the governor and subject to confirmation by the legislature. Such executives shall hold office until the end of the term of the governor, unless sooner removed by the governor.

(2) The governor shall appoint, subject to confirmation by the legislature all officers provided for by this Constitution or by lau and whose appointment or election or term is not otherwise provided for. Thfy shall hold office until the end of the term of the governor unless sooner removed by the governor.

(3) If a vacancy in any such office occurs during a recess of the legislature, the governor shall appoint some fit person to discharge the duties thereof until the next meeting of the legislature, when the office shall be filled by appointment and confirmation.

(4) No person not confirmed by the legislature for an office shall, except at its request, be nominated again for that office at the same session, or be appointed to that office during a recess of the legislature.

COMMENTS

The fundamental concept of checks and balances by separate branches of government is a key part of section 8. The governor has been delegated supervisory powers in this article in accord to his Constitutional designation of executive power and the reorganization amendment and statutes already approved.

This section is in keeping with the legislative implementation, dating back to the 1920's, of such a program. However, the legislature had to reverse a trend whereby executive power had been whittled to insignificance by creation of more than 160 state agencies with little executive or legislative supervision.

Now, this article, the governor has been delegated that power, as well as the right to appoint and remove heads of the principal departments. However, the legislature has the power to confirm such appointments with added safeguards to protect reappointment of rejected nominees.

Section 9. BUDGET AND MESSAGES. The governor shall at the beginning of each legislative session, and may at other times, give the legislature information and recommend measures he considers necessary. The governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail, for all operating funds, the proposed expenditures and estimated revenue of the state.

COMMENTS

This section adopts the proposal of the Constitution revision sub-committees made in 1969, and is in accordance with the prior recommendation of the legislative council. The present statutory responsibility of the governor to submit an executive budget to the legislature is made mandatory by the Constitution.

It revises section 10 of the [resent Article VII, and eliminates the excess verbiage. The other requirements of present section 10 are and should be governed by statute and administrative procedures.

Section 10. VETO POWER. (1) All bills passed by the legislature, except bills proposing amendments to the Montana Constitution, bills ratifying proposed amendments to the United States Constitution, resolutions, and initiative and referendum measures, shall be submitted to the governor who shall sign or veto every bill within five days after its delivery to him if the legislature is in session, or within 25 days if the legislature is adjourned. The governor shall return vetoed bills to the legislature with a statement of his objections.

(2) The governor may return any bill to the legislature with his objections and with a recommendation for an amendment or amendments to it. If the legislature passes the bill in accordance with the governor's recommendation, it shall again return the bill to the Governor for his reconsideration. The governor shall not return a bill a second time, for amendment.

(3) Upon receipt of a veto message, the legislature shall reconsider passage of the vetoed bill. A two-thirds vote of the members present overrides the veto, and the bill shall become law.

(4) If the legislature is not in session when the governor vetoes a bill, he shall return the bill with his objections to the legislature in a manner authorized by law. The legislature, as provided in rection 11, may reconvene itself to reconsider any bills EC vetoed by the goverccr.

(5) 'The governor may veto items in appropriation bills, and in such instances the procedure shall be the same as upon veto of an entire till.

COMMENTS

This section removes the governor from the process of amending the state and federal Constituticns. Conrtitutional amendments initially must be approved by a two-thirds vote in each house, which is the same majority required to override a gubernatorial veto. Therefore, there is no reason to involve the governor in the process. Similarly, the signature of the governor is not required for reroluticns because resoluticns do not have the effect of law. Consistent with section 1 of Article V of the present Constitution, the governor has no veto power over initiative and referendum measurer.

By the requirement in subsection 1 that the governor sign or veto every till presented to hio, the "pocket veto" is eliminated. Furthermore, subsection 4 authorizes the legislature to reconvene to consider post-session vetoes. The time period for gubernatorial consideration of bills after adjournment of the legislature has been lengthened from 15 to 25 days to give the governor sufficient time to adequately study bills and in recognition of the "log-jam" of logislaticn passed in the closing days of the legislature.

The committee considered and rejected the reducticr veto, which is the power to reduce items in appropriation bills, because the members believe such a veto could result in irresponsibility. The reduction veto encourages the legislature to appropriate large sums of money to popular causes, shiftirg the onus of reducing the appropriations to the governor, while it also enables the governor to thwart an activity or program without the stigma of killing it.

The committee did, however, authorize the amendatory veto in subsection 2, which permits the governor to return a bill to the legislature with recommendations for changes that would make the bill acceptable to him. If the legislature by majority vote of the members present accepts the governor's recommendations, the bill is returned to the governor for reconsideration. The governor is prohibited from returning the bill a second time. The amendatory veto accommodates the situations when the governor objects to only parts of a bill and recognizes its general merit. In the states which authorize the amendatory veto, it is utilized more than the regular veto. The power of amendatory veto is intended to extend to appropriation bills. In addition, the item veto is retained in subsection 5.

Section 11. SPECIAL SESSION. Whenever the governor considers it in the public interest, he may convene the legislature, either house, or the two houses in joint session. At the written request of two-thirds of the members of each house, the presiding officers of both houses shall convene the legislature in special session.

COMMENTS

This section revises present section 11 of Article VII. It continues the power of the governor to call special sessions but removes his present authority to confine the subjects to be considered. If the legislature is given power to call itself into session the present limitation would be ineffective in any case.

The section also permits the legislature to call itself into session by a two-thirds vote of the full membership. The decision on this question will be reached in the legislative committee proposal.

Section 12. PARDONS. The governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after conviction, reinstate citizenship and may suspend and remit fines and forfeitures subject to procedures prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

This section revises the present section 9 of Article VII. It deletes all the material after the proviso in the present section. The power of the governor to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons is still made subject to procedures prescribed by law.

The legislature has now provided for an appointive lap hoard of pardons and paroles. It no doubt will continue to do so. Yet it seems to the majority of the committee unnecessary to require it. The executive reorganization director and the present chairman of the board of pardons recommended the deletion.

The historical power of the chief executive to show mercy should be retained, and the majority believe there is no Constitutional need for a buffer board appointed by the governor.

By making no reference to the board of prison commissioners in present section 20, the majority of the committee suggests repeal. The control of the prison has been assigned by law to the department of institutions and the Constitutional board consisting of the governor, attorney general and secretary of state has not been performing its Constitutional duty in fact for many years. The executive reorganization director recommends the repeal to conform to the fact.

> Section 13. MILITIA. The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the militia forces of the state, except when these forces are in the actual service of the United States, and shall have power to call out any part of the whole of said forces to aid in the execution of the laws, to suppress insurrection or to repel invasion.
> (2) The militia forces shall consist of all able-bodied citizens of the state except such persons as are exempted by law.

COMMENTS

The subject of military matters appears in Article II, Article XIV, and the above section which gives the govefnor command Of the state militia. It no longer has the significance it did in frontier times, and has become largely superseded or obsolete. The committee recommends simple repeal of Article II and Article XIV, and inclusion of the first paragraph of former Article XIV into section 13 above.

Article II - Research by the legislative council shows that none of the military reservations referred to in this article presently exist as such. No similar article exists in other Constitutions. Its subject matter having passed out of existence, so also should the article.

Article XIV - except for its section 1, which we have included in our section 13. this article merely refers to various matters on which the legislature was to pass lsgislation. Since it could as well do so without such provisions in the Constitution, they serve no useful purpose, and it is simply proper drafting to eliminate them. This is also recommended by the legislative council. Other Constitutions do not contain similar provisions.

The first paragraph of this section is former section 6 carried forward without change.

The second paragraph is taken from section 1, Article XIV, without change except in one significant respect. The committee includes those daring, forward-looking ladies who foresee the time when their sex will be liberated to equal responsibility for the safety of our state in time of trouble. They have volunteered feminine membership in the state militia, something which bodes well for the future of its readiness for action. Therefore, the draft as submitted omits the word "male" by necessity, and the age limitations by courtesy.

Section 14. SUCCESSION. (1) If the governor-elect is disqualified, or dies, the lieutenant governor-elect upon qualifying for the office shall become governor for the full term. If the governor-elect fails to assume office for any other reason, the lieutenant governor-elect upon qualifying as such shall serve as acting governor until the governor-elect qualifies for office, or until the office becomes vacant.

(2) The lieutenant governor shall serve as acting governor when requested in writing by the governor to do so. He shall serve as acting governor during the absence from the state of the governor for any period in excess of 45 days.

(3) He shall also serve as acting governor when the governor is disabled and by reason of that disability is unable to communicate to the lieutenant governor the fact of his inability to perform the duties of this office. The lieutenant governor in such event shall continue to serve as acting governor until the governor resumes the duties of his office.

(4) Whenever the lieutenant governor and attorney general transmit to the presiding officer of the legislature their written declaration that the governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the legislature shall convene.

(5) If the legislature, within 21 days after convening, determines by two-thirds, vote of its members present that the governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the lieutenant governor shall enter upon and discharge the same as acting governor; thereafter, when the governor transmits to the presiding officer of the legislature his written declaration that no inability exists, he shall resume the powers and duties of his office within 15 days, unless the legislature determine otherwise by two-thirds vote of its members. If the legislature so determines, the lieutenant governor shall continue to discharge the powers and duties of the office as acting governor.

(6) If the office of governor becomes vacant by reason of death, resignation, or disqualification, the lieutenant governor shall become governor for the remainder of the term.

(7) Additional succession to such vacancies shall be as provided by law.

(8) When there is a vacancy in the office of governor, the successor shall have the title, powers, duties and emoluments of that office and shall be the governor. When the successor serves as acting governor for a temporary period, he shall have only the powers and duties of the office for the period during which he serves as such.

COMMENTS

SubSection 1 authorizes the lieutenant governor-elect to become governor in the event of the death or disqualification of the goveruor-elect. The lieutenant governor-elect serves as acting governor if the governor-elect fails to assume office for any other reason. Such a provision is desirable because! in the absence of such a provision, the courts of a least five states have determined that the incumbent governor should continue in office when the yovernor-elect was unable to qualify for inauguration.

By subsection 2, the governor is authorized to request the lieutenant governor to serve as acting governor, whether or not the governor is absent from the state. Under this subsection. however, the lieutenant governor no longer becomes acting governor the moment the governor leaves the state. The committee believes that by utilizing modern communications the governor can effectively perform the duties or his office during a short term absence from the state. Furthermore, the governor is not prohibited from requesting the lieutenant governor to act during a short-time absence. After the governor has been absent from the state 45 days, however, the lieutenant governor does become acting governor. Such a provision should tend to discourage the governor from prolonged absences from the state.

Although Montana's Constitution presently provides for succession to the governorship in cases of "inability" of the governor "to discharge the powers and duties of his office", procedures for determining disability of the governor are not provided. Unfortunate experiences in several states with disabled governors and federal experience with presidential disability illustrate that procedures for determination of gubernatorial disability are necessary. The committee therefore proposes a disability determination provision based upon the model provided by the Twenty-fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution. As noted above, under subsection 2 the governor may request the lieutenant governor to serve as acting governor. This authority would extend to a situation when, for example, the governor is scheduled for surgery. Subsection 2 also authorizes the lieutenant governor to become acting governor when the governor is unable to communicate -- due, for example, to a stroke. When the governor recovers, he may resume the duties of his office.

Subsection 3 authorizes the lieutenant governor and attorney general to declare the governor's disability, whereupon the legislature convenes to determine the validity of the declaration. If two-thirds of the legislature agree that the governor is disabled, the lieutenant governor becomes acting governor. The governor may resume his office by declaring that the disability no longer exists unless the legislature prevents his resumption of powers by a two-thirds vote.

When the governorship becomes vacant, the lieutenant governor succeeds to the office of governor for the remainder of the term. When the lieutenant governor serves as acting governor, he exercises only the powers and duties of the office of governor.

They shall hcld cffice until the end of the term cf the gcverncr unless sooner removed by the gcverncr.

(3) If a vacancy in any such cffice cccurs during a recess of the legislature, the gcvarncr shall appcint scme fit person to discharge the duties thereof until the next meeting of the legislature, when the cffice shall be filled by appcintment and confirmatcn.

(4) NC persen nct ccnfirmed by the legislature fcr an office shall, except at its request, be ncrinated again fcr that office at the same sessicn, cr be appointed tc that cffice during a recess cf the legislature.

Section 9. BUDGET AND PIES-CAGES. The governor shall at the beginning of each legislative sessicn, and may at ctber times, give the legislature informatcn and recommend measures he considers necessary. The governor shall submit tc the legislature at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail, fcr all cperating funds, the prcpcsed expenditures and estimated revenue cf the state.

Section 10. VETO POWER. (1) All bills passed by the legislature, except bills propcsing amendments tc the Mcntana Ccnstitutcn, bills ratifying proposed amendments to the United States Constitution, rescluticns, and initiative and referendum measures, shall be submitted to the gcverncr who shall sign cr vetc every bill within five days after its delivery tc him if the legislature is in session, cr within 25 days if the legislature is adjourned. The gcverncr shall return vetced bills tc the legislature with a statement cf his cbjecticcs.

(2) The governor may return any bill to the legislature with his objections and with a recommendation for an amendment or amendments to it. If the legislature passes the bill in accordance with the governor's recommendation, it shall again return the bill to the governor for his reconsideration. The governor shall not return a bill a second time, for amendment.

(3) Upon receipt of a vetoed message, the legislature shall reconsider passage of the vetoed bill. A two-thirds vote of the members present overrides the veto, and the bill shall become law.

(4) If the legislature is not in session when the governor vetoes a bill, he shall return the bill with his objections to the legislature in a manner authorized by law. The legislature, as provided in section 11, may reconvene itself to reconsider any bills so vetoed by the governor.

(5) The governor may veto items in appropriation bills, and in such instances the procedure shall be the same as upon veto of an entire bill.

Section 11. SPECIAL SESSION. Whenever the governor considers it in the public interest, he may convene the legislature, either house, or the two houses in joint session. At the written request of two-thirds of the members of each house, the presiding officers of both houses shall convene the legislature in special session.

Section 12. PARDONS. The governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after conviction. reinstate citizenship and may suspend and remit fines and forfeitures subject to procedures prescribed by law.

This action by the governor shall be upon the recommendation of a board of pardons. The legislative assembly shall by law prescribe for the appointment and composition of said board of pardons, its powers and duties; and regulate the proceedings thereof.

Section 13. MILITIA. (1) The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the militia forces of the state, except when these forces are in the actual service of the United States, and shall have power to call out any part of the whole of said forces to aid in the execution of the laws, to suppress insurrection or to repel invasion.

(2) The militia forces shall consist of all able-bodied citizens of the state except such persons as are exempted by law.

Section 14. SUCCESSION. (1) If the governor-elect is disqualified, or dies, the lieutenant governor-elect upon qualifying for the office shall become governor for the full term. If the governor-elect fails to assume office for any other reason, the lieutenant governor-elect upon qualifying as such shall serve as acting governor until the goveracr-elect qualifies for office, or the office becomes vacant.

(2) The lieutenant governor shall serve as acting governor when requested in rriting by the governor to do so. He shall serve as acting governor during the absence frco the state of the governor for any period in excess of 45 days.

(3) He shall also serve as acting governor when the governor is disabled and by reason of that disability is unable to communicate to the lieutenant governor the fact of his inability to perform the duties of his office. The lieutenant governor in such event shall continue to serve as acting governor until the governor resumes the duties of his office.

(4) Whenever the lieutenant governor and attorney general transmit to the presiding officer of the legislature their written declaration that the governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the legislature shall convene.

(5) If the legislature, within 21 days after convening, determines by tuc-thirds vote of its members present that the governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the lieutenant governor shall enter upon and discharge tha same as acting governor; thereafter, when the governor transmits to the presiding officer of the legislature his written declaration that no inability exists, he shall resume the powers and duties of his office within 15 days, unless the legislature determines otherwise by tuc-thirds vote of its members. If the legislature so determines, the lieutenant governor shall continue to discharge the pcuers and duties of the office as acting governor.

(6) If the office of governor becomes vacant by reason of death, resignation, or disqualification, the lieutenant governor shall become governor for the remainder of the term.

(7) Additional succession to such vacancies shall be as prcvided by law.

(8) When there is a vacancy in the office of governor, the successor shall have the title, powers, duties and emoluments of that office and shall be the governor. When the successor serves as acting governor for a temporary period, he shall have only the powers and duties of the office for the period during which he serves as such.

COMMENTS ON MINORITY PROPOSAL

The Minority Proposal is identical to the Majority Proposal except for amendments in sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 6 and 12 designed to make the executive branch of government more responsible to the citizens of the state by providing for the election or the present elected executive officers.

Section 1. OFFICERS. (1) The executive department shall consist of a governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, state treasurer, superintendent of public instruction and state auditor.

(2) Each shall hold his office for a term of four years, commencing on the first Monday of January next succeeding his election and until a successor is elected and qualified.

(3) Each shall reside at the seat of government, where he shall keep the public records of his office.

(4) Each shall perform such duties as are prescribed in this Constitution, and by law.

COMMENTS

The minority of the executive committee favor the election of the major state executive offices because government needs to be responsive and responsible to the people it represents. The people must retain their right to elect their officials. By elimination of their present power to choose the major state offices we do not want to defranchise the people of Montana of their sacred privilege - their right to exercise the freedom of choice in the elective process. The people deserve the right to choose who shall represent them in government.

Montana by Constitutional amendment and legislative act is reorganizing its governmental processes under what is known as executive reorganization. This is placing all Montana's governmental administration and control directly under the governor and appointed department heads. This program is promoted in the name of efficiency and economy.

Government needs to be more to its constituents than efficient and economical. It needs to be responsive and responsible to the people it represents. Its responsibilities includes not only the matter of protecting the public trust, it includes having the trust of the public.

Public trust does not come from just a matter of confidence in the integrity of public officers, but rather it comes from knowing that public affairs are placed in the public eye. This can only occur when the activities of government are visible and when there are ways of checking or what our public officials are doing.

The state treasurer and auditor are the major state financial officers. One receives all state money, the other disburses all state funds. one major concern relates regarding reorganization to the financial affairs of the state. This concern should be included in our proposed Constitution in such a way that we give the public the best chance to view critically its public officers and to avoid the open invitation to corruption. This should include a public official, elected and responsible only to the people and who is not subservient to the varying political desires of some chief executive who perhaps will be only concerned with an approving look from the public at his administration.

We know that no governor will have continuous opportunity to observe all the actions of his administrative officers. To place all fiscal affairs in one administrative office, such as a controller's office, not only jeopardizes the chief executive, it is one open invitation to unviewed corruption.

We ask then this convention include separate fiscal officers as elected officers in this proposed Constitution in the offices of state auditor and state treasurer.

The state superintendent of public instruction is the major state educational officer and as such should be elected by the people. The selection of the superintendent should be protected from undue political influence by making her directly responsible to the people.

We are with the majority committee proposal comments on the election of the attorney general. We provide further qualification in our section 3.

> Section 2. ELECTION. (1) The governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, state treasurer, superintendent of public instruction and state auditor shall be elected by the qualified electors of the state at a general election held and finally determined as provided by law.
> (2) Each candidate for governor shall file jointly with a candidate for lieutenant governor in primary elections, or otherwise comply with nomination procedures, so that the offices of governor and lieutenant governor shall be voted upon together in primary and general elections, as provided by law.

COMMENTS

This section adds the state treasurer, superintendent of public instruction and state auditor to the elected officers provided in the majority report. Our reasons are explained in the comments to Section 1.

> Section 3. QUALIFICATIONS. (1) No person shall be eligible to the office of governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general or superintendent of public instruction unless he has attained the age of 30 years at the time of his election, nor to the office of secretary of state, state auditor, or state treasurer, unless he has attained the age of 25 years. In addition to the qualifications above prescribed, each of the officers named shall be a citizen of the United States, and have resided within the state two years next preceding his election.
> (2) In addition to the foregoing qualifications, any person, to be eligible to the office of attorney general shall be an attorney in good standing admitted to practice law in the state of Montana, and have engaged in the active practice thereof for five years before election.

COMMENTS

This section retains the qualifications in section 3 of the present executive article. The major deletion in section 3 recommended by the majority was removal of the age requirements for all candidates except the attorney general. The minority of the Executive Committee, believe we would be derelict in our duty and inconsistent as well, if we require specific qualifications for the attorney general and remove all such qualifications for the rest of the executive offices.

he realize it is unlikely that the electorate would elect an eighteen year old to these offices, but we feel strongly that the Constitution must guarantee a certain maturity as a qualification for office holders.

We are conscious of the increased intelligence and ability of our young people, but feel confident that the majority, those with mature attitudes, would want us to require such qualifications for their Own protection, to insure the dignity of the office and to provide a goal for them to strive for. In comparing Montana's present Constitution with six others we found the states of Alaska, Michigan and New Jersey require a governor to be at least 30 years of age and Hawaii and Puerto Rico 35 years. They also require longer residency requirements. Virtually all state Constitutions require higher age qualifications for state officers than for the right to vote.

Section 4. DUTIES. (1) The executive power of the state is vested in the governor, who shall see that the laws are faithfully executed. He shall have such other duties as are herein provided, and as provided by law.

(2) The lieutenant governor shall perform the duties delegated to him by the governor, and those provided for him by law, but no power specifically vested in the governor by this Constitution may be delegated to the lieutenant governor in this manner.

(3) The secretary of state shall maintain the official records of the acts of the legislative assembly, and of the executive department, as provided by law. He shall keep the great seal of the state of Montana, and perform any other duties provided by law.

(4) The attorney general shall be the legal officer of the state, with the duties and powers provided by law.

(5) The auditor shall be the custodian of all fiscal records of the state. He shall be the issuing officer of all state warrants, with other duties and powers provided by law.

COMMENTS

In addition to the language of section 4 proposed by the majority in subsection (5) we have provided for the duties of the auditor so this office may be strengthened and our citizens may be assured there will always be a completely independent elected auditor, free of political pressure and responsible to the electorate to protect their fiscal affairs.

The creation of a gubernatorially appointed department head as the complete repository of all the state fiscal and audit functions is an over centralization of power and an open invitation to corruption. Montana, even under its present system, has recently experienced two separate embezzlement type situations. One was uncovered by the bank examiner's office, the other by the state auditor's office. Neither were in existence for a particularly long time nor were the losses particularly large, before their discovery. Due to the relatively fast discovery of these transgressions, full restitution was made possible. Therefore, it is very necessary to retain internal control. Obviously any system of control, which vests total control in one person or department, is not a good system of control, in fact it would invite misuse.

Section 6. VACANCY IN OFFICE. (1) If the office of lieutenant governor becomes vacant by his succession to the office of governor, or by his death, resignation or disability as determined by law the governor shall appoint a qualified person to hold and serve in that office for the remainder of its term.

(2) If the office of secretary of state, attorney general, auditor, treasurer and superintendent of public instruction becomes vacant by death, resignation or disability as determined by law, the governor shall appoint a qualified person to hold and serve in that office until the next general election, and until his successor is elected and qualified. The person elected to fill such vacancy shall hold the office until the expiration of the term for which the person he succeeds was elected.

COMMENTS

Here we have inserted in subsection (2) the additional elected officers and deleted subsection (3) that appears in the majority report.

Section 12. PARDONS. The governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations and pardons after conviction, reinstate citizenship and may suspend and remit fines and forfeitures subject to procedures prescribed by law. This action by the governor shall be upon the recommendation of a board of pardons. The legislative assembly shall by law prescribe for the appointment and composition of said board of pardons, its powers and duties; and regulate the proceedings thereof.

COMMENTS

We agree with the majority of the executive committee, except that we feel that it is appropriate to establish Constitutionally the board of pardons. The pardon power of the governor is of such importance that it should not be exercised without the prior advice and consultation of a board of lay and professional persons responsible for the state correctional program.

From: Judiciary Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The committee on Judiciary hereby submits its recommendations contained in this report to the Montana Constitutional Convention.

The recommendations deal with the structure and organization of the supreme court, district courts and justice of peace courts.

The majority report, among other things, contains election of judges, tenure of judges and qualifications of judges. The report further contains recommendations for the elections of clerks of court and county attorneys.

The minority of the committee has filed a minority report which contains recommendations for selection of judges on a basis different from the majority report. The minority report is in itself a complete judicial article and is entirely distinguishable from the majority report. Although the reports deal with similar subjects, they are entirely separate.

Recommendations contained in this report are of great concern to the people. Resolutions by the Convention will have profound effects upon the administration of justice and the nature and philosophy of our government. We regret that complete consensus was not possible. We do report that all members of the committee worked diligently and the majority and minority reports are a consensus of the opinions of all persons signing them.

While the members of the committee had philosophical differences, particularly about selection of judges, the entire committee, working on a difficult subject, wholeheartedly devoted their time and energy to their respective report.

The committee expresses their thanks to its Research Analyst, Sandra Muckelston, and to its Secretary, Ellen McCarthy, and to its administrative Interns, Dodge Leary and Katherine Sullivan.

Respectfully submitted,

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE:

That any proposed new Constitution contain Article VIII of the present Constitution amended to read as follows:

ARTICLE ___

THE JUDICIARY

Section 1. JUDICIAL POWER. The judicial power is vested in a supreme court, district courts, justice of the peace courts, and such other courts as the legislative assembly may establish.

Section 2. SUPREME COURT - APPELLATE JURISDICTION. The supreme court, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, shall have appellate jurisdiction only, which shall be coextensive with the state.

Section 3. SUPREME COURT - APPELLATE JURISDICTION - WRITS. The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court shall extend to all cases at law and in equity, subject, however, to such limitations and regulations as may be prescribed by law. Said court shall have power in its discretion to issue and to hear and determine write of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition and injunction, and such other origiral and remedial writs as may be necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the justices of the supreme court shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the state, upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such srits returnable before himself, or the supreme court, or tefore any district court of the state, or any judge thereof; and such writs may be heard and determined by the justice or court, or judge, before whom they are made returnable. Each of the justices of the supreme court may also issue and hear and determine writs of certiorari in proceedings for contempt in the district court, and such other writs as he may be authorized by law to issue.

Section 4. SUPREME COURT - TERMS. At least three terms of the supreme court, and such other terms as may be necessary to keep the docket current, shall be held each year at the seat of government.

Section 5. SUPREME COURT - COMPOSITION - DISQUALIFICATIONS. The supreme court shall consist of five justices a majority of whom shall be necessary to form a quorum or pronounce a decision, but one or more of said justices may adjourn the court from day the power to increase the number of justices to seven.

In case a justice or justices of the supreme court shall be in any way disqualified to sit in a cause brought before such court, the remaining justice or justices shall have power to call on one or more of the district judges of this state as in the particular case may be necessary to constitute the full number of justices of which the said court shall then be composed, to sit with them in the hearing of said cause. In all cases where a district judge is invited to sit and does sit as by this section provided, the decision and opinion of such district judge shall have the same force and effect in any cause heard before the court as if regularly participated in by a justice of the supreme court.

Section 6. ELECTION AND TERM OF OFFICE OF SUPREME COURT JUSTICES. The justices of the supreme court shall be elected by the electors of the state at large, and the term of the office of the justices of the supreme court, except as in this Constitution otherwise provided, shall he six years.

Section 7. CLERK OF SUPREME COURT. There shall be a clerk of the supreme court, who shall hold his office for the term of six years. He shall be elected by the electors at large of the state, and his compensation shall be fixed by law, and his duties prescribed by law and by the rules of the supreme courts.

Section 8. JUSTICES OF SUPREME COURT - QUALIFICATIONS. A United States citizen who has been a resident of Montana for two years shall be eligible for the office of justice of the supreme court if admitted to practice law in Montana and experienced with the law in Montana for at least five years immediately prior to filing for or being appointed to the position of justice.

Section 9. DISTRICT COURTS - JURISDICTION. The district courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases at law and in equity, including all cases which involve the title or right of possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll or municipal fine, and in all cases in which the debt, damage, claim or demand, exclusive of interest and costs, or the value of the property in controversy exceeds $300; and in all criminal cases amounting to felony, and in all cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for; of actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer; of proceedings in insolvency; of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; of all matters of probate; of actions of divorce and for annulment of marriage, and for all such special actions and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for. And said courts shall have the power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor, in all cases where they are authorized so to do by the laws of the United States. They shall have appellate jurisdiction in such cases arising in justices and other inferior courts in their respective districts as may be prescribed by law and consistent with this Constitution. Their process shall extend to all parts of the state, provided that all actions for the recovery of, the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real property, shall be commenced in the county in which the real property, or any part thereof, affected by such action or actions, is situated. Said courts and the judges thereof shall have power also to issue, hear and determine writs of mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, injunction and other original and remedial writs, and also all writs of habeas corpus on petition by, or on behalf of, any person held in actual custody In their respective districts. Injunctions, writs of prohibition and habeas corpus, may be issued and served on legal holidays and non-judicial days.

Section 10. JUDICIAL DISTRICTS. The state shall be divided into judicial districts, in each of which there shall be elected by ths electors thereof one or more judges of the district court as provided by law whose term of office shall be four years. The legislative assembly may increase or decrease the number of judges in any judicial district; provided, that there shall be at least one judge in any district established by law; and may divide the stat?, or any part thereof, into new districts; provided, that each be formed of compact territory and be bounded by county lines, but no change in the number of boundaries of the districts shall work a removal of any judge from office during the term for which he has 'been elected or appointed. Any judge of the district court may hold court for any other district judge, and shall do so when required by law.

Section 11. WRITS OF ERROR AND APPEAL. Writs of error and appeal shall be allowed from the decisions of district courts to the supreme court under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.

Section 12. DISTRICT JUDGES - QUALIFICATIONS. NO person shall be eligible to the office of judge of the district court unless engaged in the active practice of law in the state of Montana for at least five years Prior to filing for or being appointed to the office of district judge, and in addition shall be a citizen of the United States and admitted to practice law in the supreme court of the state of Montana. He or she need not be a resident of the district for which elected at the tine of election, but after election he or she shall reside in the district for which elected during the term of office.

Section 13. DISTRICT COURTS - BUSINESS DAYS - TERMS. The district court in each county which is a judicial district by itself shall be always open for the tracsaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days. In each district where two or more counties are united, until otherwise provided by law, the judges of such district shall fix the terms of court as may be necessary to keep the docket current.

Section 14. CLERKS GE DISTRICT COURTS. There shall be a clerk of the district court in each county, who shall be elected by the electors of this county. The clerk shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as the district judge. The duties and compensation of the said clerk shall be provided by law except that the clerk in matters relating to procedure and the orderly conduct or the court room and court hearings shall be supervised by the district judge.

Section 15. COUNTY ATTORNEYS. There shall be elected at the general election in each county of the state one county attorney, who prior to taking office shall have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of the state of Montana and must be of legal age at the time of taking office, and whose term of office shall be four years and until a successor is elected and qualified. He or she shall have a salary to be fixed by law, one-half of which shall be paid by the state, and the other half by the county for which elected, and shall perform such duties as may be required by law.

Section 16. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE - ELECTION - QUALIFICATIONS - COMPENSATION - JURISDICTION. There shall be elected in each county at least one justice of the peace with qualifications, training, and monthly compensation as provided by law, who shall hold office for the term of four years. There shall be provided facilities for such justices so that their duties may be performed in dignified surroundings. Justice courts shall have such original jurisdiction within their respective counties as may be prescribed by law. They shall not have trial jurisdiction in any criminal case designated a felony, except as examining courts. The legislature may provide for additional justices of the Peace in each county or other types of courts below the district court level as is deemed necessary.

Section 17. APPEALS FROM JUSTICE COURTS. Justice courts shall always be open for transaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days. Appeal shall be allowed from justice courts, in all cases, to the district courts, in such manner under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.

Section 18. POLICE AND MUNICIPAL COURTS. The legislative assembly shall have power to provide for creating such police and municipal courts and magistrates for cities and towns as may be deemed necessary from time to time, who shall have jurisdiction in all cases arising under the ordinances of such cities and towns, respectively; such police magistrates may also be constituted ex-officio justices of the peace or magistrates for their respective counties.

Section 15. REMOVAL AND DISCIPLINE OF JUDGES. A Judicial Standards Commission is hereby created to consist of five persons, three of whom shall be judges. The three judges shall be selected by the justices and judges of the supreme court and district courts. Not more than one of the said three judges may be a member of the supreme court. The remaining two persons shall be citizens of the state of Montana, selected and appointed by the governor. Neither of Said two persons shall be a justice, judge or magistrate of any court or licensed to practice law in this state, nor Shall they be a member of the executive, judicial or legislative departments of the state of Montana. The original three judges Shall be appointed for terms of one, three and five years respectively and the original gubernatorial appointees shall serve for two and four years respectively. Thereafter each commissioner Shall Serve for a term of five years. If a position in the commission becomes vacant for any reason, the successor shall be selected by the original appointing authority in the same manner as the original appointment was made and Shall Serve for the remainder of the term vacated. No act of the commission is valid unless concurred in by a majority of its members. The commission Shall select one of its members to Serve as chairman.

In accordance with this Section, any justice, judge or magistrate of any court may be disciplined or removed for willful misconduct in office or willful and persistent failure to perform his duties or habitual intemperance, or he may be retired for disability seriously interfering with the performance of his duties which is, or likely to become, of a permanent character. The consission may, after investigation it deems necessary, order a hearing to be held before it concerning the discipline, removal or retirement of 3 justice, judge or magistrate, or the commission may appoint three masters wto are justices or judges of courts of record to hear and take evidence in the matter and to report their findings to the commission. After hearing or after considering the record and the firdings and report Of the masters, if the Commission finds good cause, it Shall recommend to the supreme court the discipline, removal or retirement of the justice, judge or magistrate.

The supreme court Shall review the record of the proceedings on the law and facts and may permit the introduction of additional evidence, and it Shall order the discipline, removal or retirement as it finds just and proper or wholly reject the recommendation. Upon an order for his retirement, any justice, judge or magistrate participating in a statutory retirement program Shall be retired with the same rights as if he had retired pursuant to the retirement program. Upon an order for removal, the justice, judge or magistrate shall thereby be removed from office, and his salary shall cease from the date of the order.

The Judicial Standards Commission Shall make rules implementing this section and providing for confidentiality of proceedings.

Section 20. COURTS OF RECORD. The supreme and district courts shall be courts of record.

Section 21. LAWS RELATING TO COURTS - UNIFORM. All laws relating to the courts Shall be general and of uniform operation throughout the state; and the organization, jurisdiction, powers, proceedings and practice of all courts of the Same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, shall be uniform.

Section 22. STYLE OF PROCESS. The style of process shall be "The state of Montana" and all prosecutions shall be conducted by the name and the authority of the same.

Section 23. FORM OF ACTION. There shall be but one form of civil action, and law and equity may be administered in the same action.

Section 24. JUDICIAL COMPENSATION. The justices of the supreme court and the judges of ths district court shall be paid monthly by the state, a salary, which shall not be diminished during the terms which they shall have been respectively elected. The salaries of justices of the peace shall be paid monthly by the counties or the state as may be prescribed by law. All salaries paid to justices and to judyrs shall be in an amount sufficient to attract capable and experienced lawyers to the judicial service.

Section 25. PROHIBITION OF OUTSIDE INCOME. No justice of the supreme court nor judge of the district court nor magistrate or justice of peace paid a monthly salary shall accept or receive any compensation, fee, perquisite or emolument for or on account of his office, or any form whatever, except salary and actual necessary travel expense as provided by law.

Section 26. LAW PRACTICE PROHIBITED. No justice or clerk of the supreme court, nor judge or clerk of any district court shall act or practice as an attorney or counsellor at law in any court of this state during his continuance in office. Magistrates or justices of the peace shall not practice law or justice of the peace or magistrate courts.

Section 27. SUPREME COURT OPINIONS. All opinions of the supreme court shall be in writing and subscribed thereto by the concurring justices and the dissenting justices and such opinions and decisions shall be published in official reports of the supreme court. The legislative assembly may provide for the publication of decisions and opinions of the supreme court.

Section 28. RESIDENCE OF JUDICIAL OFFICERS. All officers provided for in this Article, except justices of the supreme court, who shall reside within the state, shall respectively reside during their term of office in the district, county, township, precinct, city or town in which they may be elected or appointed.

Section 29. VACANCIES; NON-SUCCESSION OF APPOINTEE. Vacancies in the office of justice of the supreme court, or judge of the district court, or other appellate court, or clerk of the supreme court, shall be filled by appointment, by the governor of the state, and vacancies in the offices of county attorney, clerk of the district court, and other judicial offices, shall te filled by appointment, by the board of county commissioners of the county where such vacancy occurs. A person appointed to fill any such vacancy shall hold his office until the next general election and until his successor is elected and qualified. A person elected to fill a vacancy shall hold office until the expiration of the term for which the person he succeeds was elected.

NO judicial officer hereafter appointed by the governor as provided in this section is eligible to be a candidate for judicial office for a period of one year after his successor has been elected.

Section 30. INELIGIBILITY FOR PUBLIC OFFICE. No justice of the supreme court or district judge shall hold any other public office, except that he may be a member of the Judicial Standards Commission, while he remains in the office to which he has been elected or appointed.

Section 31. JUDGE FOR TEMPORE. Civil actions in the district court may be tried by a judge pro tempore, who must be a member of the bar of the state, agreed upon in writing by the parties litigant, or their attorneys of record, approved by the court, and sworn to try the causes; and in such cases any order, judgment or decree, made or rendered therein by such judge pro tempore, shall have the same force and effect as if made or rendered by the court with the regular judge presiding.

Section 32. FORFEITURE OF JUDICIAL OFFICE. Any judicial officer who shall absent himself from the state for more than sixty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office.

COMMENTS OR MAJORITY PROPOSALS

Section 1. JUDICIAL POWER. The judicial power is vested in a supreme court, district courts, justice of the peace courts, and such other courts as the legislative assembly may establish.

COMMENTS

(1) The proposed revision eliminates the vesting of judicial power in the senate sitting as a court of impeachment. Section 16, Article V of the 1889 Constitution adequately covers this field. It is contemplated that any new legislative article will retain the impeachment provision.

(2) Vesting of judicial power in justices of the peace courts, rather than in "justices of the peace" as in the 1889 Constitution, was done for parallel terminology.

(3) The 1889 Coastitution provided for vesting judicial power in "such other inferior courts as the legislative assembly may establish". This revision vests the power in "such other courts" in anticipation of a need in the future for intermediate appellate courts. This language permits that to be done.

Section 2. SUPREME COURT - APPELLATE JURISDICTION. The supreme court, except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, shall have appellate jurisdiction only, which shall be coextensive with the state.

COMMENTS

The revision deletes the supreme court's power of supervisory control over inferior courts. As written in the 1889 Constitution, the power was given to the supreme court under such regulations and limitations as may be prescribed by law. Although the legislature has never provided regulations, the supreme court in 1900 assumed the power to act supervisory - going so far as to invent a writ of supervisory control, unique in the United states. The use of the writ has grown to the point where it is used when other specifically authorized writs, or appeals, would serve as well. The provision was deleted as (1) unnecessary and (2) to avoid an unseemly avoidance of the express provisions of the 1889 Constitutica.

Section 3. SUPREME COURT - APPELLATE JURISDICTION - WRITS. The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court shall extend to all cases at law and in equity, subject, however, to such limitations and regulations as may be prescribed by law. Said court shall have power in its discretion to issue and to hear and determine writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo-warranto, certiorari, prohibition and injunction, and such other original and remedial writs as may be necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each of the justices of the supreme court shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the state, upon petition by 01 on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself, or the supreme court, or before any district court of the state, or any judge thereof; and such writs may be heard and determined by the justice or court, or judge, before whom they are made returnable. Each of the justices of the supreme court may also issue and hear and determine writs of certiorari in proceedings for contempt in the district court, and such other writs as he nay be authorized by law to issue.

COMMENTS

This section is identical with the 1889 Constitution except we have eliminated the provision for a jury in the supreme court as it never has nor is likely in the future to be used.

This provision defines the jurisdiction of the supreme court and has been interpreted over the years so there is now no uncertainty as to meaning.

Section 4. SUPREME COURT - TERMS. At least three terms of the supreme court, and such other terns as may be necessary to keep the docket current, shall be held each year at the seat of government.

COMMENTS

Section 4 was formerly Article VIII, section 4 of the 1889 Constitution. To the language of the 1889 Constitution was added the phrase "to keep the docket current". By adding this phrase, the supreme court is allowed to set as many terms as necessary to keep its dockets current.

Section 5. SUPREME COURT - COMPOSITION - DISQUALIFICATIONS. The supreme court shall consist of five justices a majority of whom shall be necessary to form a quorum or pronounce a decision, but one or more of said justices may adjourn the court from day to day, or to a day certain. The legislative assembly shall have tte power to increase the number of justices to seven.

In case a justice or justices of the supreme court shall be in any way disqualified to sit in a cause brought before such court, the remaining justice or justices shall have power to call on one or more of the district judges of this stats as in the particular case may be necessary to constitute the full number of justices of which the said court shall then be composed, tc sit with them in the hearing of said cause. In all cases where a district judge is invited tc sit and does sit as by this sectien provided, the decisicn and cpinicn of such district judge shall have the same force and effect in any cause heard before the ccurt as if regularly participated in by a justice cf the supreme court.

COMMENTS

The legislature is given the pcwer to increase the number of justices on the supreme ccurt frcm the present five tc seven if the need arises. If the ucrk lcad cf the supreme court should increase, then the legislature may increase the number cf justices by two withcut amending the Ccnstitutico.

Sectien 6. ELECTICN AND TERM CF CFFICE CF SUPREME COURT JUSTICES. The justices of the supreme ccurt shall be elected by the electcrs cf the state at large, and the term of the office cf the justices of the supreme ccurt , except as in this Ccnstitutien ctherwise prcvided, shall be six years.

COMMENTS

Sectien 6 is a combination of Article VIII, secticnc 6 and 7 of the 1889 Ccnstitutien.

Section 7. CLERK CF SUPREME COURT. There shall be a clerk cf the supreme court, whc shall hcld his cffice for the term cf six years. He shall be elected by the electors at large of the state, and his compensaticn shall be fixed by law, and his duties prescribed by law and by the rules of the supreme ccurt.

COMMENTS

This section is the adoption cf Article VIII, sectien 9 of the 1889 Constitutien, deleting frcm the former section 9 the archaic language.

Section 8. JUSTICES CF SUPREME COURT - QUALIFICATICNS. A United States citizen whc has been a resident cf Montana for twc years shall be eligible fcr the office of justice cf the supreme ccurt if admitted to practice law in Montana and experienced with the law in Montana for at least five years immediately pricr tc filing fcr or being appointed to the position cf justice.

COMMENTS

Article VIII, section 10 cf the 1889 Ccnstitutien requires that for a persen to be eligible fcr cffice cf the supreme court he must (1) be admitted to practice law in the supreme court of Montana; (2) be at least thirty years of age; (3) be a citizen of the United States; (4) be a resident of Montana at least two years preceding his election.

The opinion of those signing the majority report is that the experience is more important than age; thus, the age requirement of Article VIII, section 10 of the present Constitution has been dropped and the individual's experience with law in Montana has been added.

Some discussion was had by members of those signing the majority report that five years practice before the courts of Montana should be required. It was decided that this would be unduly restrictive of those working with the law in a legal capacity for the government, as a law teacher, or in any way using their legal experience by working on legal matters. It was decided that as long as there was five years of experience in some tie.13 or law this was sufficient requirement. The intention was to make the law experience entirely related to legal work.

Section 9. DISTRICT COURTS - JURISDICTION. The district courts shall have original jurisdiction in all cases at law and in equity, including all cases which involve the title or right of possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll or municipal fine, and in all cases in which the debt, damage, claim or demand, exclusive of interest and costs, or the value of the property in controversy exceeds three hundred dollars; and in all criminal cases amounting to felony, and in all cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for; of actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer; of proceedings in insolvency; of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; of all matters of probate; of actions of divorce and for annulment of marriage, and for all such special actions and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for. And said courts shall have the power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor, in all cases where they are authorized so to do by the laws of the United States. They shall have appellate juricdiction in such cases ariciry in justices and other inferior courts in their respective districts as may be prescribed by law and consistent with this Constitution. Their process shall extend to all parts of the state, provided that all actions for the recovery of, the possession of, quieting the title to, or for the enforcement of liens upon real property, shall be commenced in the county in which the real property, or any part thereof, affected by such action or actions, is situated. Said courts and the judges thereof shall have power also to issue, hear and determine writs of mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, injunction and other original and remedial writs, and also all writs of habeas corpus on petition by, or on behalf of, any person held in actual custody in their respective districts. Injunctions, writs of prohibition and habeas corpus, may be issued and served on legal holidays and non-judicial days.

COMMENTS

Section 9 is a re-enactment of Article VIII, section 11 of the 1889 Constitution, changing only the minimum amount for jurisdiction from $50.00 to $300.00 and adding language of "exclusive of interest and costs". Some consideration was given by the committee to adopting simplified language to define jurisdiction of the district court by using the term "justiciable matters". Upon due consideration the committee decided that the term was not precise enough to fit the situation.

In all of the delegate proposals, citizens' suggestions and testimony heard by the committee concerning a new judicial article, no person made any complaint about jurisdiction of the district courts as set forth above even though the section is not brief and concise. In view of the fact that it has existed in the Constitution for 83 years without causing difficulty and seems to have been fully defined by the courts, the majority decided to keep the language intact.

Section 10. JUDICIAL DISTRICTS. The state shall be divided into judicial districts, in each of which there shall be elected by the electors thereof one or more judges of the district court as provided by law whose term of office shall be four years. The legislative assembly may increase or decrease the number of judges in any judicial district; provided, that there shall be at least one judge in any district established by law; and may divide the state, or any part thereof, into new districts; provided, that each be formed of compact territory and be bounded by county lines, but no change in the number or boundaries of the districts shall work a removal of any judge from office during the term for which he has been elected or appointed. Any judge of the district court may hold court for any other district judge, and shall do so when required by law.

COMMENTS

Section 10 combines three sections from the 1889 Constitution, to-wit: Article VIII, sections 12, 13 and 14. The majority finds no necessity to change the existing judicial districts by amending the Constitution. Under the 1889 Constitution, Article VIII, section 14, the legislative assembly was granted the power to change the boundaries of districts and increase or decrease the number of judges. This power will again be given to the legislature.

Section 11. WRITS OF ERROR AND APPEAL. Writs of error and appeal shall be allowed from the decisions of district courts to the supreme court under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

Section 11 is identical to Article VIII, section 15 of the 1889 Constitution. All members signing the majority report felt no change was necessary.

Section 12. DISTRICT JUDGES - QUALIFICATIONS. No person shall be eligible to the office of judge of the district court unless engaged in the active practice of law in the state of Montana for at least five years prior to filing for or being appointed to the office of district judge, and in addition shall he a citizen of the United States and admitted to practice law in the supreme court of the state of Montana. He or she need not be a resident of the district for which elected at the time of election, but after election he or she shall reside in the district for which elected during the term of office.

COMMENTS

Section 12 changes Article VIII, section 16 of the 1889 Constitution. The 1.889 Constitution provides that in order for a person to be eligible for office of judge of district court, he shall he (1) at least twenty-five; (2) citizen of the United States; (3) admitted to practice law in the supreme court of Montana; (4) r-siding in the state of Montana at least ont year.

After due consideration the majority of the committee felt that some of the foregoing requirements were valid tut others should be changed. Thereupon the majcritp changed the requirements to (1) a citizen of the United States; (2) admitted to practice law in the supreme court of Montana; (3) must be engaged in active practice of law in Montana for five years prior to filing for or being appointed to the office of district judge. The requirement of experience was determined more valid than the requirement of age, the committee feeling that five years experience would give the necessary qualifications rather than a simple age requirement. The experience requirement for the district judges in this section is materially different from the requirements for supreme court judges in section 8. The committee felt that law teachers and others working with the law for five years was a sufficient requirement for a supreme court judge, because the nature of the court is appellate rather than trial. A different type of experience and background is required for district judges who must function at the trial level.

The trial judge, in the opinion of the committee, needs trial experience which can only be gained in active practice of law and thus the requirement in section 12 is five years in the active practice of law.

Section 13. DISTRICT COURTS - BUSINESS DAYS - TERMS. The district court in each county which is a judicial district by itself shall be always open for the transaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days. In each district where two or more counties are united, until otherwise provided by law, the judges of such district shall fix the terms of court as may be necessary to keep the docket current.

COMMENTS

Section 13 is identical with Article VIII, section 17 of the 1889 Constitution except that the following language of section 17 is deleted from section 13: "provided that there shall be at least four terms a year held in each county"; the following language is added: "as may be necessary to keep the docket current". The majority of the committee felt that the number of terms of court should be adjusted in accordance with the volume of the case load of the court; so, rather than arbitrarily setting number of terms of court a year, this section directs a number of terms of court sufficient to keep the docket current.

Section 14. CLERKS OF DISTRICT COURTS. There shall be a clerk of the district court in each county, who shall be elected by the electors of this county. The clerk shall be elected at the same time and for the same term as the district judge. The duties and compensation of the said clerk shall be provided by law except that the clerk in matters relating to procedure and the orderly conduct of the court room and court hearings shall be supervised by the district judge.

COMMENTS

Section 14 is identical with Article VIII, section 18 of the 1889 Constitution except the following language has been added: "except that the clerk in matters relating to procedure and the orderly conduct of the court room and court hearings shall be supervised by the district judge". Bared upon the hearings, it was felt that there might be some conflict between the clerk of court and the district judge over the authority of district judges to require orderly conduct of the court room and court hearings. The committee felt that it was mandatory that the district judge have full control of these matters so this language was added to section 14 to clarify that the district judge has full charge of the orderly conduct of the court room and court hearings.

Section 15. COUNTY ATTORNEYS. There shall be elected at the general election in each county of the state one county attorney, who prior to taking office shall have been admitted to practice law before the supreme court of the state of Montana and must be of legal age at the time of taking office, and whose term of office shall be four years and until a successor is elected and qualified. He or she shall have a salary to be fixed by law, one-half of which shall be paid by the state, and the other half by the county for which elected, and shall perform such duties as may be required by law.

COMMENTS

Section 15 is intended as a substitute for Article VIII, section 19 of the 1889 Constitution. The only difference between the two sections is that the age requirement of section 19 has been deleted, the majority of the committee feeling that this age requirement is unnecessary.

Section 16. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE - ELECTION - QUALIFICATIONS - COMPENSATION - JURISDICTION. There shall be elected in each county at least one justice of the peace with qualifications, training, and monthly compensation as provided by law, who shall hold office for the term of four years. There shall be provided facilities for such justices so that their duties may be performed in dignified surroundings. Justice courts shall have such original jurisdiction within their respective counties as may be prescribed by law. They shall not have trial jurisdiction in any criminal case designated a felony, except as examining courts. The legislature may provide for additional justices of the peace in each county or other types of courts below the district court level as is deemed necessary.

COMMENTS

Sections 16 and 17 of the majority report are given in full replacement of Article VIII, sections 20, 21, 22 and 23.

Section 16 requires that there be one justice of the peace in each county rather than two justices of peace in each township. Under the present section 20 and interpretation of it, there must be two townships in each county and two justices of the peace to each township. Thus, a county, no matter how large or small, must have a minimum of four justices of the peace under Article VIII, section 20 of the 1864 Constitution.

Instead of a minimum of four justices of the peace to each county, the majority proposal provides for a minimum of one for each county. The majority committee believes that in some counties one justice of the peace will be sufficient. However, if circumstances demand, the legislature may provide for additional justices of the peace. The qualifications, training and monthly compensation of justices of the peace are left to the legislature as is the jurisdiction of justice courts. The committee believes that this provision is sufficiently elastic to allow the legislature to create small claims courts.

The majority of witnesses appearing before the committee mentioned one consistent evil practiced under the 1889 Constitution regarding justice of the peace courts. This evil is that law enforcement officers have been filing cases in one of the justice of the peace courts to the exclusion of the other in the county because the law enforcement officers evidently believe that they have a better chance of conviction under one certain justice of the peace. Shopping for a form to secure conviction cannot be tolerated under the law and thus each justice of the peace court should have exclusive jurisdiction within a territory within a county. The committee leaves it to the legislature to accomplish this aim.

Section 17. APPEALS FROM JUSTICE COURTS. Justice courts shall always be open for transaction of business, except on legal holidays and non-judicial days. Appeal shall be allowed from justice courts, in all cases, to the district courts, in such manner under such regulations as may be prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

Section 17 covers the same area as Article VIII, sections 22 and 23 of the 1889 Constitution and is merely identical in this respect.

Section 18. POLICE AND MUNICIPAL COURTS. The legislative assembly shall have power to provide for creating such police and municipal courts and magistrates for cities and towns as may be deemed necessary from time to tin, whc shall have jurisdiction in all cases arising under the ordinances of such cities and towns, respectively; such police magistrate: may alsc be constituted ex-officio justices of the peace or magistrates for their respective counties.

COMMENTS

This is identical with Article VIII, section 24 of the 1889 Constitution inasmuch as it permits the legislature to allow cities and towns to have police judges. Perhaps this is not needed if some other modern form of municipal government is established by this Convention but we do not know at this time if that is going to be done.

Section 19. REMOVAL AND DISCIPLINE OF JUDGES. A Judicial Standards Commission is hereby created to consist of five persons, three of whom shall be judges. The three judges shall be selected by the justices and judges of the supreme court and district courts. Not more than one of the said three judges may be a member of the supreme court. The remaining two persons shall be citizens of the state of Montana, selected and appointed by the governor. Neither of said two persons shall be a justice, judge or magistrate of any court or licensed to practice law in this state, nor shall they be a member of the executive, judicial or legislative departments of the state of Montana. The original three judges shall be appointed for terms of one, three and five years respectively and the original gubernatorial appointees shall serve for two and four years respectively. Thereafter each commissioner shall serve for a term of five years. It a position in the Commission becomes vacant for any reason, the successor shall be selected by the original appointing authority in the same manner as the original appointment was made and shall serve for the remainder of the term vacated. No act of the Commission is valid unless concurred in by a majority of its members. The commission shall select one of its members to serve as chairman.

In accordance with this section, any justice, judge or magistrate of any court may be disciplined or removed for willful misconduct in office or willful and persistent failure to perform his duties or habitual intemperance, or he may be retired for disability seriously interfering with the performance of his duties which is, or likely to become, of a permanent character. The commission may, after investigation it deems necessary, order a hearing to be held before it concerning the discipline, removal or retirement of a justice,. judge or magistrate, or the Commission may appoint three masters who are justices or judges of courts of record to hear and take evidence in the matter and to report their findings to the Commission. After hearing or after considering the record and the findings and report of the masters, if the Commission finds good cause, it shall recommend to the supreme court the discipline, removal or retirement of the justice, judge or magistrate.

The supreme court shall review the record of the proceedings on the law and facts and may permit the introduction of additional evidence, and it shall order the discipline, removal or retirement as it finds just and proper or wholly reject the recommendation. Upon an order for his retirement, any justice, judge or magistrate shall thereby be removed from office, and his salary shall cease from the date of the order.

The Judicial Standards Commission shall make rules implementing this section and providing for confidentiality of proceedings.

COMMENTS

Section 19 is an entirely new section. It is modeled with some modification from the New Mexico Constitutional provision adopted by the people of that state in 1967. We have modified the composition of the Judicial Standards Commission to conform, in our opinion, to the needs of Montana. The balance of the article is drafted from the provisions of the New Mexico Constitution. We have examined the Alaska, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, California, Colorado, Idaho, Virginia, and Kansas Constitutions as well as New Mexico, and have determined that the New Mexico provision is more in keeping with the needs of Montana than those provisions appearing in other consitutions. It is the purpose of this section to provide for the situation, short of impeachment, where a judge because of age or other disability or bad habits becomes derelict in the performance of his duties. Order this provision his retirement or censure or removal from office can be accomplished without an undue amount of bad publicity to the judicial system or embarrassment to anyone concerned. In the event removal becomes necessary then the commission makes its recommendation to the supreme court who will look into the matter and may order a hearing in the matter, and then make such disposition of the case as may be proper.

Section 20. COURTS OF RECORD. The supreme and district courts shall be courts of record.

COMMENTS

Section 20 is identical with Article VIII, section 25 of the 1889 Consritution and the majoritq committee feels no necessity for change in this section.

Section 21. LAWS RELATING TO COURTS - UNIFORM. All laws relating to the courts shall be general and of uniform operation throughout the state; and the organization, jurisdiction, powers, proceedings and practice of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, shall be uniform.

COMMENTS

Section ii is identical with Article VIII, section 26 of the 1889 Constitution and the majority committee feels no necessity for change in this section.

Section 22. STYLE OF PROCESS. The style of all process shall be "The State of Montana" and all prosecutions shall be conducted by the name and the authority of the same.

COMMENTS

Section 22 is identical with Article VIII, section 27 of the 1889 Constitution and the majority committee feels no necessity for change in the section.

Section 23. FORM OF ACTION. There shall be but one form of civil action, and law and equity may be administered in the same action.

COMMENTS

Section 23 is identical with Article VIII, section 28 of the 1889 Constitution and the majority committee feels no necessity for change in this section.

Section 24. JUDICIAL COMPENSATION. The justices of the supreme court and the judges of the district court shall be paid monthly by the state, a salary, which shall not be diminished during the terms which they shall have been respectively elected. The salaries of justices of the peace shall be paid monthly by the counties or the state as may be prescribed by law. All salaries paid to justices and to judges shall be in an amount sufficient to attract capable and experienced lawyers to the judicial service.

COMMENTS

This section is identical to Article VIII, section 29 of the 1889 Constitution with the exception that the justices of the supreme court and the judges of the district court are paid monthly rather than quarterly. This conforms to the established practice now existing which is in fact in disregard of the provisions of the 1889 Constitution. An additional sentence has been inserted to provide that the salaries of the justices of the supreme court and judges of the district court will be in an amount sufficient to attract capable and experienced lawyers to the judicial service.

Section 25. PROHIBITION OF OUTSIDE INCOME. No justice of the supreme court nor judge of the district court nor magistrate or justice of peace paid a monthly salary shall accept or receive any compensation, fee, perquisite or emolument for or on account of his office, in any form whatever. except salary and actual necessary travel expense as provided by law.

COMMENTS

Section 25 is a modification of Article VIII, section 30 of the 1889 Constitution, in that it allows actual necessary travel expense as provided by law whereas this was prevented under section 3C.

Section 26. LAW PRACTICE PROHIBITED. No justice or clerk of the supreme court, nor judge or clerk of any district court shall act or practice as an attorney or counsellor at law in any court of this state during his continuance in office. Magistrates or justices of the peace shall not practice law in justice of the peace or magistrate courts.

COMMENTS

Section 26 is identical with Article VIII, section 31 except the following sentence was added: "magistrates or justices of the peace shall not practice law in justice of the peace or magistrate courts".

The upgrading of justice of peace courts is contemplated by section 20 of the majority report. The committee believes that the legislature can allow a justice of peace or magistrate to practice law in other courts of the state of Montana while holding office of justice of peace or magistrate, but they cannot allow a justice of peace or magistrate to practice law in justice of peace or magistrate courts. The majority committee feels that by allowing lawyers to hold a position as justice of peace and at the same time to practice in other courts would allow practicing lawyers to supplement income as a justice of peace by practicing in other courts.

Section 27. SUPREME COURT OPINIONS. All opinions of the supreme court shall be in writing and subscribed thereto by the concurring justices and the dissenting justices and such opinions and decisions shall be published in official reports of the supreme court. The legislative assembly may provide for the publication of decisions and opinions of the supreme court.

COMMENTS

The last sentence of section 27 is identical with Article VIII, section 32 of the 1889 Constitution, except that a further requirement is made that all opinions of the supreme court shall be in writing and subscribed thereto by the dissenting justices. That portion which has been added is for the most part being done in practice, the majority of the committee feeling that this practice shall be made a requirement of the court.

Section 28. RESIDENCE OF JUDICIAL OFFICERS. All officers provided for in this Article, except justices of the supreme court, who shall reside within the state, shall respectively reside during their term of office in the district, county, township, precinct, city or town in which they may be elected or appointed.

COMMENTS

Section 28 is identical to Article VIII, section 33 of the 1889 Constitution. The majority of the committee feels that section 33 shall be adopted as section 29 without change.

Sccticn 29. VACANCIES; NCN-SUCCESSICN CF APPCINTEE. Vacancies in the cffice cf justice cf the supreme ccurt, or judge of the district ccurt, cr cther appellate court, or clerk cf the supreme court, shall be fill.31 by app0intment, by the governcr cf the state, and vacancies in the offices of ccunty attcrney, clerk of the district court, and other judicial cffices, shall be filled by appcintment, by the bcard cf ccurty commissioners of the ccunty where such vacancy occurs. A person appointed tc fill any such vacancy shall hcld his office urtil the next general electicn and until his successor is elected ard qualified. A perscn elected to fill a vacancy stall hcld cffice until the expiraticn cf the term for which the perscn he succeeds was elected.

Nc judicial cfficr hereafter appcinted by the gcvernor as provided in this secticn is eligible tc be a candidate for judicial cffice fcr a pericd of cne year after his successor has been elected.

COMMENTS

The first paragraph of this section is identical to Article VIII, secticn 34 of the 1889 Ccnstirutien. The seccnd paragraph is a new provisicn. 'The purpose cf this new prcvisicn is tc elminate the advantage of the "created" incumbent in a judicial election contest. The majority cf the ccmmittee recognizes that there is a growing tendency for judges tc retire during their terms so that the gcverncr appcints a judge tc serve until the next general election when the appcintee then runs fcr the cffice as the incumbent. This appears to be an undue advantage in a system which prcvides for election of judges.

Section 30. INELIGIBILITY FOR PUEIIC CFFICE. Nc justice of the supreme court cr district judge shall hcld any cther public cffice, except that he may be a member of the Judicial Standards Cocmissicn, while he remains in the cffice tc which he has teen elected cr appcinted.

COMMENTS

Section 30 is identical with Article VIII, sectico 35 cf the 1869 Constitution except that the fcllcwing language is added: "except that he may be a member of the Judicial Standards Ccmmissicn". The 1889 Constitutien dces nct have the requirement fcr a Judicial Standards Commissicn and under sectico 20 of the majority report, a Judicial Standards Ccmmissicc is now part cf the proposed judicial article. Three justices are required tc sit cn the Judicial Standards Commissicn and thus the foregoing membership cn the commission is excepted tc make clear that there will be no violaticn by a justice or judge being a member cf the Judicial standards Commission.

Section 31. JUDGE PRO TEMPORE. Civil actions in the district court may be tried by a judge pro tempore, who must be a member of the bar of the state, agreed upon in writing by the parties litigant, or their attorneys of record, approved by the court, and sworn to try the causes; and in such cases any order, judgment or decree, made or rendered therein by such judge pro tempore, shall have the same force and effect as if made or rendered by the court with the regular judge presiding.

COMMENTS

Section 31 of the majority report is identical with Article VIII, section 36 of the 1889 Constitution, except in section 36 3 civil action is changed to civil actions. This is self-explanatory.

Section 32. FORFEITURE OF JUDICIAL OFFICE. Any judicial officer who shall absent himself from the state for more than sixty consecutive days shall be deemed to have forfeited his office.

COMMENTS

Section 32 is identical with Article VIII, section 37 of the 1889 Constitution.

SEPARATE MAJORITY PROPOSAL ON CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE:

That there be a section in the new judicial article to read as follows:

Section ___. CAMPAIGN EXPENSES. The legislative assembly shall appropriate funds for the contested general election campaign expenses of candidates for the offices of justices of the supreme court and district court judges and shall enact laws regulating the amount, expenditure and disposition thereof. No candidate for justice of the supreme court or district court judge, nor any person or persons on his or her behalf, shall expend money in a campaign for the office in excess of the amount appropriated and authorized by the legislative assembly.

COMMENTS ON SEPARATE MAJORITY PROPOSAL ON CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

Section ___. CAMPAIGN EXPENSES. The legislative assembly shall appropriate funds for the contested general election campaign expenses of candidates for the offices of justices of the supreme court and district court judges and shall enact laws regulating the amount, expenditure and disposition thereof. No candidate for justice of the supreme court or district court judge, nor any person or persons on his or her behalf, shall expend money in a campaign for the office in excess of the amount appropriated and authorized by the legislative assembly.

COMMENTS

Both the minority and majority proposals of the committee contemplate an election of judges, presumably in a con-partisan contest. In either case there will be the same problems we have always had: (1) the necessity that the judge demean himself and his position by seeking campaign funds; (2) the fact that the wrong people can make contributions; (3) the fact that lawyers are the biggest contfitutors and solicitors of campaign funds to the detriment of themselves than the candidate; (4) the fact that the candidate with the most money to spend is the more likely to win regardless of merit; and (5) the fact that the appearance of justice suffers in the process.

The committee majority proposes this special sfoticc as a means of curing the defects in flection of judges and believes that the expense is warranted in view of the benefits to be attained.

MINORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on the Judiciary to read as follows:

ARTICLE ___

THE JUDICIARY

Section 1. JUDICIAL POWER. The judicial power of the state is vested in a supreme court and district courts and such other courts as may be provided by law.

Section 2. SUPREME COURT POWERS. The supreme court shall have final appellate jurisdiction and general supervisory and administrative control over all courts.

The supreme court may make rules for the practice of law and judicial administration in all courts.

The supreme court shall have such power to make rules of procedure as may be Provided by law.

The supreme court shall have original jurisdiction to issue, hear and determine all writs appropriate to the exercise of its jurisdiction, including the writ of habeas corpus.

Section 3. SUPREME COURT ORGANIZATION. The supreme court shall consist of one chief justice and four justices, a majority of whom will be necessary to pronounce the decision, which must he in writing and signed by the majority.

The legislative assembly nay increase the number of justices from five to seven.

District judges shall be substituted for the chief justice or the justices in the event of disqualification or disability, in any cause, and the opinion of the district judge sitting with the supreme court shall have the same effect as an opinion of a justice of the supreme court.

Section 4. DISTRICT COURT POWERS. Original jurictiction of all matters and causes, both civil and criminal, including the power to issue, hear and determine original and remedial writs is vest.33 in the district courts, but distribution of concurrent jurisdiction uith other courts may be provided by law.

Until otherwise provided by law, appeals from inferior courts must be tried anew in the district court. District courts shall also have jurisdiction to review decisions of administrative boards and commissions and they shall have such additional jurisdiction as may be delegated by the laws of the United States and the state of Montana. The supreme court and district court process shall extend to all parts of the state.

Section 5. JUDICIAL DISTRICTS. The legislative assembly shall divide the state into judicial districts and provide for the number of judges in each district.

The legislative assembly shall have the power to change the number of judicial districts and their boundaries and the number of judges and magistrates in each district; however, each district shall be formed of compact territory and be bounded by county lines, but no changes in the number of boundaries of districts shall work a removal of any judge from office during the term for which he has been elected or appointed.

The chief justice may assign the district judge and other judges for temporary service from one district to another, and from one county to another.

Section 6. TERMS AND PAY OF JUDGES. Justices of the supreme court, district court judges and other judges shall be paid as provided by law, but their salary shall not be diminished during their term of office.

Terms of office for supreme court justices shall be six years.

Terms of office for district court judges shall be four years.

Terms of office for other judges shall be provided by law.

Section 7. SELECTION OF JUDGES. In all vacancies in the offices of supreme court justices and district court judges caused by death, resignation, removal, retirement or failure of an incumbent judge to file a declaration of candidacy for a succeeding term of office, the governor of the state shall nominate a supreme court or district court judge from nominees selected in the manner provided by law. If the governor fails to nominate within thirty days after receipt of the names of the nominees, the chief justice or acting chief justice shall make the nomination. Each nomination shall be confirmed by the senate, but a nomination made while the senate is not assembled shall be effective as an appointment until the end of the next session of the senate. If the nomination is not confirmed by the senate the office shall be vacant and another selection and nomination shall be made.

after the close of filings for nominations in the first primary election after senate confirmation, the name of the appointed judge shall be placed on a contested non-partisan ballot if other candidates have filed for election to that office. If there is no primary election contest for the office, the name of the appointed judge shall nevertheless be placed on a ballot in the general election allowing voters of the state or district the choice of his approval or rejection. Thereafter, the elected judge shall be subject to approval or rejection in a general election for each succeeding term of office. In the event of rejiction of a judge another selection and comination shall be made in like manner.

Section 8. QUALIFICATIONS AND LIMITATIONS OF JUDGES. No person shall be eligible to the offices of justice of the supreme court or judge of the district court unless he or she shall have been admitted to the practice of law in Montanafor at least five years prior to the date of appointment or election, is a citizen of the United States, and has resided in the state of Montana two years immediately before taking office. Qualifications and methods of selection of judges of other courts shall be provided by law.

No supreme court justices or district court judge shall solicit or receive any compensation or account of his office, in any form whatever, except salary and actual necessary travel expense as provided by law.

Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, no supreme court justice or district court judge shall practice law during his term of office, engage in any ether employment for which salary or fee is paid, or hold office in a political party.

Filing for another elective public office results in forfeiture of judicial position.

A district judge must reside in his district during his term of office.

Section 9. DISQUALIFICATION OF JUDGES. The legislature shall provide for disqualification of judges at any one or all of the inferior, trial and appellate court levels.

Section 13. REMOVAL AND DISCIPLINE OF JUDGES AND LAWYERS. There is created a Judicial Standards Commission consisting of three judges, selected by the district judges, of which not more than one can be a member of the supreme court; tuc members of the Montana Bar, and two citizens whc do not hold any public office of the state of Montana or any office of a political party, appointed by the governor. Each vacancy on the commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment was made and the appointee shall serve for the remainder of the term vacated. No act of the commission is valid unless concurred in by a majority of its members. The commission shall select one of its members to serve as chairman. Its proceedings shall be confiden-

The commission shall have the power to investigate, including power to subpoena witnesses and documents, upon complaint by any citizen or on its own motion, charges which could be the basis for retirement, censure or removal of any justice or judge or for the discipline, censure, suspension or disbarment of any practicing lawyer in the state of Montana. Upon finding charges to be well founded the commission shall file a formal complaint before the supreme court. The supreme court shall hear such complaint, and if it be substantiated may retire, censure or remove any justice or judge or discipline, censure, suspend or disbar any practicing lawyer. If the complaint be against a justice, the court shall call in a district judge as provided in section 3 of this Article.

Section 11. CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT. The chief justice shall appoint a clerk of the supreme court who shall hold office at the pleasure of the supreme court.

The salary and qualifications shall be fixed by law, and the duties of the office shall be prescribed by the supreme court.

Section 12. CLERK OF THE DISTRICT COURT. There shall be a clerk of each judicial district court in each county who shall be elected by the voters therein and who may appoint such deputies as provided by law.

The term of office, qualifications, and the compensation of the district court clerk and deputies shall be provided by law.

The duties of the clerk and deputies shall be prescribed by the district court judge and as provided by law.

Section 13. DISTRICT ATTORNEYS. There shall be elected district attorneys whose jurisdictional area, qualifications, term of office, salaries and duties shall be provided by law.

COMMENTS ON MINORITY PROPOSAL

This minority proposed Judicial Article is truly a viable cornerstone for the establishment and operation of the courts of Montana. Its elasticity and flexibility are its strength; its clarity lends it force. Every delegate in this convention was requested by some of the electorate to assure brevity and simplicity in any Constitutional revisions so that all could understand. The minority proposed Judicial Article measures up in these areas. Yet, none of the time-honored safeguards have been abandoned. Rather, in this proposal, citizens' choices and options have been enhanced, the judiciary has been strengthened, and the entire judicial system has been made more flexible to change and review by the people.

The Judiciary Committee has heard many witnesses. Some of the witnesses emphasized the importance of the independence of the judiciary from the Legislative and Executive branches; other emphasized the importance of the judges being responsive to the law. It is submitted that the judiciary must also be responsive to the lawgivers, the people.

This Article was drawn with the idea that the judicial branch must be as strong as the other two; that its officers be as free from obligation as humanly possible; and, that the choice of judicial officers be the responsibility of the Legislative and Executive branches and the voters.

Section 1. JUDICIAL POWER. The judicial power of the state is vested in a supreme court and district courts and such other courts as may be provided by law.

COMMENTS

The minority committee believes that this provision is broad and flexible enough to accommodate not only the existing inferior courts, including justice of the peace, police and municipal courts, but also for the implementation of future courts.

The minority has deleted reference to a court of impeachment in the judicial article because it is an archaic, seldom used procedure and because it is adequately covered by Article V, section 16 of the legislative article of the 1889 Constitution where it more appropriately belongs.

It should be pointed out that by deleting reference to justice of the peace, there is no intention to abolish or affect the present jurisdiction and operation of these courts, but rather to leave assignment of judicial power in these courts exclusively to the legislature where there is wide latitude for improvement and alterations that will adjust to the varying complexities of rural and urban problems in the administration of justice on the lower level.

Section 2. SUPREME COURT POWERS. The supreme court shall have final appellate jurisdiction and general supervisory and administrative control over all courts.

The supreme court may make rules for the practice of law and judicial administration in all courts.

The supreme court shall have such power to make rules of procedure as may be provided by law.

The supreme court shall have original jurisdiction to issue, hear and determine all writs appropriate to the exercise of its jurisdiction, including the writ of habeas corpus.

COMMENTS

Final appellate jurisdiction is, by this section, vested exclusively in the supreme court. We employ the word "final" not only to indicate the place where litigation ends, but also to allow for intermediate appellate courts which may in the future become necessary to a speedy dispatch of justice. Like the federal Constitution, the minority has not restricted or encumbered the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court to "such limitations and regulations as may be provided by law". This change we believe to be consistent with the basic Constitutional principle of separation of powers among the three principal departments of government. Similarly, the minority has eliminated the antique phrase "all cases in law and equity", believing this language to be archaic and a totally unnecessary distinction and restriction.

In addition to the unfettered appellate jurisdiction, the supreme court is given original jurisdiction to issue all writs and orders appropriate to the exercise of its powers. The minority proposal specifies only the writ of habeas corpus, but by this specification does not intend to exclude the use of other original writs enumerated in the 1889 Constitution. Likewise, we have removed the procedural provisions regarding the issuance and hearing of writs of habeas corpus because we think these provisions are purely statutory in character and because Article III, section 21 of the 1889 Constitution adequately protects against the suspension of the privilege of a writ of habeas corpus.

To the general supervisory control which the 1889 Constitution granted the supreme court, the minority has added administrative control. This addition was made to clarify the supervisory powers of the supreme court and to permit the supreme court to exercise centralized administrative direction for the entire judicial system. This power is further emphasized by the rule-making power in judicial administration. The minority does not believe that there is an immediate need for the employment of this power, but we see its probable need in the future. We conceive that the office of the clerk of the supreme court could be used by the supreme court as an agency to facilitate the administration of the judicial system and have therefore included the power in the supreme court to prescribe the duties of its clerk. (section 11).

Rule-making power is categorized by the minority report into two classes. One class includes the practice of law and judicial administration of courts, which relate exclusively to the internal affairs of the judicial system. Powers in this regard are specifically lodged in the supreme court. The second class of rule-making power is restricted to rules of procedure and is intended to include both civil and criminal codes, but is specifically limited and qualified by the phrase "as provided by law" meaning, of course, that the rule-making power is actually reserved to the plenary power of the legislature as the lawmaking body of the State. It is believed that the making of rules of evidence properly belongs exclusively with the legislature because of the fine line between substantive and adjective law.

> Section 3. SUPREME COURT ORGANIZATION. The supreme court shall consist of one chief justice and four justices, a majority of whom will be necessary to pronounce the decision, which must be in writing and signed by the majority.
> The legislative assembly may increase the number of justices from five to seven.
> District judges shall be substituted for the chief justice or the justices in the event of disqualification or disability, in any cause, and the opinion of the district judge sitting with the supreme court shall have the same effect as an opinion of a justice of the supreme court.

COMMENTS

Except for the requirement that decisions of the supreme court must be in writing and be signed by the majority, which is included for the purpose of prohibiting per curiam unsigned decisions, the foregoing section 3 is a condensed version of Article VIII, section 5 of the 1889 Constitution. It does, however, permit the enlargement of the supreme court from five to seven justices including the chief justice. It makes no reference to quorums, calendars and procedure for adjournment of the court because the minority believes that these are provisions properly covered by the rules of court. Similarly, in a shorter paragraph we have provided for the seating of a district judge in the event of a disqualification of a supreme court justice.

> Section 4. DISTRICT COURT POWERS. Original jurisdiction of all matters and causes, both civil and criminal, including the power to issue, hear and determine original and remedial writs is vested in the district courts, but distribution of concurrent jurisdiction with other courts may be provided by law.

Until otherwise provided by law, appeals from inferior courts must be tried anew in the district court. District courts shall also have jurisdiction to review decisions of administrative boards and commissions and they shall have such additional jurisdiction as may be delegated by the laws of the United States and the state of Montana. The supreme court and district court process shall extend to all parts of the state.

COMMENTS

Brevity and clarity of expression have guided the minority in the drafting of this proposed judicial article. Our research has included a reasonably thorough study of other state Constitutions. WE were chagrined to find no other state Constitution encumbered by the deliniation of various types of action included within the original jurisdiction of our principal trial courts as it is described in Article VIII, section 11 of the 1869 Constitution. Moreover, we are apprehensive as to just bow limited that jurisdiction may prove to be if the interpretive rule of expressio unis exclusio alterius (expression of one is the exclusion of others) is applied.

With these considerations in mind, the minority sought to provide district courts with broad and flexible jurisdiction, and, accordingly, substituted the language "all matters and causes" in lieu of the specifications contained in the old section 11 of Article VIII. We considered the phrase "all justiciable causes" employed in the Illinois Constitution and used in the North Dakota proposed judicial article, but frcr cur research it appeared that the word "justiciable" is too vague to be meaningful and is thernfcre Still open to a possible restrictive construction which we seek to avoid. Accordingly, we preferred the unlimited words "all causes" used in the California judicial article pertaining to the superior courts, their courts of general trial jurisdiction. To this phrase we added the word "matters" to assure continued probate jurisdiction. To secure the vestment of the power in criminal proceedings we also added the phrase "both civil and criminal". To provide flexibility to the entire judicial system, we added the clause "but distribution of concurrent jurisdiction to other courts may be provided by law". By this clause it is intended to permit the legislature to assign concurrent jurisdiction to hear criminal matters not amounting to a felony and minor civil actions to inferior courts of limited jurisdiction.

By thus circumscribing original jurisdiction of the judicial power with legislative discretion, we were concerned that the legislature might effectively dessimate our district courts by vesting more and more judicial power in tribunals of its creation. To prevent this destructive abuse of power we have intentionally inserted the word "concurrent" as a limitation on that power, thereby forever leaving to the people the choice of appearing in any matter before either a Constitutional or legislative court. Further. by the use of the word "concurrent" as applied to original jurisdiction, we intend to leave to the legislature the option of unifying the trial court levels if in the future that should appear desirable.

But we were not content to limit the district courts to original jurisdiction only, but foresaw the need for continued appellate jurisdiction over inferior courts and administrative boards and commissions. Hence, we specifically provide for trial de novo on appeal from inferior courts, thereby avoiding excessive cost to parties in the preparation of transcript upon appeal from the lower courts.

We have also accomodated future delegation of judicial power by the united States government or the state of Montana and have not limited it to the present power of naturalization as does Article VIII, section 11 of the 1889 Constitution.

Finally, to make certain that both the supreme court and district courts are truly courts of statewide jurisdiction, we have expressly declared that their processes extend to all parts of the state.

> Section 5. JUDICIAL DISTRICTS. The legislative assembly shall divide the state into judicial districts and provide for the number of judges ir each district.
> The legislative assembly shall have the power to change the number of judicial districts and their boundaries and the number of judges and magistrates in each district; however, each district shall be formed of compact territory and be bounded by county lines, but no changes in the number or boundaries of districts shall work a removal of any judge from office during the term for which he has been elected or appointed.
> The chief justice may assign the district judge and other judges for temporary service from one district to another, and from one county to another.

COMMENTS

The minority believes that it is the perogative of the legislature to divide the state into judicial districts because of the political characteristics of such districts. It is felt that the legislature is not only better equipped to maintain a district's political integrity, hut it is altogether inappropriate for a court to become involved in political activity of any character. It is presumed, however, that the legislature will consult with the supreme court when providing for the number of judges in each district. Our position also prevents capricious action on the part of the legislature which might cause a judge to be removed from office. It is also doubtful, under this system of legislative deliberation, that a judge could be moved to a district or removed from his district because of an unpopular decision.

Section 6. TERMS AND PAY OF JUDGES. Justices of the supreme court, district court judges and other judges shall be paid as provided by law, but their salary shall not be diminished during their term of office.

Terms of office for supreme court judges shall be four years.

Terms of office for other judges shall be provided by law.

COMMENTS

By separate paragraphs, somewhat diminished in length, sections 6, 12, 20, and 30 of Article VIII of the 1889 Constitution have been incorporated under the dual subject matter of section 7.

Section 7. SELECTION OF JUDGES. In all vacancies in the offices of supreme court justices and district court judges caused by death, resignation, removal, retirement or failure of an incumbent judge to file a declaration of candidacy for a succeeding term of office, the governor of the state shall nominate a supreme court or district court judge from nominees selected in the manner provided by law. If the governor fails to nominate within thirty days after receipt of the names of the nominees, the chief justice or acting chief justice shall make the nomination. Each nomination shall be confirmed by the senate, but a nomination made while the senate is not assembled shall be effective as an appointment until the end of the next session of the senate. If the nomination is not confirmed by the senate the office shall be vacant and another selection and nomination shall be made.

Before the close of filings for nominations in the first primary election after senate confirmation, the name of the appointed judge shall be placed on a contested non-partisan ballot if other candidates have filed for election to that office. If there is no primary election contest for the office, the name of the appointed judge shall nevertheless be placed on a ballot in the general election allowing voters of the state or district the choice of his approval or rejection. Thereafter, the elected judge shall be subject to approval or rejection in a general election for each succeeding term of office. In the event of rejection of a judge another selection and nomination shall be made in like manner.

COMMENTS

Throughout the judicial and political history of the United States there has always been and continues to be a great and important philosophical controversy between the conceptOf an independent judiciary and popular control of the courts. This controversy is manifested by the variety of systems adopted by the various states ranging from lifetime appointment to the partisan election of judges. In our judicial committee the concepts polarized between the appointive merit system and the non-partisan election of judges. After prolonged discussion and vigorous arguments by strong advocates, the committee divided nearly equally with the chairman voting with the majority to make a 5-4 split. As indicated, the committee's collective thought crystallized on the selection of judges.

The minority proposed section 6 as an innovation to and a compromise with the existing methods of selection of judges. Yet, it does, we believe, include many of the best features of all plans. Thus, in synopsis, the sinoiity plan incorporates non-partisan merit selection, gubernatorial nominatice, senate confirmation, initial contested elections, and subsequent voter chcicn of approval Ci rejection of judges.

The purpose of the minority's plan is twofold; namely, to present to the voters judicial candidates whose qualifications are recognized and to encourage better qualified and experienced lawyers to seekelevation to the judicial bench. It is the position of the minority that this system of selection will provide strong, able, impartial and independent judges who are still responsive to and elected by the people.

Ii is the minority's belief that today, few, if any, of the voters are at all acquainted with the judicial candidates and are totally uninformed of their education, background, experience and individual qualifications for a judgeship. We firmly believe that the survival of democratic institutions and representative government is directly dependent upon an informed electorate, and we think the present system of elected judiciary utterly and completely fails to attain that desired goal. We believe this is especially critical in the selection of judges who must be unselfishly devoted to the fair settlement of society's disputes. Their qualifications to perform this essential governmental function is the first and highest consideration.

TO better insure the selection of qualified judges, the minority suggests that the legislature create a committee, bi-partisan in character, composed of both lawyers and laymen, but predominately laymen, who are geographically distributed throughout the state with at least one member from each judicial district. Preferably the committee should be elected by the legislature for staggered terms of three years so that one-third of its members are elected each annual session of the legislature. Members of the committee should not hold either public or political party offices and no member during his term of office may be a candidate for a judicial office.

The minority has purposely refrained from attempting to provide for the organization of the nominating committee in the belief that the legislature is better able to vigilantly oversee its operation.

The minority is not satisfied with the current process of unlimited gubernatorial appointive power of judges. In the light of statistics revealing that an overwhelming majority of our judiciary have been appointed by the governor, we are especially apprehensive of the future political character of our judges. Therefore, we have limited the governor's nomination to those nominees selected by a committee, created by and dependent upon the legislature. This system, we believe, accords an effective check and balance.

Neither have we been content with the merit selection system alone, but noting the validity of recent congressional disapproval of presidential appointments to the United States supreme court, we have recognized the value of "advice and consent" feature of the United States Constitution and have incorporated it into our proposal by the requirement of senate confirmation.

The fourth distinct and important feature of the minority plan in the selection of judges, is, of course, a necessity to a democratic form of government, i.e., a competitive election of public officials. This prime essential is provided for at the first primary election following appointment. In this primary election any lawyer may file against the appointed judge and the two candidates receiving the highest vote will again compete against each other in the following general election. If no candidate files against the appointed judge in the primary election, nevertheless, the name of the appointed judge must appear on the general election ballot for acceptance or rejection by the voters. For every succeeding term the elected judge must submit to acceptance or rejection by the voters of his district or state.

To repeat, the minority recommends that this comprehensive system of selection, nomination, confirmation and election of judges is a realistic and practical method of obtaining and keeping better judges by an informed electorate.

Section 8. QUALIFICATIONS AND LIMITATIONS OF JUDGES.

No person shall be eligible to the offices of justice of the supreme court or judge of the district court unless he or she shall have been admitted to the practice of law in Montana for at least five years prior to the date of appointment or election, is a citizen of the United States, and has resided in the state of Montana two years immediately before taking office. Qualifications and methods of selection of judges of other courts shall be provided by law.

No supreme court justice or district court judge shall solicit or receive any compensation on account of his office, in any form whatever, except salary and actual necessary travel expense as provided by law.

Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, no supreme court justice or district court judge shall practice law during his term of office, engage in any other employment for which salary or fee is paid, or hold office in a political party.

Filing for another elective public office results in forfeiture of judicial position.

A district judge must reside in his district during his term of office.

COMMENTS

Paragraph one of this section is essentially the same as section 10 of Article VIII, of the 1889 Constitution except that it eliminates the age requirement as we feel that age isn't as important as knowledge and experience. It specifies five years of practice at law as a qualification for either a supreme court justice or a judge of the district court. It adds that the qualifications and methods of selection of judges of the other courts will be provided by law.

The second paragraph of section 5 is similar to Article VIII, section 30 of the 1889 constitution except that it clarifies compensation of judges by allowing instead of prohibiting the receipt of actual necessary travel expense in addition to salary.

Paragraph three incorporates the provisions of Article VIII, sections 31 and 35 of the 1889 Constitution, except that it prevents either a district judge or justice of the supreme court from engaging in any other employment for which a salary or fee is paid and specifically prohibits a district or supreme court judge from holding any office in a political party.

The fourth paragraph of sfctico 5 is new to the Montana Constitution and is designed to prevent judgeships being used as stepping stones for the fulfillment of political ambition.

The fifth paragraph refines and shortens the residential requirements of district judges as they have been spelled out in section 33 of Article VIII.

Section 9. DISQUALIFICATION OF JUDGES. The legislature shall provide for disqualification of judges at any one or all of the inferior, trial and appellate court levels.

COMMENTS

This section is Delegate Proposal No. 90, except that we have changed "may provide" to "shall provide", because WE feel that it thus gives a clear mandate to the legislature to act in this area. It is our contention that it is the basic right of a litigant to be assured an impartial judge at all levels of the courts. It is noted that although disqualification procedure for lower courts is provided for in the statutes, the supreme court has remained exempt. By this provision, the supreme court justices will also be subject to the similar requirements.

Section 10. REMOVAL AND DISCIPLINE OF JUDGES AND LAWYERS. There is created a Judicial Standards Commission consisting of three judges, selected by the district judges, of which not more than one can be a member of the supreme court; two members of the Montana Bar, and two citizens who do not hold any public office of the state of Montana or any office of 3 political party, appointed by tht governor. Each vacancy on the commission shall be filled in rhe sane manner as the original appointment was mad: and the appointee shall serve for the remainder at the term vacated. No act of the commission is valid unless concurred in by a majority of its members. The commission shall select one of its members to serve as chairnan. Its proceedings shall be confidential.

The commission shall have the power to investigate, including power to subpoena witnesses and documents, upon complaint by any citizen or on its own motion, charges which could be the basis for retirement, censure or removal of any justice or judge or for the discipline, censure, suspension or disbarment of any practicing lawyer in the state of Montana. Upon finding charges to be well founded the Commission shall file a formal complaint before the supreme court. The supreme court shall hear such complaint, and if it be substantiated may retire, censure or remove any justice or judge or discipline, censure, suspend or disbar any practicing lawyer. If the complaint be against a justice, the court shall call in a district judge as provided in section 3 of this Article.

COMMENTS

1: may seem contradictory to go into such detail in this section, but the minority feels that the seeming current distrust of the legal profession in general and the courts in particular warranted this detail, in an effort to allay this distrust and to give adequate avenue for redress by the public. In cases where censure or removal of a justice or judge is indicated, such action can be taker, without the trauma caused by a public proceeding. At the same time it makes possible disciplinary action for reasons that are not of such magnitude as to warrant an impeachment proceeding.

In addition the mincrity feels that it is essential that the public be given the opportunity for redress of grievances against any practicing attorney. We feel that this section will do much to keep the legal profession at the bigh caliber that it must maintain if it is to be accorded the respect necessary to have the judicial system which we think Montana ought to have.

Section 11. CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT. The chief justice shall appoint a clerk of the supreme court who shall hold office at the pleasure of the supreme court.

The salary and qualifications shall be fixed by law, and the duties of the office shall be prescribed by the supreme court.

COMMENTS

The functions of this office are administrative in nature and affect no policy change or formation. For this reason the minority feels it is best to allow the supreme court to hire its own clerk. The clerk must work with the court, and even though he or she has dealings with the public, the clerk doesn't represent the people in the sense that a legislator does. We feel that a substantial portion of the voters don't know the candidate or candidates for the position and probably aren't very concerned with the position since no policy decisions are made.

In addition, again Allowing for future innovation, if the position develops into an agency to facilitate administration of the judicial system, the court should have the prerogative to hire the person it feels is best qualified to perform the functions that it nay prescribe.

Section 12. CLERK OF THE DISTRICT COURT. There shall ho a clerk of each judicial district court in each county who shall be elected by the voters therein and who may appoint such deputies as provided by law.

The term of office, qualifications, and the compensation of the district court clerk and deputies shall be provided by law.

The duties of the clerk and deputies shall be prescribed by the district court judge as provided by law.

COMMENTS

This section is basically the same as Article VIII, section 18 in the 1889 Constitution, except that we have delegated to the legislature the duty of providing term of office, qualifications and compensation. Again, this merely allows flexibility.

It is felt that the clerk should have the privilege of appointing deputies, who in effect are working for him.

The minority also feels that the duties of the clerks and deputies should be provided not only by the legislature but also by the district court judge who will be working closely with the clerk.

By including the clerk of the court in this judicial article it is not intended to impair the consolidation of this office with other county offices as proposed by the Local Government Committee, but if the committee on Style and Crafting determines there is conflict, the matter may be referred back to a joint conference of Judiciary and Local Government Committees.

Section 13. DISTRICT ATTORNEYS. There shall be elected district attorneys whose jurisdictional area, qualifications, term of office, salaries and duties shall be provided by law.

COMMENTS

In an effort to write a document that will be applicable for many years, we deemed it best to change the title of county attorney to district attorney. It is entirely possible that eventually counties may decide to share services and a Constitutional designation of a county attorney for each county would make transition in this area difficult. We have provided for legislative action concerning jurisdictional area, qualifications, term of office, salary and duties in keeping with our philosophy of flexibility. This section in no way precludes continuing the system of county attorneys that we now have; they will merely be called district attorneys instead.

To: MONTANA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

From: Natural Resources and Agriculture Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The Natural Resources and Agriculture Committee herewith submits a proposed new Article on "The Environment and Natural Resources" and a proposed new Article on Agriculture. The latter Article is intended to replace reference to Agriculture in section 1, Article XVIII in the present Constitution, and the words relating to the special levy on livestock in Article XII, section 9.

As a result of its deliberations, the committee has drawn up a new proposed Article on environment and natural resources. The Article requires that: the state and each person maintain and enhance the environment; legislative responsibility; and a provision for protection.

Separate sections dealing with land reclamation, water and cultural resources are part of the new proposed Article.

The environmental and natural resources proposal is submitted as a majority report as is the new proposed Article on Agriculture.

The minority report, a proposed last section to the new Article on the environment and natural resources, would provide a Montana resident with a right to appropriate legal proceedings against a government agency charged by law with the implementation and enforcement of said provision.

The members of this Committee, by signing the majority report, do not necessarily sanction each and every statement contained in this report. The minority report is an expression of those members who feel that such expression, while differing from that of the majority, merits consideration by the committee of the whole.

The testimony of 95 witnesses in 165 appearances was utilized by the committee. (See Appendix C)

The committee wishes to thank its Research Analyst, Charles Sullivan; its Secretary, Elaine Bung; Student Intern, Mona Earley; and Dave ard Lee Ann Jersey.

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE NATURAL RESOURCES AND AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on the Environment and Agriculture to read as follows:

ARTICLE ---

ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Section 1. PROTECTION AND ENHANCEMENT. (1) The State of Montana and each person must maintain and enhance the environment of the state for present and future geaeraticns.

(2) The legislature must Provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty.

(3) The legislature is directed to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degredation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion of natural resources.

Section 2. RECLAWATICN. All lands disturbed by the taking of natural resources must be reclaimed to as good a cccditicn or use as prior to the disturbance. The condition or use to which the land is to be reclaimed and the method of enforcement of the reclamation must 'be established by the legislature.

Section 3. WATER RIGHTS. (1) All existing rights to the use of any waters in this state for any useful or beneficial purpose are hereby recognized and confirmed.

(2) The use of all water now appropriated, or that may hereafter be appropriated for sale, rental, distribution, or other beneficial use, and the right-of-may over the lands of others, for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals, and aqueducts, necessarily used in connection therewith, as well as the sites for reservoirs necessary far collecting and storing the same, shall be held to be a public use.

(3) All surface, underground, flood, and atmospheric waters within the boundaries of the state of Montana are declared to be the property of the state for the use of its people and subject to appropriation for beneficial uses as provided by law.

(4) Benficial uses include, but are not limited to, domestic, municipal, agriculture, stackuatering. industry, recreation, scenic waterways, and habitat for wildlife, and all other uses presently recognized by law, together with future beneficial uses as determined by the legislature or courts of Montana. A diversion or development work is not required for future acquisition of a water right for the foregoing uses. The legislature shall determine the method of establishing those future water rights which do not require a diversion and may designate priorities for those future rights if necessary.

(5) Priority of appropriation for beneficial uses shall give the better right. No appropriation shall be denied except when such denial is demanded by the public interests.

(6) The legislature shall provide for the administration, control and regulation of water rights and shall establish a system of centralized records.

Section 4. CULTURAL RESOURCES. The legislature must provide for the identification, acquisition, restoration, enhancement and preservation of scenic, historic, archeologic, scientific, cultural and recreational areas, sites and objects, and their use and enjoyment by the people.

COMMENTS CN MAJORITY FRCECSAL

ARTICLE ___

ENVIRONMENT ANL NATURAI BESOURCES

Sectien 1. PROTECTICN AND ENHANCEMENT. (1) The state of Mcntana and each persen must maintain and enhance the envircnment cf the state fer present and future generaticns.

(2) The legislature must provide fcr the administratien and enfercement cf this duty.

(3) The legislature is directed to provide adequate remedies for the protectien cf the environmental life support system frem degredatien and tc provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletien cf natural resources.

COMMENTS

Your committee presents and recommends in its prepcsal the strongest Constitutional environmental sectien of any existing state Ccnstitutien.

Subsection (1) requires the state and each person, which cf course includes ccrpcratiens and all legal entities as well as individuals, tc maintain and enhance the Montana envircnment fcr present and future genaratiens. Your committee considered at length an exhaustive list of descriptive adjectives tc precede the werd envircnment such as "healthful", "pleasing", "quality", "high quality", "unsullied", and "unique" and finally ccnclnded that no descriptive adjective was adequate or necessary. This was not a compremise but rather an acknculedgment of the present Montana envircnment.

Constitutienal provisions cf other states were studied but none were considered adequate as nc ether state has Montana's envircnment and therefore your committee felt that the best recommendation is tc require that all must maintain and enhance the Montana Environment.

Subsection (2) mandates the legislature tc administer and enforce the duty tc maintain and enhance the Montana envircnment. Your committee was urged by many tc detail the manner cf accemplishing this duty but the temptatien tc legislate in the Constitutien was resisted and confidence repesed in the legislature. To those who may lack such cenfidence in the elected representatives cf the people the clear and concise duty to maintain and enhance the Montana environment cannet be contravened.

Your committee censidered twe Delegate Propesals which declared in substance that the State of Montana hold in Public Trust the environment, for the benefit of all the people of the state. The majority felt it unnecessary to have the state hold in trust all land, including of course privately owned real property, for the benefit of all the people of the state in order to accomplish the protection of our environment. In addition the majority felt it unwise to experiment by incorporating into the Constitution a "Public Trust" which was not clearly defined to the committee, which is not contained in the Constitution of any other state, and which exists in its infancy in only two states by legislation.

Subsection (3) mandates the legislature to provide adequate remedies to protect the environmental life support system from degradation. The committee intentionally avoided definitions to preclude being restrictive and the term "environmental life support system" is all encompassing including, but not limited to air, water, and land and whatever interpretation is afforded this phase by the legislature and courts; there is no question that it cannot be degraded.

Subsection (3) further mandates the legislature to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources. Although it is recognized that some non-renewable natural resources are to be consumed this provision permits the legislature to determine whether the resource is being unreasonably depleted and requires preventive remedies.

The committee considered proposals which would give individuals a right to sue without the necessity of showing some damage. The majority concluded that Montana's present law providing for class action under which litigation is presently pending involving multitudes of claimants against a single alleged polluter is adequate. However the majority feels that this is not a compromise because the majority proposal requires the legislature to provide whatever renedies are necessary to prevent degradation and unreasonable depletion.

The majority of the committee believes that this is the best Article for the protection of the Montana environment for its people.

> Section 2. RECLAMATION. All lands disturbed by the taking of natural resources must be reclaimed to as good a condition or use as prior to the disturbance. The condition or use to which the land is to be reclaimed and the method of enforcement of the reclamation must be established by the legislature.

COMMENTS

Your committee finds it necessary to direct the legislature to recognize the demands of this and future generations and that our natural resources must be used to be enjoyed, but only with judicious Use and reclamation.

Because Montana has at least 500,000 acres of strippable coal land and Untold acres of other natural resources, your committee believes the responsibilities of protecting and restoring the surface conditions of those lands for unborn generations should not be left to men, but rather protected by fundamental law.

Section 3. WATER RIGHTS. (1) All existing rights to the Use of any waters in this state for any useful or beneficial purpose are hereby recognized and confirmed.

(2) The use of all water now appropriated, or that may hereafter be appropriated for sale, rental, distribution, or other beneficial Use, and the right-of-way over the lands of others, for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals, and aqueducts, necessarily used in connection therewith, as well as the sites for reservoirs necessary for collecting and storing the same, shall be held to be a public use.

(3) All surface, Underground, flood, and atmospheric waters within the boundaries of the state of Montana are declared to be the property of the state for the Use of its people and subject to appropriation for beneficial uses as provided by law.

(4) Beneficial uses include, but are not limited to, domestic, municipal, agriculture, stockwatering, industry, recreation, scenic waterways, and habitat for wildlife, and all other uses presently recognized by law, together with future beneficial Uses as determined by the legislature or courts of Montana. A diversion or development work is not required for future acquisition of a water right for the foregoing uses. The legislature shall determine the method of establishing those future water rights which do not require a diversion and may designate priorities for those future rights if necessary.

(5) Priority of appropriation for beneficial uses shall give the better right. No appropriation shall be denied except when such denial is demanded by the public interests.

(6) The legislature shall provide for the administration, control and regulation of water rights and shall establish a system of centralized records.

COMMENTS

Your committee feels that water and water rights are of crucial importance to the past history and future development of the State of Montana. For this reason the committee feels justified in expanding the present Constitutional section which relates solely to the use of water to include provisions for the protection of the waters of the state for use by its people.

Subsection (1) guarantees all existing rights to the use of water and includes all adjudicated rights and nonadjadicated rights including water rights for which notice of appropriations has been filed as well as rights by use for which no filing is of record.

Subsection (2) is a verbatim duplication of Article III, section 15 of the present Constitution and has been retained in its entirety to preserve the substantial number of court decisions interpreting and incorporating the language of this section.

Subsection (3) is a new provision to establish ownership of all waters in the state subject to use by the people. This does not in any way affect the past, present or future right to appropriate water for beneficial uses and is intended to recognize Montana Supreme Court decisions and guarantee the state of Montana standing to claim all of its waters for use by the people of Montana in matters involving other states and the United States Government.

Subsection (4) is a new provision to permit recreation and stockwatering to acquire a water right without the necessity of a diversion. This applies only to future rightr and, of course, only to waters for which there are no present water rights. This subsection further provides that future agricultural and industrial water development will not be foreclosed by recreation, as it is left up to the legislature to determine the method of establishing a future water right without a diversion and the legislature is further authorized to establish priorities of water uses for those waters where the legislature decrees priorities necessary.

Subsection (5) acknowledges a continuance of our present water law principle that the first appropriation in time is the better right and provides that no future appropriations shall be denied except in the public interest.

Subsection (6) mandates the legislature to administer, control and regulate water rights. This does not in any way change the present legislatively established system of local control of adjudicated waters by water commissioners appointed by the District Court having jurisdiction. A new requirerent is added to establish a system of centralized records of all water rights in addition to the present statutory system of local filing of records. The centralized records are intended to provide a single location for water rights information and a complete record of all water rights.

Section 4. CULTURAL RESOURCES. The legislature must provide for the identification, acquisition, restoration, enhancement and preservation of scenic, historic, archeologic, scientific, cultural and recreational areas, sites, and objects, and their use and enjoyment by the people.

COMMENTS

In response to widespread citizen and delegate interest in preserving our yhcst towns, as well as our scenic, archeologic, scientific, cultural and recreational areas, sites and objects your committee proposes this self-explanatory section. The committee felt that such a section was appropriate in an article providing for protection of our total environment for this and future generations.

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE NATURAL RESOURCES AND AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Agriculture to read as follows:

ARTICLE ___

AGRICULTURE

Section 7. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE. The legislative assembly must provide for a Department of Agriculture and enact laws and provide appropriations to protect, enhance and develop all agriculture of the state.

Section 2. RIGHT TO SPECIAL LEVIES. A special levy may be made on livestock and on agricultural commodities for the purpose of disease control and indemnification, predator control, livestock inspection and protection, agricultural commodity inspection and protection, livestock and agricultural commodity research and promotion.

COMMENTS CR MAJORITY PROPOSAL

Section 1. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE. The legislative assembly must provide for a department of Agriculture and enact laws and provide appropriations to protect, enhance and develop all agriculture of the state.

COMMENTS

Your committee believes that it is necessary to recognize the largest and most important industry in the state by retaining the Constitutional provision for a Department of Agriculture and to require that the legislature provide appropriations and authorities to adequately protect, enhance and develop the agricultural industry of the state.

This new section is intended to remove any reference to agriculture from Article XVIII, section 1 of our Constitution and to be the first section of a new article on agriculture.

Section 2. RIGHT TO SPECIAL LEVIES, A special levy may be made on livestock and on agricultural commodities for the purpose of disease control and indemnification, predator control. livestock inspection and protection, agricultural commodity inspection and protection, livestock and agricultural commodity research and promotion.

COMMENTS

This section is a revision of Article XII, section 9. Because of the excellent results of the livestock mill levy, your committee believes all of agriculture should benefit from this method of self-help taxation. However, your committee feels that setting the rate, as was previously done, is a legislative function to be exercised in response to industry needs.

MINORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE NATURAL RESOURCES AND AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE:

That the following subsection be added as subsection (4) to section 1 of the Environment and Natural Resources Majority Proposal:

Section (4). Any Montana resident has the right to appropriate legal proceedings against any governmental agency charged by law with the implementation and enforcement of any provision of this Article.

/s/ C. Louise Cross

COMMENTS ON MINORITY PROPOSAL

Section (4). Any Montana resident has the right to appropriate legal proceedings against any governmental agency charged by law with the implementation and enforcement of any provision of this Article.

COMMENTS

The minority report, a proposed subsection to section 1 of the new Article on the environment and natural resources, would provide a Montana resident with a right to appropriate legal proceedings against a government agency charged by law with the implementation and enforcement of said provision.

This is intended to grant an individual a Constitutionally guaranteed direct legal remedy to compel the performance by state agencies of the duty to implement and enforce the provisions of the Environment section.

From: Revenue and Finance Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The Revenue and Finance Committee submits herewith a proposed new Revenue and Finance Article which combines Articles XII, XIII and XXI of the present Constitution. The proposed article is intended to replace all sections of those articles, removing some provisions entirely, condensed the language of other provisions, retaining the intent of some sections, and adding neu revenue sections.

The members of this committee, by signing the majority report, do not necessarily endorse each and every statement contained therein; and minority reports on various sections are also presented in this report.

The committee utilized the testimony of many witnesses. It is also indebted to the delegates for the many proposals in the revenue and finance area.

The committee wishes to express its thanks to Boger A, Barber, its Research Analyst; Dennis Burr, its consultant from the Department of Revenue; Karen Eicliday, its secretary; and Randall Gray, Blake Johnson and Edwin Shannon, its Student Interns.

INTRODUCTION

The delegates to the Constituticnal Cnnventicn arc charged with rewriting the basic gcvernmental structure and legal document of the State. The guiding principle during these deliberaticns has been a clean, simple dccunect, limited tc those basic principles and doctrines important encugh tc be frczen in Cnnstituticnal ice. Some committees, cf necessity, had tc come up with Constitutional articles. The Executive, Legislative and Judiciary Committees bad tc establish the basic framewcrk for those three traditicnal branches of gcvernment. The Bill cf Rights Committee had tc develop certain fundamental principles and rights guaranteed to the pecple by their gcvernment.

The Revenue and Finance Committee apprcached its task with a different attitude. From a pure, theoretical viewpoint, the Cnnstituticn does not have tc say a thing abcut taxation. That suggesticn was made to the committee cn at least twc cccasicns. The reason is simple--the pcwer to tax is an inherent pcwer of the state, a power already possessed by the state without any grant of authcrity. Anything in a state Cnnstituticn cn the subject of taxation is either redundant (reiterating a pcwer already possessed by the state) or restrictive.

The majcrity report contains prcvisicns c f both philcsophies. Some cf the prcpcsed sections simply state a power already possessed by the legislature--but repeated because cf its importance to proper gcvernmental cperaticn cr to the protection of the people. Cther sections were specifically included tc restrict the state's taxing or revenue pcwers.

The majority report reflects the committee's approach to its deliberaticns. Assigned three articles frcm the present Constitution--ccataining 42 secticns--the committee recommends a condensed, single article cf only 14 sections. Naturally, that means the committee eliminated or abandcned many secticns in the present Constituticn. Fcr the cnnvenience cf the cnnventicn, the following enumeration shows what happened tc thcse secticrs and why.

ARTICLE XII

Section 1. Eliminated. The state already possesses the pcwer to levy particular kinds of taxes and license fees. The Constitution does not need tc list those tax programs. The committee also did not feel that the Cnnstituticn should require taxaticn cf all prcperty.

For 80 years, the Constituticn required taxaticn cf all property. That mandate was difficult tc live up to. The reporting procedure utilized for taxaticn of household prcperty did nct insure its complete taxation. Stocks and bonds frequently escaped detection. The requirement of complete property taxation often encouraged dishonesty. The proposed article removes those problems--the legislature shall decide what property to tax and how to tax it. The legislature may decide that other types of taxation are more equitable and may reach kinds of property not touched by the property tax now.

Section 1a. Eliminated. Again, it is unnecessary to specify particular tax programs in the Constitution.

The provision earmarking income tax revenues for education and the general fund was removed for two reasons: 1) the committee wanted to avoid earmarking of funds as much as possible, and 2) the present language does not specify how much of the income tax revenues should go to education. By statute, 25 percent of these funds are presently dedicated, but technically, one dollar of the total income tax revenues would satisfy the Section 1a requirement. The committee felt the earmark had little force and was best eliminated.

Section 1b. Proposed section 6, with modifications, covers this section.

Section 2. Proposed section 5, with some changes, covers tax exempt property.

Section 3. Eliminated. The legislature should determine methods and procedures for taxing minerals. The committee heard conflicting testimony on the most equitable kind of tax to impose on metal mines, coal, oil and gas. Therefore, the decision should be left to legislative determination.

The committee recommends that the legislature give serious consideration to retention of the present statute providing for a net proceeds tax in lieu of the property tax on minerals in place. The legislature has done a good job of developing fair and equitable taxation of Montana minerals. It should be given full discretion to continue that program. The committee also recognizes the importance of legislative flexibility to meet the needs of changing times. If the legislature should decide that net proceeds are no longer the best method of mineral taxation, it should also remember the dislocation to local government revenues that would be caused by such a charge.

Section 4. Eliminated. The prohibition on state aid to local governments is no longer justified. If the legislature wants to assist local governments, it should he free to do so and should not have to resort to subterfuge. The legislature should not have to create artificial loopholes, like the license fee system, to feed tax money to local government units. That license fee exception to the present state aid prohibition has caused trouble for the legislature when it tries to establish a license system; and troubles the courts when they must decide whether the revenue program is really a license system. The legislature has also tried to get around the prohibition by creating programs of a "state governmental nature" such as the recent sewerage treatment aid program. That concept is a nebulous creature, and may thwart otherwise acceptable programs that fail to attain the proper state government stature.

The question of local government taxing authority is covered by the Local Government Committee. Nothing in the proposed revenue article is meant to restrict the legislature from granting taxing authority to local governments or of local governments from having such authority.

Section 5. The question of local government taxing powers is covered by the Local Government Committee. The second clause of this section is covered by proposed section 4.

Section 6. The intent of this section is covered by proposed section 2.

Section 7. The intent of this section is covered by proposed section 2.

Section 8. This guarantee is already established in the Federal Constitution, the supreme law of the land. Repetition of the guarantee at the state level is unnecessary.

Section 9. The two-mill limitation on state property taxes has been removed, primarily in an effort to comply with the Serrano school finance case from California. Although Serrano is not yet the law in the United States, and a similar decision has not been upheld in Montana courts, the Constitution is not a document for today only. The framers of this Constitution must be forward-looking and future-oriented.

The committee has heard conflicting testimony on the Serrano case and its application to the Montana situation. But the overwhelming weight of the evidence indicates its applicability. The committee simply had to face the possibility that Montana may have to levy a statewide property tax for educational purposes. That possibility was strengthened by the acceptance of the Serrano doctrine in Texas, Minnesota and New Jersey.

The committee was also concerned with the present use of the two-mill statewide property tax levy. The levy is used now as a backstop measure, imposed to bring in additional revenues when other methods fail. Quite often the decision to impose the levy is made for political, rather than economic, reasons.

The intents of the four-mill livestock levy is covered in proposed section 14.

Section 10. Eliminated. The intent of this section is covered, in general terms, in proposed section 12. Specifics are better left to the legislature, however.

Section 11. The first sentence is new proposed section 1. The uniformity philosophy in the second sentence was eliminated, primarily because uniformity of taxation is already required of the states through the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution. The proviso also unnecessarily thwarts taxation programs, and has caused considerable consternation in other states. The Pennsylvania Supreme Court invalidated an inheritance tax program as violative of the uniformity provision. The Illinois uniformity clause was interpreted to prohibit a graduated income tax in that state, Section 12. The "balanced budget" philosophy of this section is retained in proposed section 9.

Section 13. Eliminated. The intent of this section is covered, in general terms, in proposed section 12. Details should be left to the legislature.

Section 14. Eliminated. The intent of this section is covered, in general terms, in proposed section 12. The legislature should establish the procedures by statute.

Section 15. Property taxation procedures are covered in proposed Section 3--the state is now responsible for appraisal, assessment and equalization. Provisions concerning the structure of the property taxation system are better left to the legislature. Only that body can judge the needs of future taxpayers, and establish procedures that best suit those needs. It is unnecessary to freeze such administrative detail in a Constitution.

The committee does recommend a comprehensive review procedure for Montana taxpayers in proposed section 7. The recommendation establishes an appeal board separate and distinct from the tax administrative agencies. Because this independent appeal program is new to Montana, the committee's recommendation on that part of the state tax structure is relatively detailed.

Section 16. Proposed section 3 covers the assessment of property. The detail in this section is no longer necessary.

Section 17. Eliminated. The philosophy of the proposed article on revenue and finance is faith in the long-term judgement of future legislatures in matters of taxation and finance. The legislature should enjoy the flexibility necessary to create and develop equitable tax programs. That assembly should not be limited to particular approaches in raising revenue. The proposed article does not require taxation of all property--and consequently, makes no attempt to define that term.

Section 18. Eliminated. The legislative assembly already possesses that power.

ARTICLE XIII

Section 1. The "lending of credit" provisc is essentially a public purpose question. The Montana Supreme court has equated the two concepts in its numerous interpretations of the "lending of credit" clause. Public purpose is covered in proposed section 1. The remainder of this section is concerned with government ownership of corporate stocks and bonds. That concept is an investment question, which is covered in proposed section 13.

Section 2. The new state indebtedness provision is covered in proposed section 8.

Section 3. The intent of this section is covered in proposed section 11.

Section 4. Eliminated. The committee felt that the legislature should not be bound in this way. After much consideration by the committee, it was concluded that if the state were permitted to back local government bonds with its (the state's) full faith and credit, the interest rates on those bonds could be lower.

Section 5. Local government indebtedness is covered by proposed section 10.

Section 6. Local government indebtedness is covered by proposed section 10.

ARTICLE XXI

The committee is proposing an entirely new section on investment of public funds, a short provision that completely replaces all of Article XXI. That article is outdated and obsolete. In fact, it has been largely useless since its inclusion in the Constitution in 1924. As originally established; Article XXI created three permanent revenue funds for the state to be funded by money grants of at least $250. Those three funds have never existed, principally because the interest from the funds could not be distributed until the principal reached ridiculously high amounts. ($100 million and $500 million). Benefactors to the state simply were not willing to tie their money up in that way. Because of the nonexistent nature of those three funds, all of the sections that refer to them in Article XXI are useless.

If the public school fund and other land grant funds had not been added to the Trust and Legacy Fund in 1938, the entire article would presently have no affect. But that incorporation did give the article heretofore invisible life. Treatment of the public school fund is already taken care of in Article XI and the Enabling Act, however, so the committee saw no reason to retain the Constitutional status of an otherwise hollow Trust and Legacy Fund. The fund will not be eliminated entirely by its removal from the Constitution. It will still exist by statute.

MAJORITY REPORT

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE REVENGE AND FINANCE COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Revenue and Finance to read as follows:

ARTICLE __

REVENUE AND FINANCE

Section 1. PUBLIC PURPOSE. Taxes shall be levied by general laws for public purposes.

Section 2. SURRENDER CLAUSE. The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended, or contracted away.

Section 3. PROPERTY TAX ADMINISTRATION. Property which is to be taxed shall be appraised, assessed and equalized by the state in the manner prescribed by law.

Section 4. EQUAL VALUATION. The assessed valuation of property to be taxed in any taxing juricdiction shall be the same valuation as the valuation for state and county purposes.

Section 5. PROPERTY TAX EXEMPTIONS. The property of the United States, the state, countier, cities, towns, school districts, municipal corporations, and public libraries may be exempt from taxation, but any private interest in such property may be taxed separately. Property used exclusively for educational purposes, places for actual religious worship, hospitals and places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, institutions of purely public charity, may be exempt from taxation. Certain classes of property may be exempt from taxation. The Legislative Assembly may authorize creation of special inprovsment districts for capital improvements and the maintenance of capital improvements and the assessment of charges therefor, against tax exempt property directly benefited thereby.

Section 6. HIGHWAY EARMARK. Revenue, except from general sales and use taxes, from excise and license taxation on gasoline, fuel and other energy sources derived as a result of the propulsion of vehicles on public highways, and gross vehicle weight fees, shall be used solely for the payment of obligations incurred for construction, reconstruction, repair, operation, and maintenance of public highways, streets, roads and bridges and for county, city and town obligations on streets, roads and bridges, after the deduction of furds for enforcement of highway safety, driver education, tourist promotion and for administrativs and collection costs as authorized by the legislative assembly. By a three-fifths vcte cf the members cf each hcuse cf the legislative assembly cr by initiated measure approved by a majcrity cf the electorate, such dedicated funds ray be apprcpriated for cther purposes.

Section 7. TAX APPEALS BOARD. The State Bcard cf Tax Audit and Appeals shall be composed Cf five members, whc shall be appointed ty the governcr, by and with the advice and consent cf the Senate (Legislative Assembly). The Legislative Assembly shall divide the state into five districts as equal as practical in population of citizens and a member cf such board shall be a resident cf each of said districts. Each member shall hold his office for a term of five years, and until his successcr shall have been appointed and qualified. In case cf a vacancy, the perscn appointed to fill such vacancy shall hcld cffice fcr the unexpired term in which the vacancy occurs. The first five members appointed tc said bcard shall determine their respective terms by lot so that a term of office shall expire each succeeding year thereafter. other qualificatiens, and salaries of members, shall be as provided by law; prcvided, hcwever, that such members shall be sc appcinted that the board will nct be ccmposed of mcre than three members whc are affiliated with the same political party or crganization; provided, further, that each member shall devcte his entire time to his duties of office and shall nct hold any position cf trust cr Frofit, or engage ir any other cccupatiCn or business, cr serve on or under any committee of any pclitical party or crganizatiCn cr candidate fcr cffice, and each member shall file with the Secretary of State, annually, a full, detailed and complete disclcsure cf his financial conditicn.

The State Bcard cf Tax Audit and Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction of individual appeals cf all divisions of the administrative agency of the state carrying cut the Frcvisicns cf Section 3 of this article in crder to insure that all taxes are administered according to law. Such individual appeals may be fcr the undervaluaticn and overvaluaticn and assessment of the appellant's property, cr any other taxpayer's property. The board shall also have appellate jurisdiction of individual appeals of other divisions cf State and local agencies related to license and excise taxation as may be provided the State by law. The board shall have the right to audit administration agency to ascertain instances of undervaluaticn or overvaluaticn cf prcperty to be taxed and publish its findings thereof. The Legislative Assembly may prescribe by law cther duties tc be Ferforaed by such Board and may provide that minor appeals, as defined by law, may be adjudicated by a single Bcard member in the county where the property is located, or the taxpaying citizen resides, or as the case may be.

Section 8. STATE INDEBTEDNESS. No state debt shall be created unless authcrized by a three-fifths vcte cf the members of both houses of the Legislative Assembly. State debt cannot be created to cover deficits incurred when apprcpriations exceed anticipated revenue during any budget period.

Section 9. BALANCED BUDGET. Appropriations by the Legislative Assembly shall not exceed anticipated revenues during any budget period.

Section 10. LOCAL GOVERNMENT INDEBTEDNESS. The Legislative Assembly shall enact limits of indebtedness for subdivisions and districts of the state.

Section 11. USE OF LOAN PROCEEDS. All money borrowed by or on behalf of the state, or any subdivision or district of the state, shall be used only for the purpose or purposes specified in the law authorizing the loan.

Section 12. STRICT ACCOUNTABILITY. The Legislative Assembly shall enact the necessary laws to insure strict accountability of all revenues received and money spent by the state, subdivisions and districts thereof.

Section 13. INVESTMENT OF PUELIC FUNDS. The Legislative Assembly shall provide for a unified investment program for public funds and prescribe the rules and regulations therefor, including the supervision of investment of surplus funds of all subdivisions and districts of the state. The separate existence and identity of each and every fund involved as a part of the unified investment program shall be strictly maintained. An audit of the investment program shall be conducted at least annually and submitted to the Governor, Legislative Assembly and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Section 14. AGRICULTURAL LEVIES. A special levy may be made on livestock and agricultural commodities for the purpose of disease control and indemnification, predator control, livestock inspection and protection, agricultural inspection and protection, livestock and agricultural commodity research and promotion.

COMMENTS ON THE MAJORITY PROPOSAL

Section 1. Taxes shall be levied by general laws for public purposes.

COMMENTS

The broad language of proposed Section 1 is meant to replace the specific tax base provisions in present Article XII. The new section speaks only of "taxes". Provisions in the Present Constitution specify particular kinds of revenue measures like property taxes, license fees, income taxes and mining taxation. That kind of enumeration is unnecessary; the state already possesses the power to levy any kind of tax it wants to. Enumfration of specific kinds of tax programs is also unwise. Courts, as a rule of construction, often hold that the listed measures or provisions are in lieu of all unlisted measures. In other words, the list tends to become exclusive.

The proposed section also Establishes two well-recognized and important protections-requirements that taxes be established by general laws for public purposes only.

The requirement of general laws for public purposes extends to all tax programs, both state and local. Although those two requirements are already imposed on the state by the federal Constitution, repetition in the state document emphasizes their importance.

Section 2. The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended, or contracted away.

COMMENTS

The shortened language of proposed Section 2 replaces the detailed provisions of present sections 6 and 7 in Article XII. The proposed section is frequently found in newer Constitutions, and is included as a reminder to the legislative assembly. The power of taxation is the most important power a governmental body possesses, and should not be lightly dismissed or bargained away.

The provision is not intended to prevent the state from delegating taxing powers to local governments. Nor is this section meant to deprive the legislature of its discretion to tax or not to tax or exempt classes of property.

Section 3. Property which is to be taxed shall be appraised, assessed, and equalized by the state in the manner prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

This new section is a progressive change from present taxation provisions. It embodies the committee's recommendation on property tax administration, which was previously set out in great detail in present Section 15 of Article XII. That old section, which established a two-tier system of assessment, equalization and review, would be replaced by a state-level system of appraisal, assessment and equalization. The details of that property tax system are not spelled out, again a departure from the specificity of present Section 15. The details of any tax administration system should be left to the legislature, which is best qualified to develop the most efficient, modern and fair system necessary for the needs of the day. Tax administration should be established by the legislature and administered by the executive branch of government, not by a Constitutional board which is immune to control by all three branches of government and immune from control by the people. A Constitutionally enshrined board is less answerable for its activities and is freer to ignore the mandates and directives of the legislative assembly.

Property appraisal and property tax assessment and equalization must be conducted by a state agency, however. The committee heard reams of testimony concerning the inadequate job of assessment and tax equalization in the state. The intent of the committee is that this change will establish qualified, professional appraisal and appraisal procedures, and will insure the equalization of taxes across the entire state.

Hopefully, the inequalities that presently exist within taxing districts and between taxing districts can be avoided if accountability is in some state agency. Testimony also leads the committee to believe that pressures and temptations for undervaluation and under-assessment presently exist at the local level. The current operation of the school foundation program encourages undervaluation of local property. When such undervaluation exists, the state pours in more money for educational purposes.

Hand-in-hand with the concept of a professionalized, responsive tax administrator is the need for independent review of the administrator's actions. The committee has created the machinery for that review function in its proposed section 7. That proposal is a sharp change from the present Constitutional tax administration structure which combines both the administrative and adjudicating functions in one agency. True equity requires the separation of those responsibilities.

The need for statewide administration of the property tax was probably brought into sharpest focus by the torrent of testimony on Serrano v. Priest. If the state has to go into funding of governmental programs, particularly education, through a statewide property tax, the need for efficient, equitable appraisal and assessment will be intensified.

Section 4. The assessed valuation of property to be taxed in any taxing jurisdiction shall be the same valuation as the valuation for state and county purposes.

COMMENTS

The proposed section is similar in language and intent to present Section 6 of Article XII. The provision guarantees that property will be assessed at the same value, despite the government that is levying the tax. In other words, property will be taxed at the same assessment for state, county or school district purposes. A school district cannot assess at a higher value. Such "equal" valuation between local governments is so important, the committee feels, that it should be guaranteed in the Constitution.

Section 5. The property of the United States, the state, counties, cities, towns, school districts, municipal corporations, and public libraries may be exempt from taxation, but any private interest in such property may be taxed separately. Property used exclusively for educational purposes, places for actual religious worship, hospitals and places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, institutions of purely public charity, may be exempt from taxation. Certain classes of property may be exempt from taxation. The legislative assembly may authorize creation of special improvement districts for capital improvements and the maintenance of capital improvements and the assessment of charges therefor, against tax exempt property directly benefited thereby.

COMMENTS

The proposed section on property tax exemptions is different in at least four ways. Most of the present property exemptions are retained-agricultural and horticultural societies and mortgages are deleted. Those classes of property could be exempt from taxation if the Legislature so required. Deletion from the constitutional listing does not remove them from potential tax exemption. The new section permits taxation of private interests in government-owned property, closing a loophole in the present Constitution. The proposed provision also permits assessment of special improvement district charges on tax-exempt property. The Constitutionality of such charges is presently in doubt, although many such assessments are paid annually on tax-exempt property.

The new provision simply legitimatizes that practice.

The most important change in the proposedsection is the non-exclusiv2 nature of the tax exempt list. Unlike the present Constitution, the proposed article cn Revenue and Finance does not require that all property be taxed. The prcposed provisions are silent on the subject, leaving the sccpe and nature cf taxation prcgrams up to the Legislature. Prcperty may be taxed or may be exempted by the Legislature. The permissible list of exemptions is not exclusive. The legislature may add tc the list.

> Section 6. Revenue, except from general sales and use taxes, from excise and license taxaticn cn gasoline, fuel and other energy scurces derived as a result of the propulsion of vehicles cn public highways, and grcss vehicle weight fees, shall be used sclely fcr the payment cf cbligaticns incurred for constructicn, reconstruction, repair, operation, and maintenance of public highways, streets, rcads and bridges and fcr county, city and town cbligaticns on streets, roads and bridges, after the deducticn cf funds for enforcement of highway safety, drivers educaticn, tourist promotion and for administrative and collecticn ccsts as authcrized by the legislative assembly. By a three-fifths vote of the members of each hcuse cf the legislative assembly or by initiated measure approved by a majcrity of the electorate, such dedicated funds may be appropriated for other purpcses.

COMMENTS

The proposed section on earmarking of funds for highway purposes is similar to present Secticn 16 of Article XII in most respects. Three substantial changes have been made in the sccpe and effect of that cld section, however:

1.) The amount of money earmarked fcr the highway fund has been changed. The old section dedicated funds frcm fuel taxes, gross vehicle weight fees registratien fees and fees on the sale of new cars. The proposed section only earmarks gasoline and fuel taxes, and gross vehicle weight fees.

2.) The permissible uses cf highway earmarked funds have been expanded to include local government road and street systems, highway safety programs and driver educatien programs. The removal cf the state aid to local government restriction insures that these road funds can be used tc finance local government road and street systems. The legislature will now be free to make direct grants to local governments instead of developing complicated bookkeeping devices to get around the prchititicn.

3.) The funds are not dedicated from now ad infinitum, or until repeal by amendment or by another Constitutional Convention. The proposed section permits diversion of the earmarked funds to other purposes if each house of the Legislative Assembly by a three-fifths majority, approves such expenditure. In other words, the primary responsibility for review, assessment . . . and eventually, allocation . . . of highway funds rests with the Legislature. That body is free to change the earmark.

The committee felt that retention of the anti-diversion amendment was necessary at the present time. The amendment is a recent addition to the Constitution, overwhelmingly approved by the voters in 1956. A large amount of Federal matching money is still pouring into the state to finance the interstare system and the local primary and secondary highway systems. Extensive testimony indicates its exclusion may well jeopardize the final product of this Convention.

The committee was also concerned with the proper use of gasoline and motor fuel tax revenues. Those taxing programs were originally created to benefit the state highway system. The committee felt that original purpose should be maintained. The committee realizes that the time may come when highway funds are no longer needed, at least not at the level of current programs. In that case the gasoline and fuel taxes should perhaps be allowed to diminish. The committee would hate to create another situation like the cigarette tax, which was originally set up to fund programs and benefits for veterans. That tax has now been moved to fund the Long Range Building Program and the General Fund. In an effort to encourage the elimination of the gasoline and motor fuel taxes when their usefulness is up, the committee has tried to strengthen legislative control and allocation over highway funds.

Section 7. The State Board of Tax Audit and Appeals shall be composed of five members, who shall be appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate (Legislative Assembly). The legislative assembly shall divide the state into five districts as equal as practical in population of citizens and a member of such board shall be a resident of each of said districts. Each member shall hold his office for a term of five years, and until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified. In case of a vacancy, the person appointed to fill such vacancy shall hold office for the unexpired term in which the vacancy occurs. The first five members appointed to said board shall determine their respective terms by lot so that a term of office shall expire each succeeding year thereafter. Other qualifications, and salaries of members, shall be as provided by law; provided, however, that such members shall be so appointed that the board will not be composed of more than three members who are affiliated with the same political party or organization; provided, further, that each member shall devote his entire time to his duties of office and shall not hold any position of trust or profit, or engage in any other occupation or business, or serve on or under any committee of any political party or organization or candidate for office, and each member shall file with the Secretary of State, annually, a full, detailed and complete disclosure of his financial condition.

The State Board of Tax Audit and Appeals shall have appellate jurisdiction of individual appeals of all divisions of the administrative agency of the state carrying out the provisions of Section 3 of this article in order to insure that all taxes are administered according to law. Such individual appeals may be for the undervaluation and overvaluation and assessment of the appellant's property, or any other taxpayer's property. The board shall also have appellate jurisdiction of individual appeals of other divisions of state and local agencies related to license and excise taxation as may be provided by law. The board shall have the right to audit the state administration agency to ascertain instances of undervaluation or overvaluation of property to be taxed and publish its findings thereof. The legislative assembly may prescribe by law other duties to be performed by such board and may provide that minor appeals, as defined by law, may be adjudicated by a single board member in the county where the property is located, or the taxpaying citizen resides, or as the case may be.

COMMENT

The committee realizes the importance of a short document. The introduction to this report emphasized the committee's concern for brevity and clarity. But this proposed Section 7 creates a new protection for the Montana taxpayer, an independent tax appeal board. Because the provision provides a new right, the structure, function and jurisdiction of the board are spelled out in some detail.

The present section is proposed for a new Constitution because it establishes a guarantee never provided for Montana taxpayers. Under the present tax administration program, the same governmental bodies (County Boards of Equalization and State Board of Equalization) that establish revenue policies and procedures also sit in judgment on the implementation of those procedures. Overwhelming testimony to the committee indicates that the procedure does not guarantee an independent, non-partial, objective review of tax decisions. The Montana taxpayer needs some avenue of recourse, besides the tax administrator or the courts, to evaluate his tax treatment. The proposed sectien accomplishes that objective by establishing an independent review procedure.

The Constitution should not specify details of tax administration. Present Section 15 of Article XII of the Nontana Constitution creates an elaborate method of property tax administration for the state, and demonstrates the futility of including such detail in a Constitution. When the Constitution was written in 1889, property taxes were the sole source of revenue for the state. But like the framers of 1889, this convention cannot forsee all the changes in the state's revenue structure. The details of that revenue administration should be left to the legislature, which can evaluate changes and create the best structure to administer revenue programs.

> Section A. NO state debt shall be created unless authorized by a three-fifths vote of the members of both houses of the legislative assembly. State debt cannot be created to cover deficits incurred when appropriations exceed anticipated revenue during any budget period.

COMMENTS

This sectica replaces the present state debt limitation established by Article XIII, Section 2. That old section created a $100,000 debt limit for the state, with additional indebtedness as authorized by the electorate. The proposed section leaves the question of indebtedness entirely up to the legislature, requiring a three-fifths majority of the members-elect to create debt. The extraordinary majority requirement should insure careful consideration of any indebtedness proposal, and should prevent unnecessary programs.

The committee felt that some debt restriction should be placed on the legislature. A fixed dollar limit, like the present $100,000-ceiling, is unrealistic and only encourages circumvention.

The committee does not possess the ability to forecast the economic future and fiscal capacity of the state. The cossittee was concerned with the problems involved in establishing a limitation that fluctuates with property valuations or state revenues. It feels the propcsed provision will insure the viability of the Constitution for many generations.

The second sentence of this proposed section prevents the legislature from creating debt to balance the budget. While debt may be a viable tool in cases of catastrophy or extraordinary circumstances, the legislative assembly should not be free to thwart the "balance budget" intent of proposed Section 9.

Section 9. Appropriations by the legislative assembly shall not exceed anticipated revenues during any budget period.

COMMENTS

This proposed section is similar in effect to present Section 12 of Article XII. It requires the state to operate under a "balanced budget" philosophy, but establishes that doctrine in much simpler language. Although the state may have trouble operating in the black, since it can only estimate the amount of revenues coming in any budget period, this section requires the legislative assembly to stay within these estimated limits when it appropriates funds.

Section 10. The legislative assembly shall enact limits of indebtedness for subdivisions and districts of the stats.

COMMENTS

This proposed section leaves the question of local government indebtedness, and limits on that indebtedness, up to the legislative assembly. This broad grant of authority is utilized because of the uncertain nature of any fixed debt limitation.

The legislature should be free to encourage economic development in local government units. The history of the last 60 years indicates that the legislature has been frugal in empowering local government indebtedness. The proposed provisions restores that control. The proposed section would leave the legislature free, if it so decided, to pledge the full faith and credit of local government units to back indebtedness. Such a pledge should result in lover interest rates and a savings to the people of Montana.

Section 11. All money borrowed by or on behalf of the state, or any subdivision or district of the state, shall be used only for the purpose or purposes specified in the law authorizing the loan.

COMMENTS

This section is practically identical to Article XIII, Section 3. The section guarantees accountability and proper management of borrowed funds, and should prevent misuse or diversion of that money. .The section is self-explanatory and is an important guarantee for the people.

Section 12. The legislative assembly shall enact the necessary laws to insure strict accountability of all revenues received and money spent by the state, subdivisions and districts thereof.

COMMENTS

The proposed section, though broad in scope, covers the same ground as the present detailed sections 13 and 14 of Article XII. It also conveys the intent of "specific appropriations" required by Section 10. The importance of accountability for state revenues is not diminished--indeed, that rationale is given Constitutional status in this proposed section. But the details of accounting, procedures, deposits, cash flow, reporting requirements, etc., have to be left to the legislative assembly. The Constitution simply cannot anticipate changes in the accounting and monetary fields. The computerized techniques presently utilized by tha state were beyond the wildest dreams of the 1889 framers. The need for detailed and consolidated reporting information also was not anticipated. The present Constitutional provisions on deposits, cash flow and reporting are not adhered to.

The committee recommends that the legislature take immediate steps to establish unified accounting proceduresfor all governmental units in the state. Though statutory in nature, the committee feels the importance of such a program is essential to proper accounting and data functions.

Section 13. The legislative assembly shall provide for a unified investment program for public funds and prescribe the rules and regulations therefor, including the supervision of investment of surplus funds of all subdivisions and districts of the state. The separate existence and identity of each and every fund involved as a part of the unified investment program shall be strictly maintained. An audit of the investment program shall be conducted at least annually and submitted to the governor, legislative assembly and chief justice of the supreme court.

COMMENT

The proposed section on investments replaces all of Article XXI in the present Constitution. Most of the provisions in that article are obsolete--in fact, if the public school fund had not been added to the Montana Trust and Legacy Fund in 1938, the article would have no effect whatever. The proposed section stresses the inportance of a unified investment program for public funds. such a program has been sought in Montana since 1924, and has only recently been accomplished through Executive Reorganization. The committee feels that the importance of unity, professional treatment and supervision of public fund investments should be stressed at the Constitutional level. Because public money is such an important trust for the people of Montana, the investment program should be audited at least annually.

The sentence on separate identity of funds in the public fund investment program was added to insure proper distribution of interest to the individual funds. Although public funds should be invested as a unit to insure a larger return, the interest from that unified program should be distributed on a pro rata basis, depending on the size of the individual funds. The "separate fund" sentence should insure that distribution.

The regulation and limitation of the investment program, and the administrative structure of the investment program, is left up to the legislative assembly.

At least two restrictions on the investment program will remain in force in the Constitution. These provisions, in Article XI and The 'Enabling Act, deal with land grant money.

The legislature is best equipped to make decisions concerning investment opportunities for state money. The obsolete nature of Article XXI illustrates the futility of trying to prescribe an investment program and investment details at the Constitutional level. The scope of the legislature's supervision should also include surplus funds at the local level. Although the legislature may well leave the handling and investment of such funds in the hands of local governments, its supervisory powers will insure their careful handling and treatment,

> Section 14. A special levy may be made on livestock and agricultural commodities for the purpose of disease control and indemnification, predator control, livestock inspection and protection, agricultural inspection and protection, livestock and agricultural commodity research and promotion.

COMMENTS

The proposed language retains the intent of Section 9 regarding livestock mill levies, and expands the permissible list of industries and uses for such a statewide levy. The levies are not a pure earmark. They are more of a bookkeeping and accounting procedure.

The provision, in explicit terms similar to present Section 9, is no longer necessary. The uniformity clause has been removed from the proposed Article; and the statewide property tax limit has also been deleted. But the importance of agriculture to the Montana economy should not be underestimated--in fact, it should be emphasized.

The committee also thought it should encourage taxpayers who are willing to bear the burden of a tax to improve the economic future of their industry.

MINORITY PROPOSAL 1

BE IT PROPOSED:

That the following be substituted for Section 5 of the Majority Proposal entitled "Property Tax Exemptions":

> The property of the United States, the state, counties, cities, towns, school districts, municipal corporations, and public libraries may be exempt from taxation, but any private interest in such property may be taxed separately.
> Property used exclusively for fducational purposes; places for actual religious worship; hospitals and places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit; institutions of purely public charity, household goods and furniture, wearing apparel, and other personal property used by the owner for personal and domestic purposes; cash and accounts receivable; dwellings and personal property of totally serviceconnected disabled veterans; dwellings used for residential purposes; evidences of debt secured by mortgages of record upon real or personal property in the state of Montana; the stocks of any company or corporation when the property of such company or corporation represented by such stocks is within the state and has been taxed, may be exempt from taxation.
> The legislative assembly map authorize creation of special improvement districts for capital improvements, maintenance of capital improvements and the assessment of charges therefor, against tax exempt property directly benefited thereby.

COMMENTS

The minority report is in complete disagreement with all references in the rationale of the majority report stating that all property may be exempted from tax by the legislature. We have faith in the legislative process but are of the opinion that this is "opening the door too wide." In our opinion, as upheld by court decisions, only the items of property listed above are eligible to tax exemption by the legislative process.

We agree that it is easier to enforce collection of taxes on some property than it is on other property but cannot consider this as a sufficient reason for removal of this type of property from the tax rolls. The Internal Revenue Service has developed procedures for ferreting out income from cash transactions. We submit that the tax department of Montana should be able to develop adequate techniques despite the fact that local government authorities have been negligent for many years.

We also submit that tax equity requires that if certain income producing property is taxed, then all income producing property should be taxed. It is not equitable to tax $10,000 of equipment which produces income subject to income tax and at the same time eliminate $10,000 of investments (e.g. tax-exempt securities) the income of which is not subject to income taxes.

We also submit that if the legislature should acquiesce to pressures to eliminate stock and bond investments from property taxation because of the so-called problems of assessment a severe injustice will be imposed on lower income citizens to the benefit of more affluent citizens. We cannot imagine the delegates of the Convention condoning such an inequity.

RF justify the addition of the following items to the permissive list:

1) Household goods and furniture, wearing apparel, and other personal property used by the owner for personal and domestic purposes:

   a. Recommended by Delegate Felt proposal #161.

   b. Testimony received indicated that costs of collections are in many instances equal to tax received.

   C. Property does not produce income.

2) Cash and accounts receivable.

   a. Recommended by Delegate Felt proposal #161.

   b. Not necessarily income producing.

   c. We agree that the term accounts receivable is very broad but have confidence that the legislative assembly in its wisdom will develop legislation that will not violate the underlying principle that all income producing property should be subject to property tax if any income producing property is subject to property tax.

3) Dwelling and personal property of totally serviceconnected disabled veterans.

a. The committee had testimony that there are approximately 99,000 veterans of which approximately 387 would be eligible for this tax relief.

t. We submit that this tax exemption is certainly justified when the mental picture of what total disability is considered.

4) Dwellings used for residential purposes.

a. Dwellings do not produce income.

b. It is realized that the elimination of dwellings from the tax rolls could cause a terrific upheaval in revenues produced from property taxes on the local level. This is a decision which has been left to the judgment of the legislature by the permissive nature of this section.

5) Evidences of dett secured by mortgages of record upon real or personal property in the state of Montana.

a. Eliminates double taxation.

b. Contained in Article XII, Section 2, of current Constitution.

6) The stocks of any company or corporation when the property of such company or corporation represented by such stocks is within the state and has been taxed.

a. Eliminates double taxatior.

b. Contained in Article XII, Section 17, of current Constitution.

COMMITTEE ON REVENUE AND FINANCE

MINORITY PROPOSAL 2

BE IT PROPOSED:

That the following be substituted for Section 13 of the Majority Proposal entitled "Investment of Public Funds":

> The legislative assembly shall provide for a unified investment program for public funds and prescribe the rules and regulations therefor, including the supervision of investment of surplus funds of all subdivisions and districts of the state. The separate existence and identity of each and every fund involved as a part of the unified investment program shall be strictly maintained. With the exception of monies contributed by individuals to retirement funds, no public funds shall be invested in private corporate capital stock.

/s/ Maurice Driscoll

COMMENTS

We submit that criteria for investment of public trust funds should be more stringent than the criteria for investment of private funds.

We believe that priorities should be in this order:

1) Security.

2) Funds should be invested in Montana as much as possible.

3) Return on investment.

Much of the testimony presented indicated that emphasis was being placed on return on investment rather than security. As an example: "You don't find the big red apples next to the trunk of the tree--you find them near the end of the limb." We are opposed to gambling with state funds and taking a chance that the limb might break.

Testimony has been offered that the stock market will act as an offset to inflation. We offer that money invested at 5 3/4% for 12 years can double.

The following communication was received from a large organized group of citizens: "We confess a lack of expertise in suggesting adaquate safeguards in the Constitution to govern the legislature on drafting liberalized investment laws. We do see danger inherent in such liberalized laws and hope that committee deliberations and convention debate will develop 'behind the record' guidelines for the legislature to follow in liberalizing the investment laws regulating the investment of public funds."

We feel that the pressures exerted on the committee to permit investment in the stock market will be continued indefinitely unless our restriction is incorporated in the Constitution. Therefore, with a deep concern for the safety of present and future public trust funds, YE earnestly recommend that favorable consideration by the delegates be given to this minority report.

We also wish to bring to your attention that ownership of voting stock of a private corporation constitutes government ownership of private property--a form of socialism. We also question the propriety of the state voting the stock of a private corporation for a variety of obvious reasons. But foremost is the risk involved in trusting our state funds to the caprice of volatile market. It is with these considerations in mind that we reject the majority proposal and submit the above minority proposal.

To: MONTANA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

From: Bill of Rights Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The Bill of Rights Committee submits herewith a proposed new Declaration of Rights of the People of the State of Montana. The proposed article is intended to replace in its entirety Article III of the present Constitution. In doing so, the committee notes that not one of the traditional rights of that Declaration has been diminished; and, to meet the changing circumstances of contemporary life, new safeguards have been added where appropriate.

In its deliberations, the committee was careful to give consideration to all proposals concerning civil liberties. No proposal was adopted or rejected without considered deliberation. The committee is pleased to have reached near unanimity on such an important matter as the basic rights of an individual in a free society. There are no minority reports. Countervailing opinions were freely and fully aired. The issues on which there was some division are reflected in the comments and the roll call votes of Appendix D.

The committee appreciates the public involvement and concern with the rights questions facing it and thanks those who took the time to appear in person or write expressing their opinions on these matters. This testimony and the considered opinion of many delegates was most helpful in drafting this proposal. The committee also wishes to express its thanks to Rick Applegate, research analyst, Darlene Corbin, committee secretary, and George Paul and Michael Larum, student interns.

In presenting this proposed Declaration of Rights, the committee notes that the guidelines and protections for the exercise of liberty in a free society come not from government but from the people who create that government.

It is that spirit which has motivated this committee to insure for Montana's future, through this bill of rights, a more responsible government that is Constitutionally command never to forget that government is created solely for the welfare of the people so that the people can more fully enjoy the heritage of American liberty within the structure of that government.

Bearing this in mind, the committee commends this proposal to the convention with the hope that, whatever the outcome of the convention debates, the citizens of Montana will have a charter of civil liberties adequate for the foreseeable future. Surely no part of the Constitution being drafted is more important.

COMMITTEE PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE BILL OF RIGHTS COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on the Bill of Rights to read as follows:

PREAMBLE

We the people of Montana grateful to God for the quiet beauty of our state, the grandeur of our mountains, the vastness of our rolling plains, and desiring to improve the quality of life, equality of opportunity and to secure the blessings of liberty for this and future generations do ordain and establish this Constitution.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS

Section 1. POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY. All political power is vested in and derived from the people; all government of right originates with the people; is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole.

Section 2. SELF-GOVERNMENT. The people of the state have the exclusive right of governing themselves as a free, sovereign, and independent state. They may alter or abolish their Constitution and form of government whenever they may deem it necessary.

Section 3. INALIENABLE RIGHTS. All persons are born free and have certain inalienable rights which include the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, of enjoying and defending their lives and liberties, of acquiring, possessing and protecting property and of seeking their safety, health and happiness in all lawful ways. In enjoying these rights, the people recognize corresponding responsibilities.

Section 4. INDIVIDUAL DIGNITY. The dignity of the human being is inviolable. NO person shall be denied the equal protection of the law, nor be discriminated against in the exercise of his civil or political rights on account of race, color, sex, culture, social origin or condition, or political or religious ideas, by any person, firm, corporation, or institution; or by the state, its agencies or subdivisions.

Section 5. FREEDOM OF RELIGION. The state of Montana shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

Section 6. FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY. The people shall have the right peaceably to assemble, petition for redress or protest governmental action.

Section 7. FREEDOM OF SPEECH, EXPRESSION AND PRESS. No law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech or expression. Every person shall be free to speak or publish whatever he will on any subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty. In all suits and prosecutions for libel or slander the truth thereof may be given in evidence, and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the facts.

Section 8. RIGHT OF PARTICIPATION. The public shall have the right to expect governmental agencies to afford every feasible opportunity for citizen participation in the operation of the government prior to the final decision.

Section 4. RIGHT TO KNOW. No person shall be deprived of the right to examine documents or to observe the deliberations of all public bodies or agencies of state government and its subdivisions, except in cases in which the demand of individual privacy exceeds the merits of public disclosure.

Section 10. RIGHT OF PRIVACY. The right of privacy is essential to the well-being of a free society and shall not be infringed without the showing of a compelling state interest.

Section 11. SEARCHES AND SEIZURES. The people shall be secure in their persons, papers, homes and effects, from unreasonable searches and seizures and invasions of privacy, and no warrant to search any place, or seize any person or thing shall issue without describing the place to be searched, or the person or thing to be seized, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, reduced to writing.

Section 12. RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS. The right of any person to keep or bear arms in defense of his own home, person, and property, or in aid of the civil power when thereto legally summoned, shall not be called in question, but nothing herein contained shall be held to permit the carrying of concealed weapons.

Section 13. RIGHT TO SUFFRAGE. All elections shall be free and open, and no power, civil or military, shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage.

section 14. ADULT RIGHTS. Persons Eighteen (18) years of age are declared to be adults for all purposes and shall have the right to hold any public office in the state.

Section 15. RIGHTS OF PERSONS UNDER THE AGE OF MAJORITY. The rights of persons under the age of majority shall include, but not be limited to, all the fundamental rights of this article except where specifically precluded by laws which enhance the protection for such persons.

Section 16. 'IRE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE. Courts of justice shall be open to every person, and speedy remedy afforded for every injury of person, property, or character; no person shall be deprived of this full legal redress for injury incurred in employment for which another person may be liable except as to fellow employees and his immediate employer who hired him if such immediate employer provides coverage under the Workmen's Compensation Laws of this stare; and that right and justice shall be administered without sale, denial, or delay.

Section 17. DUE PROCESS OF LAW. tic person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

Section 18. NON-IMMUNITY FACE SUIT. The state and its subdivisions shall have no special immunity from suit. This provision shall apply only to causes of action arising after June 1, 1973.

Section 19. HABEAS CORPUS. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall never be suspended.

Section 20. INITIATION OF PROCEEDINGS. Criminal offenses of which courts inferior to the district courts have juricdiction shall be prosecuted by complaint. All criminal actions in district court, except those on appeal, shall be prosecuted by information, after examination and commitment by a magistrate, or after leave granted hy the court, or shall be prosecuted by indictment without such examination or commitment, or without such leave of the court. A grand jury shall consist of seven persons, of whom five must concur to find an indictment. A grand jury shall only be drawn and summoned when the district judge shall, in his discretion, consider it necessary, and shall so order.

Section 21. RAIL. All persons shall be bailable ty sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses, when the proof is evident or the presumption great.

Section 22. EXCESSIVE SANCTIONS. Excessive bail shall not be required, or excessive fines imposed, or cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

Section 23. DETENTION. No person shall be imprisoned for the purpose of securing his testimony in any criminal proceeding longer than may be necessary in order to take his deposition. If he can give security for his appearance at the time of trial, he shall be discharged upon giving the same; if he cannot give security, his deposition shall be taken in the manner prescribed by law, and in the presence of the accused and his counsel, or without their presence, if they shall fail to attend the examination after reasonable notice of the time and place thereof. Any deposition authorized by this section may be received as evidence on the trial, if the witness shall be dead or absent from the state.

Section 24. RIGHTS OF THE ACCUSED. In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to appear and defend in person and by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation-, to meet the witnesses against him face to face; to have process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county or district in which the offense is alleged to have been committed, subject to the right of the state to have a change of venue for any of the causes for which the defendant may obtain the same.

Section 25. SELF-INCRIMINATION AND DOUBLE JEOPARDY. NO person shall be compelled to testify against himself in a criminal proceeding, nor shall any person be twice Rut in jeopardy for the same offense previously tried in any jurisdiction.

Section 26. TRIAL BY JURY. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain irviolate, but in all cases and upon default of appearance, or by consent of the parties expressed in such manner as the law ray prescribe, a trial by jury may be waived, or a trial had by any less number of jurors than the number provided by law. In all civil actions two-thirds in number of the jury may render a verdict, and such verdict so rendered shall have the same force and effect as if all such jury concurred therein. In all criminal actions, the verdict shall be unanimous.

Section 27. IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT. No person shall be imprisoned for debt except in the manner prescribed by law, upon refusal to deliver up his estate for the benefit of his creditors, or in cases of tort, where there is strong presumption of fraud.

Section 28. RIGHTS OF THE CONVICTED. Laws for the punishment of crime shall be founded on the principles of prevention and reformation and full rights shall be automatically restored upon termination of state supervision for any offense against the state.

Section 29. EMINENT DOMAIN. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation to the full extent of the loss having teen first made to or 'paid into court for the owner. In the event of litigation, just compensation shall include necessary expenses of litigation to be awarded by the court when the private propnrty owner is the prevailing party.

Section 30. TREASON AND DESCENT OF ESTATES. Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it, or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort; no person shall be convicted of treason except on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on his confession in open court; no person shall be attainted of treason or felony by the legislative assembly; no conviction shall cause the loss of property to the relatives or heirs of the convicted. The estates of suicides shall descend or vest as in cases of natural death.

Section 31. EX POST FACTO, OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS AND IRREVOCABLE PRIVILEGES. No ex post facto law nor law impairing the obligation of contracts, or making any irrevocable grant of special privileges, franchises, or immunities, shall be passed by the legislative assembly.

Section 32. CIVILIAN CONTROL OF THE MILITARY. The military shall always be in strict subordination to the civil power; no soldier shall in time of peace be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, except in the manner prescribed by law.

Section 33. IMPORTATION OF ARMED PERSONS. No armed person or persons or armed body of men shall be brought into this state for the preservation of the peace, or the suppression of domestic violence, except upon the application of the legislative assembly, or of the governor when the legislative assembly cannot be convened.

Section 34. UNENUMERATED RIGHTS. The enumeration in this Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny, impair, or disparage others retained by the people.

COMMENTS ON COMMITTEE PROPOSAL

PREAMBLE

We the people of Montana grateful to God for the quiet beauty of our state, the grandeur of our mountains, the vastness of our rolling plains, and desiring to improve the quality of life, equality of opportunity and to secure the blessings of liberty for this and future generations do ordain and establish this Constitution.

COMMENTS

The Bill of Rights Committee felt that Montana is unique both in the beauty of the state and the strength of the individuals who were dedicated to establishing a state from a rich wilderness.

The paintings of Charles M. Russell captured the rugged individualism which was surrounded by unmatched scenery. This was described by John Steinbeck as the "grandeur" of the mountains in western Montana and "rolling grasslands" of eastern Montana. Grandeur was included in the Preamble, but the majority of the committee preferred the term "vastness of our rolling plains" to "richness of our rolling grasslands".

The "quiet beauty of our state" includes considerations of the land, air, and water of our state and describes the peacefulness that the people have always desired since the early inhabitants first shared a special relationship with the spirit of their Creator.

Because of the concern of those in the convention and the state that not mentioning "God" specifically would be unacceptable the committee voted unanimously to retain Him in the Preamble. Although the committee preferred the term "Spirit of Creation" or "Spirit of our Creator", it did not believe the emotional response raised would justify the change.

The final two phrases represent the reason for living under a Constitutional government which is intended to improve the quality of life and equality of opportunity. The committee urges that each individual should be given the same opportunity to develop to his full potential.

We believe this Preamble represents the essence of what we in Montana cherish in our surroundings and our highest ideals of improving the quality of our lives in a free society.

In drafting this Preamble; the committee used delegate proposals No's. 59, 67, 86, and 118.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS

Section 1. POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY. All political power is vested in and derived from the people; all government of right originates with the people; is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole.

COMMENTS

After some discussion, the committee decided unanimously to leave this statement of political philosophy as it was in the 1889 Constitution. Several re-drafts were attempted with unsatisfactory results. Although these re-drafts would have shortened the provision somewhat, it was suggested that they would leave out important concepts orpolitical philosophy. As it stands, this section contains the notion of popular sovereignty, announces that legitimate government is founded on the will of the people and provides that the sole end of government is the good of the whole.

The committee understands that this and other political philosophy provisions are not often immediately justiciable, yet believe that such provisions announce the principles upon which legitimate government rests thereby providing yardsticks for assessing the quality of governmental operation.

No delegate proposals were submitted on this provision.

Section 2. SELF-GOVERNMENT. The people of the state have the exclusive right of governing themselves as a free, sovereign, and independent state. They may alter or abolish their Constitution and form of government whenever they may deem it necessary.

COMMENTS

The committee decided with one dissenting vote that this section might be re-drafted to make it more readable without changing its essence. Accordingly, wordings which were believed redundant or excessive were deleted and complete sentence structure was employed where necessary. These revisions considerably shorten the provision without changing its meaning or intent. The principle as submitted states the right of Montanans to govern themselves and to alter or abolish their Constitution and form of government. No delegate proposals were submitted on this provision.

Section 3. INALIENABLE RIGHTS. All persons are born free and have certain inalienable rights which include the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, of enjoying and defending their lives and liberties, of acquiring, possessing and protecting property and of seeking their safety, health and happiness in all lawful ways. In enjoying these rights, the people recognize corresponding responsibilities.

COMMENTS

The committee proposes with two dissenting votes that the former Article III, section 3 be retained with a few subtantive changes. The committee struck language which was felt to be redundant. In addition, it is recommended that the right to pursue life's basic necessities be incorporated as a statement of principle. The intent of the committee on this point is not to create a substantive right for all for the necessities of life to be provided by the public treasury.

The committee heard considerable testimony, from low income and social services people alike, that the state's current public assistance programs are not meeting the genuine needs of low income people who, because of circumstances beyond their control, are unable to obtain basic necessities. Accordingly, it is hoped that the legislature will have occasion to review these programs and upgrade them where necessary to provide full necessities to those in genuine need and to curb whatever abuses may exist in the programs.

What was attempted in this part of the proposed section was a statement of the principle that all persons have the inalienable right to pursue the basic necessities of life--that there can be no right to life apart from the possibility of existence.

The other inalienable rights were included with only minor changes in style for purposes of clarity. An additional right, the right of seeking health was incorporated in recognition of the fact that a right to life without health is a sorry proposition.

The final sentence of this section is new having been derived from delegate proposal No. 116. Testimony was received both favoring and opposing the inclusion of a statement of corresponding responsibilities in the declaration of rights. Some expressed the feeling that many were accepting rights without recognizing that they create obligations. Others were adamant that a declaration of rights should contain just that: the rights of persons against governmental abuses and the rigbts of minorities against the power of unchecked majorities. The committee felt that the inclusion of such a statement does not infringe or impair the rights granted in the declaration of rights but only accords a tone of responsibility to their exercise.

A number of delegate proposals were rejected in the drafting of this section. Delegate proposal No. 45 stipulated a substantive right to the necessities of life. No. 93 proposed an inalienable right to collectively bargain. The committee felt that the issue of collective bargaining--as well as its counterpart the right to work--were properly statutory matters.

Section 4. INDIVIDUAL DIGNITY. The dignity of the human being is inviolable. No person shall be denied the equal protection of the laws, nor be discriminated against in the exercise of his civil or political rights on account of race, color, sex, culture, social origin or condition, or political or religious ideas, by any person, firm, corporation, or institution; or by the state, its agencies or subdivision.

COMMENTS

The committee unanimously adopted this section with the intent of providing a Constitutional impetus for the eradication of public and private discriminations based on race, color, sex, culture, social origin or condition, or political or religious ideas. The provision, quite similar to that of the Puerto Rico declaration of rights is aimed at prohibiting private as well as public discriminations in civil and political rights.

Considerable testimony was heard concerning the need to include sex in any equal protection or freedom from discrimination provisions. The committee felt that such inclusion was eminently proper and saw no reason for the state to wait for the adoption of the federal Equal Rights Amendment, an amendment which would not explicitly provide as much protection as this provision.

The word culture was incorporated specifically to cover groups whose cultural base is distinct from mainstream Montana, especially the American Indians. "Social origin or condition" was included to cover discriminations based on status of income and standard of living.

Some fears were expressed that the wording "political or religious ideas" would permit persons who supported right to work in principle to avoid union membership. Such is certainly not the intent of the committee. The wording was incorporated to prohibit public and private concerns discriminating against persons because of their political or religious beliefs.

The wording of this section was derived almost verbatim from Delegate Proposal No. 61. The committee felt that this proposal incorporated all the features of all the Delegate Proposals (No. 's 10, 32, 50 and 51) on the subjects of equal protection of the laws and the freedom from discrimination. The committee is well aware that any broad proposal on these subjects will require considerable statutory embellishment. It is hoped that the legislature will enact statutes to promote effective eradication of the discriminations prohibited by this section. The considerable support for and lack of opposition to this provision indicates its import and advisability.

Section 5. FREEDOM OF RELIGION. The state of Montana shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

COMMENTS

The committee decided unanimously to substitute the concise wording of the freedom of religion clause of the federal First Amendment. Much testimony was heard on this provision, most of it on the subject of public aid to church-related schools. The committee felt that this issue should be dealt with, as it was, by the Education and Public Lands Committee and that the provision incorporated into the Declaration of Rights should restrict itself to guaranteeing the free exercise of religion and prohibiting the establishment of any religion.

The committee felt especially strong about removing the anti-Mormon biases reflected in the previous wording of Article III, section 4. Beyond that, the committee noted that since the religions which historically were persecuted were those alleged to violate or threaten the good order, peace and safety of the state, such passages were of dubious merit in a statement of religious liberty. Accordingly, both--of considerable length--were deleted. What remains is the tradition-ridden guarantee of religious liberty adopted by the first US Congress in 1789 as part of the federal Bill of Rights.

Realizing the legal, social and political problems of the church-state area are exceedingly complex, it is not urged that this provision will simplify their resolution. However, it will certainly not make the understanding of these compelling and sometimes paradoxical concerns more difficult.

Stction 6. FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY. The people shall have the right peaceably to assemble, petition for redress or to protest governmental action.

COMMENTS

The committee unanimously recommended that the former Article III, section 26 be adopted with only one stylistic change. The basic right to assemble for redress of grievances by petition or remonstrance remains unchanged. The wording was tightened up a little and the phrase "protest governmental action" was substituted for the phrasing "apply to those invested with the powers of government for redress of grievances..by remonstrance." In doing so, the committee notes the paramount position of the right and the invaluable function its responsible exercise plays in a democratic society.

Section 7. FREEDOM OF SPEECH, EXPRESSION AND PRESS. No law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech or expression. Every person shall be free to speak or publish whatever he will on any Subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty. In all suits and prosecutions for libel or Slander the truth thereof may be given in evidence: and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the facts.

COMMENTS

The committee unanimously proposes thi adoption of former Article III, Section 10 with one substantive change. The freedom Of speech is extended, in line with federal decisions under the First Amendment, to cover the freedom of expression. Hopefully, this extension will provide impetus to the courts in Montana to rule on various forms of expression similar to the spoken word and the ways in which one expresses his unique personality in an effort to re-balance the general backseat Status of States in the safeguarding of civil liberties. The committee wishes to stress the primacy of these guarantees in the hope that their enforcement will not continue merely in the wake of the federal case lau.

Other minor changes made in the section were merely stylistic in nature except for the inclusion of the word "slander" to provide protection against abuses of the free speech and press guarantees in cases of spoken as well as written word. The committee retained tha established principle that in libel trials the jury shall decide the law and the facts on the theory that removal of this clause might be construed as the denial of a right. The principle is continued with the note that in cases of libel it is necessary for the prosecutor to convince both the court and the jury before the free speech and press protections are overridden (Harrington v. Butte Miners Co. Et. Al., 4e Mont. 550, 554, 1139 p. 451).

Section 8. HIGH? OF PARTICIPATION. The public shall have the right to expect governmental agencies to afford every feasible opportunity for citizen participation in the operation of the government prior to the final decision.

COMMENTS

The committee unanimously adopted this section in response to the increased public concern and literature about citizen participation in the decision-making processes of government. The provision is in Fart a Constitutional Sermon designed to Serve notice to agencies of government that the citizens of the state will expect to participate in agency decisions prior to the time the agency makes up its mind. Tn part, it is also a commitment at the level of fundamental law to seek structures, rules and procedures that maximize the access of citizens to the decision-making institutions of state government. The committee believes that this is eminently proper and that it will have a salutary effect not only on the quality of the final decisions, but more important, on the deliberative and political capabilities of the citizenry. It is hoped that this provision will play a role in reversing the dissatisfactions increasingly expressed regarding bureaucratic authority insulated from public scrutiny and participation. The wording of the provision is derived from Relegate Proposal NO. 38.

> Section 9. RIGHT TO KNOW. No person shall be deprived of the right to examine documents or to observe the deliberations of all public bodies or agencies of state government andits subdivisions, except in cases in which the demands of individual privacy exceeds the merits of public disclosure.

COMMENTS

The committee, with two dissenting votes, and after considerable reflection, adopted this provision explicitly establishing a public right to know. In the main, the provision is from Delegate Proposal No. 57. It is a companion to the preceding right of participation. Both arise out of the increasing concern of citizens and commentators alike that government's sheer bigness threatens the effective exercise of citizenship. The committee notes this concern and believes that one step which can be taken to change this situation is to Constitutionally presume the openness of government documents and operations. The provision stipulates that persons have the rights to examine governmental documents and the deliberations of all public bodies or agencies except to the extent that the demands of individual privacy outweigh the needs of the public right of disclosure. The provision applies to state government and its subdivisions. The committee intends by this provision that the deliberation and resolution of all public matters must be subject to public scrutiny. It is urged that this is especially the case in a democratic society wherein the resolution of increasingly complex questions leads to the establishment of a complex and bureaucratic system of administrative agencies. The test of a democratic society is to establish full citizen access in the face of this challenge.

The committee approvingly cites section 82-3401 of the Revised Codes of Montana, 1947, which provides: "It is the intent of this act (the open meeting law) that actions and deliberations of all public agencies shall be conducted openly. The people of the state do not wish to abdicate their sovereignty to the agencies which serve them..."

The committee, during its deliterations on this provision, struck the word public'* from the phrase "to examine (public) documents." This was done to avoid tying the viability of this provision to the 7695 legislative efforts to define public and private writings. Sections 2 and 3 of Title 93, Chapter 1001 of the Revised Codes of Montana, 1947, define these two classes of writings. Broad categories of uhat constitute public writings are stipulated in section 2. Section 3 proclaims that all other writings are private. The committee admits that this list of public writings is admirably broad; however, using this type of statutory construction is dangerous when one is attempting to establish a public right to know. Judging from the example of federal and state statutes on the matter, it is better to stipulate the exclusions rather than the inclusions. To do otherwise is to risk losing the right to examine a document because it does not fit statutory categories as a public document.

The committee intends by this provision that the right to know not be absolute. The right of individual privacy is to be fully respected in any statutory embellishment of the provision as well as in the court decisions that will interpret it. To the extent that a violation of individual privacy outweighs the public right to know, the right to know does not apply. To clearly establish this point, the committee stipulated in the provision that the right to know is subject to the demands of individual privacy.

The committee commends this provision to the Convention as a long step forward in assuring the openness in government. By creating an atmosphere of openness in government, the committee believes that confidence in government will increase and governmental operation will be facilitated. Such a provision, far from limiting the effectiveness of governmental operation, establishes the prerequisite to the effective exercise of citizenship in a democratic society.

Section 10. RIGHT OF PRIVACY. The right of privacy is essential to the well-being of a free society and shall not be infringed without the showing of a compelling state interest.

COMMENTS

The committee unanimously adopted this section--similar to Delegate Proposal No. 33--in order to guarantee the right of privacy. What it accomplishes is the elevation of the judicially-announced right of privacy to explicit Constitutional status. The right has been guaranteed in case law at the federal level [Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U. S. 479 (1965)] and in Montana [State v. Brecht, 28 St. Rep. 468, 473 (May, 1971)]. The committee believes the Constitution should specify that the only circumstance in which the right of privacy may be infringed is following the showing of a compelling state interest. This is in response to the increasing concern expressed nationwide that the sphere of individual privacy is in danger of eclipse in an advanced tschnolcgical society. The point of this provision is not to prohibit all invasions of privacy but to require that no invasion of privacy should occur until and unless a compelling state interest has been established.

The committee proposed a broad provision in this area to permit flexibility to the courts in resolving the tensions between public interests and privacy. It is hoped that the legislature will have occasion to provide additional protections for the right of privacy in explicit areas where safeguards are required. An example of a potential legislative subject matter can be seen in Delegate Proposal No. 124 which prohibited requiring submission to a lie detector or similar test as a condition of employment.

> Section 11. SEARCHES AND SEIZURES. The people shall be secure in their persons, papers, homes and affects, from unreasonable searches and seizures and invasions of privacy, and no warrant to search any place, or seize any person or thing shall issue without describing the place to be searched, or the person or thing to be seized, nor without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, reduced to writing.

COMMENTS

The committee unanimously recommends the adoption of Article III, section 7 with only one substantive change. The phrase "invasions of privacy" was included to apply the traditional safeguards accompanying searches and seizures to any invasions of privacy. This section is the procedural companion of substantive section 10 of this final draft. They stipulate that even after the showing of a compelling state interest the state must abide by certain procedural guidelines.

The committee had incorporated into the tentative rough draft safeguards for wiretapping, electronic surveillance and other means of communications interceptions. After hearing further testimony, the committee decided to delete any reference to interceptions of communications. The committee does not wish to authorize, explicitly or implicitly, the interception of communications by state officials. The committee notes that no testimony was offered alleging any need for wiretap authority at the state level; nor were there any crimes stipulated which would justify an explicit or implicit grant of such authority to any state official. In addition, it is noted that federal officials already have the authority to wiretap for a number of serious offenses. Accordingly, the committee relieves that the privacy of communications should remain inviolate "from state-level interceptions."

The committee is aware that the legislature is empowered by the Federal Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 to grant wiretap authority to state officials. It is noted that any such legislative enactment could require, under this and the preceding proposed provision, the showing of a compelling state interest. The committee, seeing the immediate potential abuses of wiretap authority at the state level, believes this is only proper.

Delegate Proposal No. 14 was rejected in part as an implicit grant of communications interceptions authority.

Section 12. RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS. The right of any person to keep or bear arms in defense of his own home, person, and property, or in aid of the civil power when thereto legally summoned, shall not be called in question, but nothing herein contained shall be held to permit the carrying of concealed weapons.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously that the Montana provision guaranteeing the right to keep and bear arms remain as is. In doing so, it is noted that the Montana provision goes beyond the Federal Second Amendment in that it guarantees an individual right to keep and bear arms. From some of the testimony received, it was apparent that many were unaware that the Federal Constitution stipulates only a collective right to keep and bear arms, and explicitly predicates that right on the maintenance of a well-regulated military.

Testimony was heard in favor of guaranteeing the right to possess and bear arms without registration, license, or tax. The committee notes that the statutory efforts to regulate the possession of firearms have been at the federal level and are, therefore, not subject to state Constitutional provisions. In addition, it is urged--and requires no citation--that the right to bear arms is subject to the police power of the state. Any such regulation must, of course, stand in some relation to the public good and must not violate due process or equal protection of the laws.

Delegate Proposal NO. 4 was rejected as a lengthy provision that would have frozen into the Constitution without any state precedent a good number of matters best dealt with at the more flexible statutory level. As proposed, the Montana provision on the right to keep and bear arms remains one of the very strongest in the nation.

Section 13. RIGHT TO SUFFRAGE. All elections shall be free and open, and no power, civil or military, shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage.

COMMENTS

The committee felt that this section should be left as is, a guarantee that the right of suffrage shall not be interfered with and that elections shall be free and open. Accordingly the provision as proposed is the verbatim wording of Article III, section 5 of the present Montana Constitution. The provision is supplemented, but not replaced by, the proposals of the General Government Committee on suffrage and elections. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Secticn 14. ADULT RIGHTS. Perscns eighteen (18) years of age are declared to be adults for all purposes and shall have the right tc hcld ary public cffice in the state.

COMMENTS

The committee apprcved, with cne dissenting vote, this new provisicn which would declare eighteen year clds to be adults for all purposes. The prcvision further stipulates that eighteen year olds shall have the right tc hcld any public cffice in the state. The ccrmittee believes that the admirable steps taken by the federal government in adopting the Twenty-sixth Amendment and by the Montana legislature in ratifying it shculd be extended tc their lcgical conclusicn. What the secticn provides is that all adults can vote and that any persen eligible to vote is cf sufficient age tc seek election to any public cffice. The committee is well-aware that there will prcbably be few eighteen years olds running fcr the major offices cf state government. Still, it is urged that should an eighteen year cld be of the inclinaticn and capability to run fcr such cffice, he cught nct to be obstructed frcm presenting himself before the electcrate as a candidate: and, if he can secure the vctes necessary fcr election, he cught not tc be denied the office because cf his age. The pcint cf the prcvisicn is that the electcrate can and sbculd be able tc choose to elect any adult it wishes, regardless cf his age. Certainly, if the electcrate would support an adult of eighteen years fcr an office, an arbitrary age requirement such as the Constitution and statutes contain, should not deny him the cffice.

The committee commends this prcvisicn tc the convertien as the extension of full rights cf participatien in public affairs to all adults. This provision was introduced as Delegate Prcposal No. 13.

Section 15. RIGHTS CF PERSCNS UNDER THE AGE CF MAJCRITY. The rights of persons under the age of majcrity shall include, but nct be limited to, all the fundamental rights cf this article except where specifically precluded by laws which enhance the prctectien for such perscns.

COMMENTS

The committee adopted, with cre dissenting vote, this statement explicitly recognizing that perscns under the age cf majority have all the fundamental rights cf the Declaratien cf Rights. The cnly exceptions permitted tc this recognitien are in cases in which rights are infringed by laws designed and cperating to enhance the protection for such persons. The ccmmittee took this action in recognitien of the fact that ycung pecple have nct been held tc possess basic civil rights. Although it has been held that they are 'perscns' under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, the Supreme Ccurt has not ruled in their favcr under the equal protection clause of that same amendment. What this means is that persons under the age of majority have been accorded certain specific rights which are felt to be a part of due process. However, the broad outline of the kinds of rights young people possess does not yet exist. This is the crux of the committee proposal: to recognize that persons under the age of majority have the same protections from governmental and majoritarian abuses as do adults. In such cases where the protection of the special status of minors demands it, exceptions can be made on clear showing that such protection is being enhanced.

This provision was taken, in part, from Delegate Proposals No's. 65 and 88.

> Section 11. THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE. Courts of justice shall be open to every person, and speedy remedy afforded for every injury of person, property, or character; no person shall be deprived of this full legal redress for injury incurred in employment for which another person may be liable Except as to fellow employees and his immediate employer who hired him if such immediate employer provides coverage under the Workmen's Compensation laws of this state: and that right and justice shall be administered without sale, denial, or delay.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain this section with one addition. The provision as it stands in the present Constitution guarantees justice and a speedy remedy for all without sale, denial or delay. The committee felt, in light of a recent interpretation of the Workmen's Compensation law, that this remedy needed to be explicitly guaranteed to persons who may be employed by one covered by Workmen's Compensation to work on the facilities of another. Under Montana law, as announced in the recent decision of Ashcraft v. Montana Power Co., the employee has no redress against third parties for injuries caused by them if his immediate employer is covered under the Workmen's Compensation Law. The committee feels that this violates the spirit of the guarantee of a speedy remedy for all injuries of person, property or character. It is this specific denial-and this one only--that the committee intends to alter with the following additional wording: "no person shall be deprived of this full legal redress for injury incurred in employment for which another person may be liable except as to fellow employees and his immediate employer who hired him if such immediate employer provides coverage under the Workmen's Compensation Laws of this state." In other words the committee wants to insure that the Workmen's Compensation Laws of the state will be used for their original purpose--to provide compensation to injured workmen--rather than to deprive an injured worker of redress against negligent third parties (beyond his employer and fellow employees) because his immediate employer is covered by Workmen's Compensation. The committee believes that clarifying this remedy would have a salutary effect on the conscientiousness of persons who may contract out work to be done on their premises. To permit no remedy against third parties in cases where the employer is covered by Workmen's Compensation is to encourage persons with rundown premises to contract out work without improving the quality of the premises. The committee urges that this is an abuse of the Workmen's Compensation Law and constitutes a mis-application of that law to protect persons who are negligent.

The committee commends this Provision to the convention with the belief that it is an important, if technical, aspect of the administration of justice.

Section 17. DUE PROCESS OF LAW. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

COMMENTS

The committee felt that the tradition-ridden phrasing of the due Process of law clause should remain as is. Accordingly, the wording of Article III, section 27 is incorporated verbatim in this proposal. The committee received no suggestion for change of this section.

Section 18. NON-IMMUNITY FROM SUIT. The state and its subdivisions shall have no special immunity from suit. This Provision shall apply only to causes of action arising after June 1, 1973.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to adopt this section abolishing the archaic doctrine of sovereign immunity. In doing so, the committee responds to increasing citizen concern and the writing of legal scholars to the effect that the doctrine no longer has a rational justification in law. The committee notes that a clear trend has emerged nationwide to abolish the doctrine--a clear indication that they can no longer find a justification for its continued operation.

Briefly, the doctrine of sovereign immunity bars tort suits against the state for negligent acts by its officials and employees. The committee finds this reasoning repugnant to the fundamental premise of the American justice: all parties should receive fair and just redress whether the injuring party is a private citizen or a governmental agency. The committee believes that just as the government administers a system of justice between private parties it should administer the system when the government itself is alleged to have committed an injustice. The committee notes that private firms are liable for the negligence of their employees and points out this fact to indicate the inconsistency of the state's position in the system of tort law. It is the belief of the committee that this proposed provision rectifies this inconsistency.

The committee cites with approval the recent Colorado decision in which that state's highest court abolished the doctrine. In responding to the old justification for sovereign immunity--that "the King can do no wrong"--the court said: "The monarchial philosophies invented to solve the marital problems of Henry VIII are not sufficient justification for the denial of the right of recovery against the government in today's society. Assuming that there was sovereign immunity of the Kings of England, our forebears won the Revolutionary War to rid themselves of such sovereign prerogative." (Evans v. Board of County Commissioners, (Colo., 482 P2d 968, 969 (1971): See also companion cases ayainst the state and a school district.)

Under current Montana law, governmental agencies are liable only to the extent of the insurance coverage they carry. This leaves the decision as to the amount of coverage to be purchased with the agency. What this means is that an agency can effectively limit the actions brought against it. The committee feels that this is entirely too discretionary a situation when individual rights are at stake. Since adequate insurance can be obtained and can be budgeted in advance, agencies should have such coverage. This will insure that they are able to pay the justified claims made against them and that such claims will not be limited by inadequate insurance coverage.

The committee is well-aware that implementation of this provision could cause some difficulties if done without permitting affected agencies to upgrade their currently inadequate coverage. Accordingly, it is recommended that this provision act be retrospective in its application; that, in order to permit agencies time to obtain adequate insurance coverage as provided by legislative appropriation, it shall not be effective until June 1, 1973; and that it shall be effective only to causes of action arising after that date. The committee commends this provision to the convention with the belief that its adoption will insure that redress for wrongs will he administered on behalf of and against all parties, governmental as well as private. The wording of the provision is similar in purpose to delegate proposal 30.

Section 19. HABEAS CORPUS. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall never be suspended.

COMMENTS

The committee believes that this most basic of procedural rights requires complete protection. Accordingly, the proposal provides that the writ of habeas corpus--the right to test the legitimacy of one's detention--ought never to be suspended. The committee is aware that a serious rebellion or invasion could lead to a federal suspension of the writ. Hcwever, it is urged that the state cf Mcntana shculd nct suspend the writ at the state level without a problem Cf such magnitude as torequire federal action. It seems plain that the federal government could be ccunted upon to assist in keeping the state ccurts cpen t c review any habeas corpus petitions submitted even in a statewide emergency.

The committee notes that nine states have similar provisions that guarantee that the writ shall never be suspended. The importance of the writ can be seen in Mcntana history. In 1914, when the Governor proclaimed a state cf insurrection in Silver Bow county, the military closed down the ccurts in that county and arrested persons uithcut warrant cr charge, held them uithcut bail to he tried uithcut a jury befcre a military tribunal. Some of thcse detained used the writ of habeas ccrpus tc gccd effect, securing an order that the military re-open the ccurts in Silver Bow Ccunty. (In re Mc Donald, 49 Mcntana 454, 143 p. 947 (1914)). The ccmmittee cites this as an example cf the value cf this important prccedural safeguard precisely in times of stress.

> Secticn 20. INITIATICN CF PRCCEEDINGS. Criminal offenses of which ccurtc inferior tc the district courts have jurisdicticn shall be prosecuted by ccmplaint. All criminal actions in district court, except thcse on appeal, shall be prosecuted by infcrmaticn, after examinaticn and commitment by a sagistrate, cr after leave granted by the ccurt, cr shall be prosecuted by indictment without such exaainaticc cr ccmmitment, or uithcut such leave cf the court. A grand jury shall consist of seven perscns, cf whom five must ccncur tc find an indictment. A grand jury shall cnly be drawn and summcned when the district judge shall, in his discretion, consider it necessary, and shall sc crder.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously that this secticn which stipulates the method of initiatirg criminal proceedings should remain as is with one minor change. The phrase "justice's courts and municipal and cther ccurts" was deleted as unnecessary and redundant wording. The remainder of the section is the verbatim rendering of the Article III, section 8 prcviding fcr prosecuticns by complaint, infcrnaticn and indictment. It is noted that these fixed aspects of the initiaticn cf proceedings are part of the basic procedural rights framewcrk established to maintain the accusatorial nature of the system cf criminal justice. No delegate proposals were received on this provisicr.

> Section 21. BAII. All persons shall be bailable ty sufficient sureties, except fcr capital cffenses, when the proof is evident or the presumpticn great.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain this section unchanged. As it stands, the section announces that all persons are bailable except in certain capital offenses. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 22. EXCESSIVE SANCTIONS. Excessive bail shall not be required, or excessive fines imposed, or cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously that this section be retained unchanged. It is thought that the section provides the judiciary and the legislature adequate flexibility to apply the principle that there shall not be excessive bail, excessive fines or cruel and unusual punishments. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 23. DETENTION. No person shall be imprisoned for the purpose of securing his testimony in any criminal proceeding longer than may be necessary in order to take his deposition. If he can give security for his appearance at the time of trial, he shall be discharged upon giving the same; if he cannot give security, his deposition shall be taken in the manner prescribed by law, and in the presence of the accused and his counsel, or without their presence, if they shall fail to attend the examination after reasonable notice of the time and place thereof. Any deposition authorized by this section may be received as evidence on the trial, if the witness shall be dead or absent from the state.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain the former Article III, section 17 unchanged. The provision prohibits unreasonable detention of witnesses and prescribes in detail the procedure for securing testimony in the event the witness can not be procured for the trial. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 24. RIGHTS OF THE ACCUSED. In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to appear and defend in person and by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation; to meet the witnesses against him face to face; to have process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county or district in which the offense is alleged to have been committed, subject to the right of the state to have a change of venue for any of the causes for which the defendant may obtain the same.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain the former Article III, section 16 unchanged. The committee felt it was an admirable statement of the fundamental procedural rights of an accused. NO delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 25. SELF-INCRIMINATION AND DOUBLE JEOPARDY. No person shall be compelled to testify against himself in a criminal proceeding, nor shall any person be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense previously tried in any jurisdiction.

COMMENTS

The committee recommends the adoption of the former Article III, section 16 with one substantive change. It is noted that the "two sovereignties rule" is still in effect at the federal level. In recent years, the rule which permits prosecutions by different jurisdictions for the same offense arising from the same set of criminal facts, has come under scrutiny and criticism. The provision recommended by this committee would Forbidit the state from following the prosecution of another jurisdiction for the same offense and criminal facts. The committee is well-aware that the state Constitution cannot limit the federal government in this practice. However, as the committee believes that subsequent prosecutions as those described above are a violation of the protection against double jeopardy, it is hoped that the federal government and the state can cooperate in cases involving violations of the laws of both jurisdictions. In this way, a person accused of a crime will be placed in jeopardy only once in accordance with long-established principles.

Delegate proposals No's 88 and 124 were rejected. It was felt that #88, which extended the self-incrimination prohibition to any kind of evidence, was unworkable and might indirectly invalidate the implied consent law. Proposal #124 prohibited lie detector and other self-incriminating tests for employment. The committee felt that the particulars of this proposal were properly statutory matters and, along with a host of other privacy matters should be dealt with by the legislature. It was also felt that the complementary protection of the right of Privacy in section 15 of this proposal would offer protection against privacy invasions made as a condition of employment.

Section 26. TRIAL BY JURY. The right of trial by jury shall be secured to all, and remain inviolate, but in all cases and upon default of appearance, or by consent of the parties expressed in such manner as the law may prescribe, a trial by jury may be waived, or a trial had by any less number of jurors than the number provided by law. In all civil actions two-thirds in number of the jury may render a verdict, and such verdict SO rendered shall have the same force and effect as if all such jury concurred therein. In all criminal actions, the verdict shall be unanimous.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to make some changes in the section on trial by jury. The first of these permits the defendant to waive a jury trial in felony cases as well as civil and misdemeanor cases. The committee felt that expanding the choice of a defendant to waive a jury trial to include felony cases, the defendant could decide with the aid of his attorney whether to try his case before a jury or the judge sitting alone. The defendant may well desire to eliminate the time incarcerated while waiting for the next jury term or may feel in certain instances that his chances of fairly presenting his case are better without a jury.

The committee also felt that it was essential to strengthen the presumption of innocence in all criminal actions by requiring a unanimous verdict for misdemeanors as well as felonies. It is urged by the committee that since guilt must be clearly established in all criminal cases, there should be no distinction between the number of jurors in agreement required to convict of a misdemeanor or a felony. If guilt is clearly established, it is believed that the jury will be able to agree to convict. If guilt is not established, and several jurors cannot agree, it is a long established principle of justice that the accused ought not to be convicted. The loss of livelihood and lifetime criminal record occasioned by a criminal conviction are too damaging to permit less than a unanimous verdict.

The remainder of the section is proposed without change.

Section 11. IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT. No person shall be imprisoned for debt except in the manner prescribed by law. upon refusal to deliver up his estate for the benefit of his creditors, or in cases of tort, where there is strong presumption of fraud.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain former Article III, section 12 unchanged. It was felt that the provision is an adequate safeguard for the right of one in debt to be free from imprisonment. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 28. RIGHTS OF THE CONVICTED. Laws for the punishment of crime shall be founded on the principles of prevention and reformation and full rights shall be automatically restored upon termination of state supervision for any offense against the state.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously tc adopt this revisicn cf former Article III, secticn 24. In dcing cc, the ccmmittee reccm-mends that cnce a person whc has been ccnvicted has served his sentence and is no lcnger under state supervisicn, he shculd be entitled tc the restcration cf all civil and pclitical rights, including the right to vcte, hold public cffice, and enter occupaticns which require state licensing. The ccmmittee believes that this is eminently proper and that. the paramcunt ccncerns of preventicn and reformation cannct be realized unless the ex-ccnvict can readily mcve back irtc scciety as an equal par-ticipant in community affairs. Surely tc rehabilitate cne and attempt to insure that he has the cppcrtunity tc become a full member of the community requires that he be restored the same riqhts, privileges and immunities as other citizens. This provi-sicn dces not speak to the riqhts cf the incarcerated while they are in prison as did delegate prcpcsal #98. It is nct meant in any way tc preclude them having all rights except those necessar-ily denied as a ccndition of their incarceraticr.

The committee also deleted reference tc capital punishment. The reference tc capital punishment is rct necessary as it merely grants the legislature the power to dc scmething it can do any-way. To delete this reference has no effect cn the status cf cap-ital punishment in Montana; it remains in effect in thcse instances which the legislature prcvides. The committee rejected delegate proposal a3 which would have abclished capital punish-ment. The committee felt the matter shculd be left up tc the legislature.

> Section 29. EMINENT DOMAIN. Private prcperty shall not be taken or damaged fcr public use uithcut just ccmpensation to the full extent cf the loss having been first made to or paid into court for the cwner. In the event of litigaticn, just ccmpensation shall include necessary expenses cf litigaticn tc be awarded by the ccurt when the privatf property cwner is the prevailing party.

COMMENTS

The committee unanimously approved substartive changes in the eminent domain secticn. The thrust cf the ccmmittee effort was tc assure that full and just ccmpensation be made in all emi-nent domain actions. Without it, scme cf the ccsts of an eminent domain acticn'fall where they do nct belcng--cn the person whose property is beirg ccndemned.

In order to give substance tc the citizen's effort tc chal-lenge the ccmpensation figure of the ccndemncr, the last sentence of this provision was added. Those testifying in oppcsition to the committee's original eminent dcmain propcsal agreed that this sentence, which awards necessary expenses of litigation to the private property owner when he is the prevailing party, is just. The committee intends by necessary expenses of litigation all costs including appraiser fees, attorney fees and court costs. It is felt that this stipulation will produce a climate in which the condemnor's offer for compensation will more adequately reflect the compensation to which a property owner is entitled. The property owner will have a chance to collect the expenses he incurs in challenging the condemnor's decision. In addition, it will redress the imbalance between the vast resources brought to bear by the state and those available to the individual property owner in contested cases. The committee recommends this section to the convention as insurance that the compensation to the private property owner will in fact be just. Delegate proposal #75 was amended to accomplish this provision.

Section 30. TREASON AND DESCENT OF ESTATES. Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it, or in adhering to is enemies, giving them aid and comfort; no person shall be convicted of treason except on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on his confession in open court; no person shall be attainted of treason or felony by the legislative assembly; no conviction shall cause the loss of property to the relatives or heirs of the convicted. The estates of suicides shall descend or vest as in cases of natural death.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain the former Article III, section 9 with minor stylistic changes. The limitations on treason prosecutions were retained in their tradition-rooted language verbatim. The provision on "corruption of blood" was replaced with wording expressing the same point: "no conviction shall cause the loss of property to the relatives or heirs of the convicted". The provision on the descent of the estates of suicides was revised for clarity. NO delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 31. EX POST FACTO, OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS AND IRREVOCABLE PRIVILEGES. No ex post facto law nor law impairing the obligation of contracts, or making any irrevocable grant of special privileges, franchises, or immunities, shall he passed by the legislative assembly.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain the former Article III, section 11 unchanged. The protections against ex post facto laws, laws impairing the obligation of contracts and laws granting irrevocable privileges seemed adequate. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 32. CIVILIAN CONTROL OF THE MILITARY. The military shall always be in strict subordination to the civil power; no soldier shall in time of peace be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, except in the manner prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain the former Article III, section 22 unchanged. In doing so, the committee notes the importance of the declaration of the principle that the civilian authority always supersedes that of the military. Although the quartering of troops prohibition has not been at issue for many years, the committee felt it was wise to retain the safeguard. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 33. IMPORTATION OF ARMED PERSONS. No armed person or persons or armed body of men shall be brought into this state for the preservation of the peace, or the suppression of domestic violence, except upon the application of the legislative assembly, or of the governor when the legislative assembly cannot be convened.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously that the former Article III, section 31 remain unchanged. The protection, initially established to prevent the importation of strike-breakers, is thought to be an adequate safeguard against any body of armed men coming into the state. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

Section 34. UNENUMERATED RIGHTS. The enumeration in this Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny, impair, or disparage others retained by the people.

COMMENTS

The committee voted unanimously to retain the former Article III. section 33 unchanged. In doing so, the committee notes that this provision--as well as the new rights provisions of this proposal--is a crucial Part of any effort to revitalize the state government's approach to civil liberties questions. Activity in recent years indicates that this provision, originally written into the federal Bill of Sights as a sign that there were rights beyond those specifically listed, may be the source of innovative judicial activity in the civil liberties field. [See, e.g. Griswold v. Connecticut, 331 U.S. 479(1965)]. No delegate proposals were received on this provision.

To: MONTANA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

From: Public Health, Welfare, Labor and Industry Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The Public Health, Welfare, Labor and Industry Committee respectfully submits proposed new articles on Non-municipal Corporations, Labor, and Institutions and Assistance. The Non-municipal Corporation and the Labor Articles are intended to replace present Articles XV and XVIII respectively. The Institutions and Assistance Article is intended to replace section 1 and 5 of the present Article X.

The committee resolved most of the issues before it without strong dissent. However, minority reports are being filed on the subjects of public utility regulation, right-to-work, and rights of employee organization for collective bargaining.

In signing either a majority or a minority report, a committee member does not necessarily endorse all statements contained therein. Rejection, by the committee, of proposals does not necessarily imply that the committee finds them inherently undesirable unless it expressly so states.

The committee wishes to express its gratitude to all Delegates and members of the public who offered their advice on subjects before the committee.

The committee enjoyed the services of the following persons in addition to its members and now gratefully acknowledges their unstinting labors and loyalty to the goal of assisting the committee to make the best contribution of which it is capable to the writing of a new Constitution: Richard E. Spall, Research Analyst; Kandice Hauf and George Mahorey, Interns; and our excellent secretary, Sylvia Kinsey.

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE PUBLIC HEALTH, WELFARE, LABOR AND INDUSTRY COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Non-municipal Corporations to read as follows:

ARTICLE ___

NON-MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS

Section 1. GRANT OF POWER. Corporate charters shall be granted, modified, or dissolved only pursuant to general law.

Section 2. PROTECTION FOR CITIZENRY. The legislative Assembly shall provide for protection and education for the people against harmful and unfair practices by either foreign or domestic carporations, individuals, or associations.

Section 3. CUMULATIVE VOTING. All elections for directors or trustees of incorporated companies shall provide all stockholders the right to vote by person or proxy the number of shares of stock owned by him for as many directors or trustees as are to be elected, or to cumulate the shares, and give a candidate as many votes as the number of directors multiplied by the number of his shares, Or to distribute them in similar manner among as many candidates as he sees fit.

Section 4. LONG-SHORT HAUL CLAUSE. No transportation company shall be allowed to charge, under penalties which the legislative assembly shall prescribe, any greater charge for the transportation of freight or passengers to any place upon its route, than it charges for the transportation of the same class of freight or passengers to any more distant place upon its route within this state.

Section 5. WATERED STOCK PROVISIONS. No corporation shall issue stocks or bonds, except for labor done, services performed, or money or property actually received: and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void. The stock of corporations shall not be increased except in pursuance of general law, nor without consent of those persons holding a majority of the stock first obtained at a meeting held after notice given in pursuance of law.

Section 6. RETROSPECTIVE LAW PROHIBITION. The legislative assembly shall pass no law retrospective in its operations which imposes on the people a new liability in respect to transactions or considerations already passed.

COMMENTS ON MAJORITY PROPOSAL

ARTICLE XV NON-MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS

Section 1. GRANT OF POWER. Corporate charters shall be granted, modified, or dissolved only pursuant to general law.

COMMENTS

In addition to providing for a general grant of legislative power for corporate charter granting, section 1 provides:

(a) a prohibition of chartering corporations by special law, and

(b) the intent that corporate bodies are subject to dissolution in the event their principle activity is contrary to promotion of the general welfare.

Section 2. PROTECTION FOR CITIZENRY. The Legislative Assembly shall provide for protection and education for the people against harmful and unfair practices by either foreign or domestic corporations, individuals, or associations.

COMMENTS

The committee intends this section to encompass and prohibit various business practices which are deemed harmful and injurious to the people. Included in the prohibitionare various business practices, such as:

(a) arbitrary discrimination in rate and service for transportation,

(b) the receipt of greater rights and privileges by foreign corporations than are granted to domestic corporations,

(c) price-fixing and regulation of production on an intrastate basis which is harmful to the state economy,

(d) any act which is generally not conducive to efficiently allocating scarce resources.

Section 3. CUMULATIVE VOTING. All elections for directors or trustees of incorporated companies shall provide all stockholders the right to vote by person or proxy the number of shares of stock owned by him for as many directors or trustees as are to be elected, or to cumulate the shares, and give a candidate as many votes as the number of directors multiplied by the number of his shares, or to distribute them in similar manner among as many candidates as he sees fit.

COMMENTS

The intent of this section is to maintain voting protection for the minority stockholder.

Section 4. LONG-SHORT HAUL CLAUSE. No transportation company shall be allowed to charge, under penalties which the legislative assembly shall prescribe, any greater charge for the transportation of freight or passengers to any place upon its route, than it charges for the transportation of the same class of freight or passengers to any more distant place upon its route within this state.

COMMENTS

Recognizing that federal law and state statutes do not prohibit this discriminatory practice, the committee retains this section for intrastate purposes.

Section 5. WATERED STOCK PROVISION. No corporation shall issue stocks or bonds, except for labor done, services performed, or money or property actually received; and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void. The stock of corporations shall not be increased except in pursuance of general law, nor without consent of those persons holding a majority of the stock first obtained at a meeting held after notice given in pursuance of law.

COMMENTS

Although the committee recognizes the statutory nature of this section, it feels that the possibility, no matter how remote, of future legislative action removing this from the statutes warrants retention of this section in the Constitution.

Section 6. RETROSPECTIVE LAW PROHIBITION. The legislative assembly shall pass no law retrospective in its operations which imposes on the people a new liability in respect to transaction or considsrations already passed.

COMMENTS

In expanding the prohibition on retrospective law, the committee intends to preserve for all citizens the sanctity of contractual obligations from the actions of a third party, i.e., the state.

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE PUBLIC HEALTH, WELFARE, LABOR AND INDUSTRY COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Labor to read as follows:

COMMENTS ON MAJORITY PROPOSAL

ARTICLE XVIII LABOR

Section 1. DEPARTMENT AND COMMISSIONER. The Legislative Assembly shall provide for a Department of Labor and Industry. The department shall be under the control of a Commissioner appointed by the Governor, confirmed by the legislature (senate).

COMMENTS

The proposed article retains from the present Constitution only an abbreviation of section one. sections two to five, inclusive, are deleted. The proposal retains a Constitutional Department of Labor, but deletes the requirement that it be located at the capitol. The proposal retains the Constitutional office of Commissioner, but deletes reference to a specific term. It retains the requirement that the Commissioner be confirmed by the Legislative Assembly (Senate). The committee believes that this is as far as we should go in restricting the legislature's discretion with respect to this office. It is our intention that the legislature may leave the commissioner subject to removal by the governor at his pleasure or may, in its discretion, provide a definite term of office and/or require that he be removable only for cause. As under the present Constitution the powers and duties of the commissioner art left for legislative specification.

Delegate Mahoney dissents With respect to the deletion of the specific term for the Commissioner of Labor.

Deletion of section two and section three of the present Constitution is recommended because we do not consider the subject matter to he of sufficient importance to warrant Constitutional treatment in the absence of evidence suggesting the legislature may be unwilling or unable to act upon any problems that exist or may arise within the areas covered by those existing sections.

Deletion of section four of the present Constitution is recommended because it is defective in its present form since an employee who works more than fight hours per day violates the Constitution as much as the employer who requires or induces him to do so, among the consequences of which fact is that workers injured while working in excess of eight hours in one day have been denied standing in the courts to prosecute civil actions against negligent tort feasors. Any suggested language to remedy that defect Creates new problems. For example, the clause "and except when an employee voluntarily agrees to work longer than the prescribed eight hours," has been suggested. That language would remove practically all protection for workers in non-union situations, whereas it may be argued that the worker under union-management contract needs no such protection. Furthermore, the majority feels that a Constitutional eight-hour day may interfere with desirable experimentation with combinations of longer days and shorter weeks, which is in fact now occurring. The majority is also in doubt whether the section has had enough positive practical effect over the many years it has been in the Constitution to justify its continuance. Both the Legislative Council report of 1968 and tht Constituticaal Revision Commission subcommittee report of 1969 recommended its deletion. While we are cognizant of the importance attached to the section by some citizens, and while we would not be adverse to retaining it if the problems inherent in it could be solved, WE now believe that wisdom dictates freeing the legislature to deal with the issue.

With the removal of sections two, three and four, section five is clearly unnecessary.

> Section 2. MERIT SYSTEM. The Legislative Assembly shall establish a system under which the merit principal will govern the employment of persons by the state.

MAJORITY COMMENTS

The committee believes that Efficient government requires adoption by the legislature of a merit system. Since 1921 the legislature has attempted, and failed, to provide such a system. It is the committee's purpose, in recommending adoption of Delegate Proposal 144, to encourage the legislature to get on with the job.

MINORITY COMMENTS

This would be a new Constitutional provision. The minority believes that insufficient time was devoted to this subject by the committee, and the evidence introduced too fragmentary and inconclusive to warrant the inclusion of this article in the Constitution. We believe the matter is primarily legislative and we wish to report that a senate subcommittee now has this matter under consideration.

ARTICLE X INSTITUTIONS AND ASSISTANCE

Section 1. INSTITUTIONS. Such institutions as the public good may require shall be established and supported by the state as may be prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

The section as amended deletes specific mention of several institutions set forth in the existing section. It was the feeling of the committee that no special purpose is served by the specific mention of these institutions in as much as a general delegation of authority should be sufficient.

Section 2. ASSISTANCE. It shall be the duty of the legislative assembly to provide economic assistance and social and rehabilitative services as may be necessary for those inhabitants who, by reason of age, infirmities or misfortune may have need for the aid of society.

COMMENTS

The original section placed the burden of taxation upon the several counties of the state to provide by tax levy for their indigents. The proposed section changes this to provide that the legislative assembly shall decide where this tax burdan should rest, counties as at present or a state wide levy, or some combination thereof. The testimony taken on this matter showed conclusively that welfare recipients tend to congregate in the larger cities of our state, partly because of better job opportunities, and partly because of better welfare facilities. It was shown that the welfare recipients from the smaller counties tend to gather in Great Falls, Anaconda, Butte, Missoula, Billings, etc., imposing a disproportionate burden on the taxpayers of these counties. The proposed section would allow the legislature to place this burdan on a stat2 wide basis if it so chose and thus correct this inequity. your committee considered the possibility of providing that it would be "the duty of the State to provide economic assistance . . . .", but YE believed that this would be equally as restrictive as the existing section and believe the matter should be on2 for legislative discretion.

MINORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE PUBLIC HEALTH, WELFARE, LABOR AND INDUSTRY COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Regulation of Public Utilities to read as follows:

ARTICLE ___

REGULATION OF EUBLIC UTILITIES

Section 1. PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSIONER. A public utilities commissioner shall be appointed by the governor, and confirmed by the legislature (Senate) after public hearings, for a term of four years which shall coincide with the governor's term of office. A vacancy shall be filled for the remainder of the unexpired term in the same manner. The governor may at any time remove the commissioner for any cause deemed by him sufficient. after such public hearing as may be provided by law.

Section 2. POWERS OF COMMISSIONER. The commissioner shall have such jurisdiction and such legislative, executive and judicial powers as are conferred upon him by the legislature and this Constitution, which are cognate and germane to the regulation of public utilities as defined by law. In the exercise of such powers, one of which shall be the determination of rates and tariffs of the utilities over which he may be given jurisdiction, the commissioner shall not be required in considering evidence presented before him to consider any particular theories or methods for determining such rates and tariffs, and such rates and tariffs shall be just and reasonable. The commissioner shall determine the weight and credibility of ary evidence that is introduced. The manner and scope of review, if any, of the commissioner's actions in a court of record shall be provided by law.

Section 3. IMPARTIALITY OF STAFF. In the determination of rates and tariffs the commissioner shall be provided with staff personnel and help in such determination, and recommendations of the staff shall be regarded as impartial as opposed to the partiality of the applicant or the protestant.

Section 4. DUTY TO REPRESENT CUSTOMERS. The commissioner shall represent the customers of any public utility and the public generally in all controversies respecting rates, valuations, service and all matters over which he may be given jurisdiction and he shall make use of the jurisdiction and powers of his office to protect such customers, and the public generally, from unjust and unreasonable exactions and practices and to obtain for them adequate service at just and reasonable rates.

Section 5. DIVISION OF REGULATORY POWER PROHIBITED. No power to regulate any public utility in respect of rates, tariffs, service, finance, or any other aspect whatsoever of the management and operation of such enterprises as may be necessary or ancillary to the regulation of rates and taritfs thereof, shall be conferred on any other official or agency, but separate divisions under the commissioner, corresponding to separate regulated industries or industry groups, may be prescribed by law.

MINORITY COMMENTS

Section 1 replaces the existing statutory three-man elected Railroad and Public Service Commission with a single appointed commissioner. The proposed reform is modelled on the system used since 1932 in the state of Oregon with generally recognized success from the standpoint of both regulated companies and the public. It is also influenced by the findings and recommendations of the President's Advisory Council On Executive Organization (the "Ash Council") released by President Nixon on February 11, 1971. The members of that Council were Roy L. Ash, President of Litton Industries; George F. Baker, former Dean of the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration; John B. Connally, presently Secretary of the Treasury; Frederick R. Kappel, former Chairman of the board of Directors of AT&T; Richard M. Paget, President of Cresap, McCormick and Paget, Inc., a management consulting firm; and Walter N. Thayer, President of Whitney Communication Corporation. (Mr. Baker did not participate in the study and Mr. Kappel dissented from its major recommendations). The Council studied the Civil Aeronautics Board, the Federal Communications Commission, the Federal Maritime Commission, the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Council recommended restructuring and combining the seven agencies into five, four of which would be headed by single commissioners. The latter recommendation was based on the finding that single administrators would enable the agencies to attract and retain highly qualified personnel and increase accountability to both the President and Congress and enhance the efficiency of administration.

In most states, as in Montana, the multi-member regulatory commissions, whether appointed or elected, have proven ineffective at best. The attempt to "insulate" regulation from "politics" has resulted in freeing the regulators from accountability to the public whose interest they are charged with protecting, but it has not "insulated" them from overwhelming pressures from the powerful corporations whose rates and service they supposedly supervise. In fact, it is axiomatic among professional students of utility regulation that the "regulators" have long since become the "regulated."

The minority of this committee is convicced, after hearing testimony from highly placed officials and counsel of almost all of the important "regulated" monopolies in Montana, that their customers would be as well off, as they are now, if regulation were to be abolished altogether. We are persuaded that the existing regulatory process is but an elaborate sham-battle, a sort of Roman bread-and-circus game in which the monopolies get the bread and the consumer pays for the circus. The upshot of the whole sorry spectacle is that the corporations secure the imprimatur of the state for rates no higher than they would have set entirely on their own initiative. In dreary near-unanimity. witnesses for the monopolies agreed that in the procedures, regulations, structure, method of selection, and the law under which the Montana commission came into existence and operates, "all is for the best in the best of possible worlds." They admit one exception to the rule : they agree it would be better if the taxpayers would ante up more money for a larger commission staff, so their rate applications could be approvedwith less delay.

The minority is convinced that the Montana rate-payer will never get fair treatment under the present multi-member elected-commission system because it is literally impossible for the election process to attract and select more than an occasional qualified, competent and dedicated commissioner. The electorate simply does not have the opportunity to acquaint itself with the qualifications of the commission candidate running as one among a crowd of candidates for various and sundry state, city, and county offices. The result is that not only does the average voter know little or nothing of the commissioners' qualifications, but also not one in ten thousand even know the commissioners' names. The minority believes now is the time to put an end to this disgraceful charade,

At the same time, the minority was persuaded by the testimony (and perhaps by other recent events) that it would be unwise not to give the commissioner a substantial measure of independence of the governor. In this respect, our proposal is also modelled on the Oregon experience, but we have added the requirement of legislative confirsatior.

We believe there is a clear movement toward greater accountability of regulatory agencies to the people through the chief executive, and toward focusing attention and responsibility on one man. We believe Montana should be a leader in this movement.

Section 2. POWERS OF COMMISSIONER. The commissicrer shall have such jurisdiction and such legislative, executive and judicial powers as are conferred upon him by the legislature and this Constitution, which are cognate and germane to the regulation of public utilities as defined by law. In the exercise of such powers, one of which shall be the determination of rates and tariffs of the utilities over which he may be given jurisdiction, the commissioner shall not be required in considering the evidence presented before him to consider any particular theories or methods for determining such rates and tariffs, and such rates and tariffs shall be just and reasonable. The commissioner shall determine the weight and credibility of any evidence that is introduced. The manner and scope of review, if any, of the commissioner's actions in a court of record shall be provided by law.

COMMENTS

The history of regulatory law is too lengthy and complex to be set forth adequately in any space less than a large book. We can only say here that Montana utility regulation has muddled along under the burden of law labeled obsolete by the United States Supreme Court more than a generation ago. The leading Montana case, Tobacco River Power Co. v. Public Service Commission (109 Mont. 521; 1940) was an accurate statement of the law as enunciated by the U.S. Supreme Court up until that time. But only two years later that Court handed down the first of a series of decisions (generally known as the Natural Gas Cases) in Natural Gas Pipeline Co. v. Federal Power Commission (315 U.S. 575; 1942) which revolutionized regulatory law as interpreted by that court. See also Hope Natural Gas Co. (320 U.S. 591; 1944). Many other state supreme courts followed the lead of the federal court, as did, for example, the Utah Supreme Court in Utah Power and Light Co. v. Public Service Commission (107 Utah 155; 1944), and freed their state regulatory bodies from the shackles of the arcane "fair value" rule. The Montana Supreme Court chose, in State, ex rel Olson v. Public Service Commission (131 Mont. 272: 1957), to keep the Montana commission in the dark ages of regulatory law, and testimony before this committee was virtually unanimous that the Montana commission is in fact bound to the fair value rule until the law is changed by the Supreme Court, the legislature, or this Convention. (Cf. James V. Bottomly, "'Fair Value' test in Montana Public Utility Rate Regulations," 22 Mont. L. Rev. 65; Fall, 1960). It is the minority's belief that the first two are not likely to act. It is the minority's belief that this Convention should act -- for the people.

The specific language of proposed section 2 is designed to free the commissioner to exercise his best judgment, to weigh the evidence subject to no court-imposed theories, save only that the result be "just and reasonable" -- the standard imposed by the U.S. Supreme Court, to which he would be held by the court in any case. Otherwise, the section preserves the legislature's full discretionary power to define the commissioner's powers and jurisdiction, and to define the meaning of "public utility." The last two sentences of section two are designed to prevent the courts from substituting their judgment for the commissioner's, so long as they find the result of his deliberations "just and reasonable" and arrived at in a manner not contrary to procedural due process of law; and to empower the legislature to restrict judicial review of the commissioner's actions, if it so chooses.

Section 3. IMPARTIALITY OF STAFF. In the determination of rates and tariffs the commissioner shall be provided with staff personnel and help in such determination, and recommendations of the staff shall be regarded as impartial as opposed to the partiality of the applicant or the protestant.

COMMENTS

Without a staff adequate in numbers and capability no regulatory agency can hope to be effective. On this everyone is agreed. The staff should be independent and impartial, characteristics which should be (must be) insured by a merit system. Their work and their recommendations must be the foundation, the sine qua non, of capable regulation, and they should be given the standing of impartial experts.

Section 4. DUTY TO REPRESENT CUSTOMERS. The commissioner shall represent the customers of any public utility and the public generally in all controversies respecting rates, valuations, service and all matters over which he may be given jurisdiction and he shall make use of the jurisdiction and powers of his office to protect such customers, and the public generally, from unjust and unreasonable exactions and practices and to obtain for them adequate service at just and reasonable rates.

COMMENTS

Section 4 sets forth the basic philosophy of regulation. Public utilities are regulated because they are monopolies unregulated by a free competitive market. Without stringent regulation, the consumer is defenseless against exploitation by monopoly power. Regulation is necessary on the customer's behalf. It goes without saying that it is also in the consumer's interest that the utility company be allowed rates sufficient to insure adequate service.

Section 5. DIVISION OF REGULATORY POWER PROHIBITED. No power to regulate any public utility in respect of rates, tariffs, service, finance, or any other aspect whatsoever of the management and operation of such enterprises as may be necessary or ancillary to the regulation of rates and tariffs thereof, shall be conferred on any other official or agency, but separate divisions under the commissioner, corresponding to separate regulated industries or industry groups, may be prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

The purpose of this section is tc maintain the principle cf concentration of responsibility in the interest cf prcroting acccontability, while permitting flexibility in compartmentalizing the staff divisicns alcng logical economic dividisg-lines.

MINORITY GENERA1 CCMMENTS

In the view of the minority, the fcregcing proposal meets all the criteria cf subject matter suitable fcr inclusicn in cur Constitution. Admittedly, it is alsc statutcry in several senses': (1) the present system was estaklished by law in 1913; (2) what is scught to be accomplished by this prcposal could be accomplished by statute; (3) part cf the prcpcsal is modeled on the Oregcn statute. On the cther hand, the Mcntana legislature has refused to act despite the pleas of beleaguered rate-payers, sessicn after session after sessicn. And always for the same reascn: the power of the monopolies' lobby, which, with unlimited funds provided by the rate-payers and the best hired legal and public relations minds, has ridden rcuyhshcd cver the legislature. They have played the legislature like a master organist plays his instrument. They kncw where all the stops are located and they know hcw tc pull them. Fcr them the stakes are high. For the consumers they are equally high but spread among 8CC,COO uncrganized pecple.

This subject is important tc this state - both econcoically and politically. It is a subject of enduring character. The alternative means to deal with it are not tc be trusted. It is, therefore, a Ccnstituticcal issue. We represent the pecple. Let us act for the people.

MAJORITY COMMENTS

The majority wishes to express the reasoning behind their rejection of the Article on Public Utility Regulation. The following are significant reasons, among others, which committed the majority to their position:

Public Utilities. Your committee considered voluminous testimony on Delegate Proposal 76 which would provide a Constitutional Article for the regulation of public utilities. The majority of this committee voted that this proposal be not adopted for the following reasons:

1. That the matter contained therein is primarily legislative ir nature.

2. That the establishment of a single commissioner appointed by the Governor was, ir ary event, experimental in nature: there has been only two states in the country who have used this system and while it might have some desirable features, the Constitution is no place for such an innovative proposal and one which represents such a radical departure from our present elected three-man commission.

3. The majority feels that little evidence was presented before the committee that indicates the present system of utility regulation is not working satisfactorily. It is perhaps understaffed, but this is a legislative problem.

DELEGATE PROPOSAL #121

Section ___. PUBLIC UTILITY CORPORATIONS. Any county or municipal subdivision of the state has the power and authority to establish public corporations for the maintenance and operation of utilities, subject to regulations prescribed by law.

MINORITY COMMENTS

The minority believes that the people should have the right to choose the type of utility, publicly or privately owned, from which they will obtain the necessary services commonly called utilities. As Senator Metcalf pointed out in his testimony before this committee, "Montana is the only mainland state without a single municipal electric system." This right is especially important in our state, where consumer protection against unreasonable and unjust exactions of privately-owned monopoly utility corporations is totally inadequate and where the legislature has historically displayed no disposition to improve it.

Section ___. PUBLIC UTILITY CORPORATIONS. Any county or municipal subdivision of the state has the power and authority to establish public corporations for the maintenance and operation of utilities, subject to regulations prescribed by law.

MAJORITY COMMENTS

The majority wishes to justify its rejection of Delegate Proposal #121:

1. The proposal is primarily legislative.

2. The Legislative Assembly currently possesses, within its plenary powers, the right to create such corporations without Constitutional permission.

3. The proposal would create authority for public utility districts, in the opinion of the majority, a matter which has been repeatedly considered and rejected by the legislature on numerous occasions.

Employees in private or public employment shall have the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid and protection.

MINORITY COMMENTS

This proposal is taken verbatim from section seven of the National Labor Relations Act except for the addition of "in private or public employment." Its intent is to give Constitutional recognition to the rights first accorded employees covered by the NLRA in 1935 and to extend them to all employees, including public employees. It does no more than confer the dignity of Constitutional recognition upon the long since well protected rights of most private employees. It does, however, extend to public employees a clarification of their right to organization and collective bargaining (cf. Benson v. School District #1 of Silver Bow Co. 136 Mont. 77; Zderick v. Silver Bow Co. 154 Mont. 118: 1969.) On the other hand, it does not establish a right to strike nor in any manner restrict the power of the legislature to regulate collective bargaining within the area not preempted by federal law. to regulate or prohibit the use of the strike or other aspects of the process of collective bargaining, or to regulate the internal affairs of unions.

The legislature is not mandated to implement the stated rights, although its power to do so is unrestricted. As respects public employees. particularly. the legislature is given no mandate, although it is intended that the rights established would of necessity be recognized in any legislation providing for a "merit" or "civil service" system for state employees.

The minority believes that it is time to give the right of organization and collective bargaining the Constitutional standing eventually accorded every basic right of free men. The history of Constitution-making is that rights are accorded Constitutional status after long decades or centuries of struggle, through which they have been largely won in law and in fact. The rights recognized by the Pounding Fathers in our Federal Bill of Rights had already been won by countless brave and dedicated men, who for centuries freely gave their liberty, their lives, and their property to secure them. The Constitution merely reflected the success of that long struggle.

The same long struggle, extending in America over a century-and-a-half, was necessary to secure the right to form unions free from the repression cf government and the ccexcicn of powerful and ruthless agglomeraticns cf private capital. The same unselfish sacrifice of liberty, life, and property ty brave and dedicated men cccurred. As the never-ending battle tc keep and strengthen the civil rights and liberties of a free pecple gces on unabated two centuries after our Fill cf Rights was conceived, so will the striving to bring into employer-employee relatiens in all sectors of the ecencmy the principles cf fair Flay, ccunter-vailing power, and majority rule that have been recognized in law and fact for nearly two generations. Eut ncw is the time, though the contest to create and preserve thcse rights will be unending, t0 elevate them, in general principle, tc the dignity cf Ccnsti-tuticcal law.

2. The right to crganize for bargaining purposes may in fact ccnaotate the right tc strike (especially within the public sector), and this nay be undesirable in many circumstances.

EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE PUBLIC HEALTH, WELFARE, LABOR AND INDUSTRY COMMITTEE:

That the following section be submitted by the Constitutional Convention for a separate vote of the people as a section to be added to the Labor Article if approved by the Vote of the people:

> Section 1. EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS, The right of persons to work shall not be denied or abridged on account of membership or nonmembership in any labor union or labor organization. The right of employees, by and through a labor organization, to bargain collectively shall not be denied or abridged. Public employees Shall not have the right to strike.

MINORITY COMMENTS

The thrust of the proposal is twofold: (a) it insures that the fundamental means by which a man supports himself and his family will not be subject to mandatory financial support of an association in which he may exhibit no interest, and, (b) it provides all employees the right to collectively bargain, subject to the denial of the right to strike for the public employee.

It is the intent that the proposal be submitted to the people for a separate vote, either to accept or reject. The proposal Will provide the populace the right to vote on a most critical question, a question which the legislature has failed time and again to act upon and which has exhibited profound historical significance in Montana.

We currently experience compulsory unionism in Montana. The laborer seeks employment in a union shop where the union shop contract prevails. If he objects to financial support Of the union, he is denied his right to work in that shop. Or, if the workers vote to adopt a union shop contract where one previously did not exist, the majority of those workers abrogate the basic right of the minority worker to provide for his family if he refuses to financially support the union. This right should not be subject to the whims of the majority, just as the right to vote is not subject to disenfranchisement, if the majority so votes. Justice Douglas states:

> "The right to work I had assumed was the most precious liberty that man possesses. Man has indeed as much a right to work as he has to live, to be free, to own property. It does men little good to stay alive and free and propertied if they cannot work. To work means to eat. It also means to live. (347 U.S. 442.)"

If we grant the right to men to voluntarily associate with those they independently enjoy, without financial sanctions, we are approaching our responsibilities as men. To insure that right of association, to insure an individual's freedom of contract. and to insure the continuance of competitive forces within the bargaining process, we ought to outlaw compulsory unionism. The passage of the right to work provision insures a viable union that is responsive to its members. Justice Brandeis remarked:

> "It is not true that the success of a labor union means a perfect monopoly. The union, in order to attain or preserve for its members individual liberty, must be strong and stable. It need not include every member of the trade. Indeed it is desirable for both the union and the employee that it should not. Absolute power leads to excesses and weakness. . . a nucleus of unorganized labor will check the oppression by the union as unions check the oppression by the employer. (335 U.S. 551)"

Unions in the long-run that increased profits be equated to increased wages. But if the two are equated, the employers are forced to recoup their costs and raise prices. Inflation progresses and for it there is no governmental remedy save the devaluation of the dollar or credit constriction, which in itself produces unemployment. The union worker continues to draw his compensation, but the non-union worker has no monopolistic union to insure his right of continued employment, if he is allowed to work by the union in the first place.

There is no question that unions have and continue to serve valuable functions; but, if there is one lesson to learn from history, it is that no civilization can long endure that doesn't insure the dignity and rights of the individual. So the unions in fact render such valuable social functions that the majority will" of the union is allowed to abrogate, under financial penalty, a man's need for self esteem and self realization? No private association has the right to force financial support of itself upon an individual. If it is done, it is nothing but a form of taxation without representation. Such taxation has often been the cause for new constitutions, and surely the time is upon us.

The proposal provides the right to bargain collectively and the limitation upon that right is the denial of public employees right to strike; it must be such to insure that the law, civil order, and the welfare of society are to be preserved. Likewise, the right to bargain collectively is not the right to bargain away the rights of the minority subject to the clout of the majority. Yet, Montana Labor Law allows the union shop to do just that.

This convention is a means for grass root expression by the people. It is the most responsive political instrument of the populace for years past and tc ccme. If we miss the cppcrtunity to pass this vital question tc the voters, we have passed the opportunity of a life time. we have surpassed the cpportunity tc restore man's right cf self-determination through emplcyment.

It is our duty to give the vcters cf Montana their right to vote upon this very vital question when WE can sc easily and ecc-nomically do sc at this time.

The right of employees, by and through a labor organization, to bargain collectively shall not be denied or abridged. Public employees shall not have the right to strike.

MAJORITY COMMENTS

We observe the outset that the proposition popularly labelled "right to work" establishes no such right. Its sole practical effect is to prevent unions and managements from agreeing to make financial support of a union a condition of continuing employment. We note also that federal law (the Labor-Management Relations Act of 1347) prohibits arrangements which require union membership prior to employment (closed shop) and the interpretations of that act by the courts limit the obligation that can be imposed on any employee to the requirement that he tender to the union, by whose bargained contract with his employer his working conditions are governed, financial support on an equal basis with all other employees so affected (NLRB v. General Motors Corp., 373 U.S. 734; 1963). No employee can now legally be required to actually join a union in the sense of participating in its organizational life. He does not have to accept a union membership card; he cannot he required to submit to an initiation ritual; he cannot be compelled to attend meetings, or perform any other acts normally thought of as the accompaniments of organizational membership. He is simply required, a certain time after he becomes an employee, to contribute to the financial support of the organization which bargains for him.

While it is undeniable that the union security agreement which the minority proposal seeks to outlaw, imposes some restraint on the absolute freedom of the individual, it is our view that the restriction is in no essential respect different from the restrictions frequently imposed by majority rule in a democratic system, particularly, and of necessity, by collective labor agreements. Such agreements, ratified by majority vote, determine an employee's wage rate; his hours of work; the conditions under which he is subject to disciplinary actions, including discharge, by the employer; his rights to a grievance procedure and his access to arbitration: his rights, usually related to his seniority date, with respect to layoffs, recall, promotion, transfer, vacation, holidays, pensions and a lengthy list of other conditions of employment. He may be required to contribute from his earnings to various "fringe benefit" plans, just as he is required by law to contribute to social security. That he may also be required to contribute financially to the support of the union that negotiated all of these other conditions on his behalf does not strike us as a significant and exceptional restriction on his freedom.

Union leaders and most members resist prohibitions of union security agreements not only because they believe all those who benefit from the union's bargaining efforts should help pay for them, but also because they believe the real motive of the advocates of such prohibitions has more to do with weakening unions than protecting workers. Unionists are not alone in this suspicion. As one academic student of collective bargaining has put it:

> "The National Right to Work Committee and those who support such legislation insist that theirs is a fight for principle, that no man should have to pay to work. The fact that so many are unable to see the same principle when the applicant is black rather than nonunion, as well as other evidence, suggests that their position may well be less one of principle and more one of anti-unionism. This is not to deny anti-unionism as a legitimate position, but only to argue that it should not be hidden."
> (Robert Evans, Jr., Dept. of Economics, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Public Policy Toward Labor, Harper & Row, 1965. p. 168).

Much repetitious testimony was presented to the committee on behalf of the Minority Proposal, but we find it remarkable that not a single individual, from among the thousands supposedly disadvantaged by union security agreements, came forward to support it.

For the above reasons, the majority concludes that the Minority Proposal is without merit and does not belong in Montana's Constitution.

APPENDIX F

Since the committee members found cause to delete the greater portion of Article XV on non-municipal corporations, they wish to convey briefly the justifications for these deletions to the committee of the Whole.

Section 1. The original intent of this section was to abolish all those corporate bodies which existed only on paper prior to 1889. The only possible danger (if it can be so termed) in deletion would be if some pre-1889 corporation would once again commence business. This possibility was mitigated by statute 15-808 (R.C.M. 1947) which stipulated that a corporation had to organize and commence business within one year or lose its charter. Although repealed in 1969, this statute quite possibly annulled any pre-1889 corporations, that is if section 1 of the 1889 Constitution did not already do this for all time.

Section 2. Proposed language of the new section 1 stipulates that "Corporate charters shall be granted. . . .only pursuant to general law." In addition to this committee's proposed section, which precludes special grafts of charters by the legislature, the Legislative Committee has expressed its intention to retain the sense of Article V, section 26, which also prohibits special chartering.

Section 3. The committee believes that the power of the state to dissolve corporate charter, as provided in proposed section 1, in conjunction with proposed section 2's protection provision, adequately expresses the intent of this section.

Section 4. This is retained as section 3 of the proposed article.

Section 5. The committee finds this section to be either obsolete, superseded by ICC action, or covered by existing statutes. The committee believes that all intrastate matters relating to this section are legislative.

Section 6. The committee deleted this section for the same reasons cited under consideration of section 5.

Section 7. This section is considered to be primarily legislative. The exception is the long-short haul clause relating to intrastate matters, which is neither covered by statute nor by ICC regulation. The committee retained this clause as section 4 of the proposed revision in the belief that intrastate railroad transportation may one day increase in response to the demands of increased urbanization and development of Montana coal fields.

Section 8. All 1889 transportation companies have filed the necessary acceptances with the Secretary of State. Therefore, this section is superfluous.

Section 9. The committee members understand that the Bill of Rights Committee will present a section on eminent domain and that they will then have an opportunity to consider at greater length the ramifications of these proposed revisions in regard to corporations.

It is intended that sfction 2 of the proposed article will prevent infringement upon the general welfare by corporations. This was provided for in section 4 of the 1889 Constitution.

Section 10. This section is retained as section 5 of the revised article.

Section 11. The committee feels that this is a legislative matter. It further believes that equal treatment under the law is provided by proposed section 2 as well as ty the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution.

Jection 12. A street is the property of a municipality or town and the use of such property is subject to the eminent domain doctrine. The committee believes the courts will protect the essential value of such a street or highway from capricious condemnation. This is also viewed as a matter under legislative justification.

Section 13. This section has been expanded and included in the revised article as section 6. It is the intent that no retrospective. law be passed by the legislative assembly which would impose a liability on any citizen in respect to transactions or considerations already completed.

Section 14. This is considered to be statutory in nature.

Section 15. This is deleted from the proposed article. Reasoning behind this deletion is that the state inherently possesses this plenary power and the only restriction upon its jurisdiction is the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution which, in any event, already supersedes section 15.

Sections 16 and 17. These are considered statutory in nature.

Section 18. This definition of a corporation is tautological and unnecessary. Any decision to classify a joint stock company as a corporation ought to be made by the Legislative Assembly. Powers of the corporate body are considered statutory material.

Section 19. The committee feels that this section is unnecessary in light of existing statutory means by which a corporation may be sued and levied upon.

Section 20. Section 2 of the revised Article XV adequately covers this matter. The present wording of section 20 is unduly restrictive, nebulous and statutory.

From: Education and Public Lands Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The Education and Public Lands Committee submits herewith proposed new Articles on Education, Public Lands, and Investments. The proposed Articles are intended to replace the Education, Public Lands, and Trust and Legacy Fund Articles in the present Constitution.

Throughout its hearings the committee heard a great deal of thoughtful, well-researched testimony and benefited fully from the many sources of information provided by interested persons and groups. Realizing the crucial importance of education in the state, the committee was guided by the desire to insure a solid foundation for public education in Montana and to allow for the flexibility essential to the educational process. The committee resolved almost all questions with few dissents. On two issues, however, the questions of public aid to sectarian schools and investments, the committee failed to reach agreement. The dissenting members are presenting minority reports included herein.

In signing this majority report a committee member does not necessarily endorse each and every statement in it.

The committee utilized the services of the following people in addition to its members: Sally Watson, secretary, Bruce Sievers, research analyst, and Jeffrey Rupp, Maureen Callahan, Nancy Lien and John Murphy, interns.

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Richard J. Champoux, Chairman

/s/ Robert L. Noble, Vice Chairman

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE EDUCATION AND PUBLIC LANDS COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Education to read as follows:

ARTICLE ___

EDUCATION

Section 1. EDUCATIONAL GOALS AND DUTIES OF THE STATE. It shall be the goal of the people of Montana to provide for the establishment of a system of education which will develop the full educational potential of each person. Equality of educational opportunity shall be guaranteed to each person of the state.

The legislature shall provide for a system of high quality free public elementary and secondary schools. The legislature may also provide for other educational institutions, public libraries and educational programs as are deemed desirable. It shall be the duty of the legislature to provide by taxation or other means and to distribute in an equitable manner funds sufficient to insure full funding of the public elementary and secondary school system.

section 2. PUBLIC SCHOOL FUND. The public school fund of the state shall consist of the proceeds of such lands as have heretofore been granted. or may hereafter be granted, to the state by the general government known as school lands; and those granted in lieu of such; lands acquired by gift or grant from any person or corporation under any law or grant of the general government; and of all other grants of land or money made to the state from the general government for general educational purposes, or where no other special purpose is indicated in such grant; all estates, or distributive shares of estates that may escheat to the state; all unclaimed shares and dividends of any corporation incorporated under the laws of the state, and all other grants, gifts, devises or bequests made to the state for general educational purposes.

Section 3. PUBLIC SCHOOL FUND INVIOLATE. The public school fund shall forever remain inviolate, guaranteed by the state against loss or diversion, to be invested under the restrictions to be provided by law.

Section 4. BOARD OF LAND COMMISSIONERS. The governor, superintendent of public instruction, secretary of state and attorney general shall constitute the state board of land commissioners, which shall have the direction, control, leasing, exchange and sale of the school lands of the state, and the lands granted or which may hereafter be granted for the support and benefit of the various state educational irstituticns, under such regulations and restrictions as may be prescribed by law.

Section 5. PUBLIC SCHOOL FUND REVENUE. Ninety-five per centum (95%) of all the interest received on the school funds of the state, and ninety-five per centum (95%) of all rents received from the leasing of school lands and of all other income from the public school funds shall be equitably apportioned annually to public elementary and secondary schools as provided by lau.

The remaining five per centum (5%) of all the interest received on the school funds of the state, and the remaining five per centum (5%) of all the rents received from the leasing of school lands and of all other income from the public school funds, shall annually be added to the public rchool funds of the state and become and forever remain an inseparable and inviolable part tbereof.

Section 6. AID PROHIBITED TO SECTARIAN SCHOOLS. Neither the legislative assembly, nor any county, city, town, or school district, or other public corporations, shall ever make directly or indirectly, any appropriation, or pay from any public fund or monies whatever, or make any grant of lards or other property in aid of any church, or for any sectarian purpose, or to aid in the support of any school, academy, seminary, college, university, or other literary, scientific institution, controlled in whole or in part by any church, sect or dercsination whatever.

Section 7. NON-DISCRIMINATION IN EDUCATION. No religious or partisan test or qualification shall ever te required of any person as a condition of admission into any public educational institution of the state, either as teacher or student: nor shall attendance be required at any religious service whatever, nor shall any sectarian tenets be taught in any public educational institution of the state; nor shall any person be debarred admission to any public institution ot learning on account of SEX, race, creed, religion or national origin.

Section 8. SCHOOL ELECTIONS. The legislative assembly shall provide for elections of school district trustees.

Section 9. STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION. The board of public education and the board of regents of higher education, as hereafter designated shall together constitute the state board of education which shall meet periodically on matters of mutual concern. In case of a tie vote at such meeting the superintendent of public instruction may cast a vote.

Section 10. BOARD OF PUBLIC EDUCATION. There shall be a board of public education which shall exercise general supervision over the public school system and such other public educational institutions as assigned by law. Said board shall consist of seven members appointed by the governor with confirsation of the senate to six year overlapping terms. The governor and state superintendent of public instruction shall be ex officio non-voting members of the board. The duties of the superintendent of public instruction shall be prescribed by law.

Section 11. BOARD OF REGENTS OF HIGHER EDUCATION. There shall be a board of regents of higher education, a body corporate, which shall govern and control the academic, financial, and administrative affairs of the Montana university system, and shall supervise and coordinate other public educational institutions which may be assigned by law. Said board shall consist of seven members appointed by the governor to six year overlapping terms, subject to confirmation by the senate, under regulations provided by law. The board shall appoint its executive officer and prescribe his term and duties. The governor and superintendent of public instruction shall be ex officio non-voting members of this board.

Section 12. STATE UNIVERSITY FUNDS. The funds of the state university and of all other state institutions of learning, from whatever source accruing, shall forever remain inviolate and sacred to the purpose for which they were dedicated. The various funds shall be respectively invested under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and shall be guaranteed by the state against loss or diversion. The interest of said invested funds, together with the rents from leased lands or properties shall be devoted to the maintenance and perpetuation of these respective institutions.

COMMENTS ON MAJORITY PROPOSAL

Education occupies a place of cardinal importance in the public realm. The educational system is charged with the task of shaping and cultivating the mind of each succeeding generation and with developing the capacities for cultural and technical advancement of society. State and local governments devote a far larger share of their financial resources to the support of education than to any other singlepublic activity.

Because of this overriding importance of education, the committee recognizes the awesome task of providing the appropriate Constitutional provisions necessary to protect and nurture the public educational system. Each aspect of existing and proposed Constitutional language was thoroughly and deeply reflected upon by the committee in light of present and future needs. Fundamental to the committee's considerations were the twin goals of protecting the integrity of a quality educational system and allowing for flexibility to meet changes as yet unknown but which will certainly occur in future developments in the field of learning.

In light of these aims, the committee has preserved those provisions in the existing Constitution which have proven worth and which pose no hinderance to potential developments. On the other hand, the committee has made revisions in these places where it saw a definite need for constitutional improvement. Some of these changes have to do with basic aims of the educational system; others are concerned with structural or administrative adaptations to changing conditions in education. The most significant revisions are a clear statement of educational goals of the state, a mandate for the support of education allowing increased financial flexibility, deletion of antiquatsd age and school term restriction, and a revised administrative structure for both the public school system and for higher education.

The committee views these proposed changes as vital to the quality and efficiency of education in Montana. The proposed article provides appropriate guarantees to the viability of the public school system, while leaving the way open to future transformations in the educationalprocess.

> Section 1. EDUCATIONAL GOALS AND DUTIES OF THE STATE. It shall be the goal of the people of Montana to provide for the establishment of a system of education which will develop the full educational potential of each person. Equality of educational opportunity shall be guaranteed to each person of the state.
> The legislature shall provide for a system of high quality free public elementary and secondary schools. The legislature may also provide for other educational institutions, public libraries and educational programs as are deemed desirable. It shall he the duty of the legislature to provide by taxation or other means and to distribute in an equitable manner funds sufficient to insure full funding of the public elementary and secondary school system.

COMMENTS

The proposed section by the committee would replace sections 1, 6 and 7 of the existing Constitution. The committee desires to broaden the goals set forth for an educational system beyond those which might have been appropriate for public schools at the time of writing the existing Constitution. The horizons of education are constantly expanding. There has been a growing recognition of educational rights which extend beyond arbitrary age and school term limitations. Society has accepted the duty to support a quality educational system, and courts have stressed that it must be made available on approximately equal terms. Thus, the committee proposes a new section which takes into account the widened perspectives embodied in these developments.

The first sentence, "It shall be the goal of the people of Montana to provide for the establishment of a system of education which will develop the full educational potential of each person," is appropriate as a statement of purpose for education in the state. Learning is gradually being recognized as a process which extends from the early months till the late years of life. A long range goal of the state should be to foster and support this learning process for all citizens to the maximum level possible in any given era. The committee realizes that economic and human resources may be insufficient at present to promote learning "to the full educational potential of each person," but it feels strongly that the goal should be set forth as an ideal to serve as a guide for educational development in the state. All members of society should be ultimately eligible for the benefits of enlightenment and skills acquired through the educational process.

The subject of "equal educational opportunity" has become a particularly important doctrine in modern education. Recent federal, district and state court decisions have interpreted the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution as applying to educational financing. Under this doctrine, the state must show a compelling interest to maintain a classification system by wealth which interferes with the individual's fundamental right to an education. By this standard the courts have ruled that the school district financing systems in four states violate equal protection.

Montana's school financing system is similar to those declared unconstitutional in the states where challenges have been made. The same vast discrepancies in tax burdens and educational support exist in Montana as exist elsewhere. A recent study by the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (A Study of Basic Educational Program Funding Methodology in Montana, January 1972) shows that Montana school district wealth per ANB varies by as much as a ratio of 10,000 to 1. The enormous differences in tax bases mean that many rich districts can provide much better education facilities with lower tax rates. Some poor districts must tax their residents three or four times as much as rich districts to provide less than half as much money per student. Clearly, the existing school foundation program in Montana does not attain its aim of equalizing educational burdens and benefits. Indeed, the study shows that in the state as a whole, foundation program expenditures actually subsidize wealthier districts more than poorer districts, aggravating factors which already tend to make education a function of wealth.

This conforms to a national pattern in which states spend on the average twice as much to educate the children of the rich as to educate the children of the poor. Other forms of barriers to equal educational opportunity, such as cultural or linguistic factors in minority groups, may also hinder the development of children on an equal basis. Clearly the educational system must be directed to the elimination of blatant injustices which may predetemine a lifelong disadvantage. The principle of equal educational opportunity, as a corollary to the right to equal protection of the laws, stands as a fundamental maxim for the public educational system.

It has been suggested that Constitutional statement of equal educational opportunity might be a mandate for the attainment of an impossible ideal, and that such a statement of principle could open the door to a welter of demands for making public education absolutely equal for every person in society on every level. This interpretation, however, would represent an extreme and absurd misconstruction of the meaning of the principle. The principle of "equal educational opportunity" is no more an abstract absolute than is the right to "equal protection of the laws" or any other Constitutionally guaranteed right or freedom. No right is absolute; each must be considered in connection with other rights and freedoms and in terms of the social context to which it is applied.

In keeping with the rational articulated in Serrano v. Priest and other court decisions in this area, the committee agrees with the exemplary words of a landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision:

In these days, it is doubtful that any child may > reasonably be expected to succeed in life if he is denied the opportunity of an education. Such an opportunity, where the state has undertaken to provide it, is a right which must be made available to all On equal terms. [Brown v. Board of Education. 347 U.S. 493 (1954)]

Likewise, the California Supreme Court held:

> [I]ts unigueness among public activities clearly demonstrates that education must respond to the command of the equal protection. [Serrano v. Priest, 96 Cal 601]

Both Brown and Serrano attacked the substantial disparities in the educational systems under review and concluded that neither race nor wealth could be used to impair the equal right of children to an education. Neither of these cases mandated some sort of precise equality of sducaticn for the entire lifespan of the human being. The fundamental principle established, however, is that every child should have approximately the same opportunity to receive an adequate basic education. What this means in practice will be legislatively defined in terms of prevailing social conditions.

The sentence "the legislature shall provide for a system of high quality free' public elementary and secondary schools," is a mandate to the legislature to insure the existence of a quality basic educational system. The word "quality" is an instruction to the legislature to provide not simply a minimum educational system, but one which meets contemporary needs and produced capable, well-informed citizens. The word "free" is understood by the committee to mean that those aspects of an elementary or secondary education shall be free from cost which are essential to those courses required by the school for graduation.

The committee also believes that other educational institutions and programs and libraries are important parts of educational activity in the state. The particular sorts of institutions and programs, however, must be left for the legislature to determine, since changing conditicas may require a variety of endaavors.

The final sentencein section 1 provides a vital mandate to the legislature for the support of the public school system. The committee feels that a strong directive is necessary to insure the support of the public elementary and secondary school system. The particular type of financing system is a matter properly left to legislative determination, but the fundamental principles upon which such a system is based are matters of a Constitutional nature. The committee specifies three tenets of a school financing system: (1) that taxation for such a system be equitably apportioned; (2) that the school funds be distributed in an equal manner; and (3) that the funds supplied be sufficient to insure full funding of the system.

The first two of these principles follow from the meaning of "equal educational opportunity." Two aspects of equal opportunity have been emphasized in the judicial decisions: equality of tax burden for the support of fducation and equality of distribution of educational funds. A wide variety of particular school financing plans, from a wholly state-financed program to a plan for substantial redistricting, have bean suggested to meet these criteria. The selection of which plan best suits the situation in Montana is a matter for the legislature to decide. The Constitutional language solely established norms for the evaluation of such plans.

The third principle set forth by the committee, that of full funding, is a mandate to insure that the public school system will exist On a plane of equal quality rather than of equal poverty. The maxim of "full funding" is intended by the committee to require the establishment of the school system on a realistic basis.

Once the needs for a tasic quality system of elementary and secondary schools have been realistically assessed, the state has the obligation to guarantee that this minimum tasic program be fully funded. This requirment would substitute rationality and equity for the confusion and injustice which have often plagued school finance systems in the Fast.

> Section 2. PUBIIC SCHCCL FUNC. The public schccl fund of the state shall consist of the proceeds of such lands as have heretofore been granted, or may hereafter be granted, to the state by the general government known as school lands; and ttcse granted in lieu of such; lands acquired by gift or grant from any person or corporation under any law or grant of the general government; and of all other grants of lard or money made to the state from the general government for general educational purposes, or where no other special purpose is indicated in such grant; all estates, or distributive shares of estates that may escheat to the state; all unclaimed shares and dividends of any corporation incorporated under the laws of the state, and all other grants, gifts, devises or bequests made to ths state for general educational purposes.

COMMENTS

In securing assured sources of support for the educational system, the committee agreed that Constitutional protection should be supplied to the public schccl fund. section 2 in the existing Constitution has provided this protection ty itemizing the components of the fund and unequivccafly specifying that these contributing funds shall be used for education. The name

"public schcol fur:" which appears in this sectiон is adcpted as the name tc be used consistently hereafter in the Ccnstitutiсn.

Sectiсn 3. PUBLIC SCHCCI 'FUEL: INVIOLATE. The public schcol fund shall fcrever remain inviclate, guaranteed by the state against lcss cf diversiсn, tc be invested under the restrictions to be prcvided by law.

COMMENTS

This sectiсn is identical tc section 3 cf the existing Ccn-stituticc, with the exceptiсn that the Ccnstitaticnal investment restrictions are removed. The ccmmittee is cf the opinicr that the investment policy fcr the public fund is properly a legis-lative matter. Beycnd guaranteeing the irviclatf character cf the fund, a Constitutional prcvisiсn cannot anticipate investment policies appropriate tc charging conditiсns. Mcrecver, the existing language, "to be invested, sc far as pcssible, in public securities within the state, including schccl district bends, issued for the erection cf schcol buildings," is both ambiguous and cverly restrictive. The benefit tc the schcols might be much greater if in any given period the public schccl fund were ctber-wise securely invested. Flexibility requires that such policy decisiсns be madeby the legislature.

Sectiсn 4. BOARD CF LAND CCMMISSIONERS. The gcver-nor, superinterdent cf public instructiсn, secretary cf state and attorney general shall ccnstitute the state board of land ccmmissicners, which shall have the directiсn, control, leasing, exchange acd sale cf the schcol lards cf the state, and the lands granted or which may hereafter be granted fcr the support and ben-efit of the various state educational institutions, under such regulaticns and restricticns as may be pre-scribed by law.

COMMENTS

This section remains almost unchanged from the original Ccn-stitutiсn. A board composed cf fcur elective officials, the governcr, superintendent of public instructiсn, attorney general, and secretary cf state, serves an important functiсn in supervis-ing the management of the state schccl lands and the income derived frcm these lands. The board while cperating under this Constitutional provisiсn, has wcrked well in the past and wculd appear tc be able tc do the same fcr the fcrseeable future. The only change deemed desirable at this time is the addition of the word "exchange*' to the list of activities within the board's power. The need for this has become evident in cases where the state has been prevented from makirg advantagecns exchanges cf land by the omission of this power from the Present Constitutional provision.

The committee also considered revising the membership of the board, and particularly reducing the number of members to three by the omission of the Secretary of State, but decided that the four Constitutionally named elective officers were an important source of direct popular control and that an even-numbered board requiring a majority of three for a decision would emphasize the principle of caution over that of expediency.

> Section 5. PUBLIC SCHOOL FUND REVENUE. Ninety-five per centum (95%) of all the interest received on the school funds of the state, and nicety-rive per centum (95%) of all rents received from the leasing of school lands and of all other income from the Public school funds shall be equitably apportioned annually to Public elementary and secondary schools as provided by law.
> The remaining five per centum (5%) of all the interest receivedon the schcol funds of the state, and the remaining five per centum (5%) of all the rents received from the leasing of schcol lands and of all other income from the public school funds, shall annually he added to the Public schocl funds of the state and become and forever remain an inseparable and inviolable part thereof.

COMMENTS

The proposed section 5 is a shortened and revised version of section 5 in the present Constitution. The intent of the provision, to Constitutionally protect the interest and income from the public school fund, is important; however the particular restrictions as to its distribution to schools are considered obsolete in light of present conditions. The language concerning the portions to 'be distributed and that which is to be reinvested remains the same as in the Present Constitution. The methods of distribution previously specified are replaced ty a general phrase "shall be equitably apportioned annually to elementary and secondary schools as provided by law."

The replacement language provides the desired flexibility to the legislature todevelop school financing programs in tune with current necessities. Particularly relevant to this change is the trend across the nation, in accordance with recent court decisions under the equal protection doctrine, to provide more equitable school financing systems. The "flat grant" type of aid provided under the old method of distributing income and interest to all schcol districts cn a census tasis is clearly anti-equalizing under the standards discussed ir the commfntary to section 1. By specifying only that the distribution must be "equitable" the new language allows the legislature to determine the type of distribution which will attain this goal.

Restrictions in the form of specified districts, age, and school terms which may have been applicable at the time of writing of the 1889 Constitution, are no longer meaningful. Rather than attempt to apply new restrictions more in keeping with the contemporary school system, the committee determined that it was preferable to allow for changing needs as interpreted by the legislature by designating only a broad standard, namely "equitably apportioned as provided by law."

A further element in the distribution system authorized by the existing provision is the specification that the interest and income money be distributed to the "several school districts." This has been interpreted in the past to mean that funds deriving from this source be granted only to elementary schools, presumably because elementary schools were the only public schools in existence at the time when this provision was written. In keeping with its intention to expand legislative possibilities in educational finance, as discussed in the commentary on section 1 the committee has replaced the phrase "several school districts: with "public elementary and secondary schools." This could change the existing distribution system to include high schools as recipients of interest and income money. The immediate result is anticipated by the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction to result in a net saving of administrative costs to the state. (See appendix E.)

> Section 6. AID PROHIBITED TO SECTARIAN SCHOOLS. Neither the legislative assembly, nor any county, city, town, or school district, or other public corporations, shall ever make directly or indirectly, any appropriation, or pay from any public fund or monies whatever, or make any grant of lands or other property in aid of any church, or for any sectarian purpose, or to aid in ths support of any school, academy, seminary, college, university, or other literary, scientific iastitution, controlled in whole or in Fart by any church, sect or denomination whatever.

COMMENTS

After long and serious consideration, a majority of the committee decided to retain the section in the existing Constitution (Article XI, section 8) which strongly prohibits direct or indirect aid from any public fund of the state to any sectarian educational institution or for any sectarian purpose. The committee recognizes the merit and thoughtfulness of arguments offered for and against any change in this section, but agrees fundamentally that any alteration in wording might jeopardize the precarious historical balance which has been struck between opposing doctrines and countervailing principles.

The following major points are the most important reasons for the committee's decision:

(1) The primary and significant advantage secured by the present provision is the unequivocal support it provides for a strong public school system. The traditional separation between church and state, an important part of the American social framework, has also become a fundamental Principle of American education. The growth of a strong, universal, and free educational system in the United States has been due in part to its exclusively public character. Under federal and state mandates to concentrate public funds in Public schools, the educational system has grown strong in an atmosphere free from divisiveness and fragmentation. Any diversion of funds or effort from the public school system would tend to weaken that system in favor of schools established for private or religious purposes.

(2) Education is primarily a function of the state and is properly regulated by the state. The state is therefore free to impose its own restrictions and rules upon the use of Public funds for education. Although the Montana Provision is more stringently prohibitive than is the federal First Amendment and provisions in some other states. this is within a state's prerogative. 6 state may prohibit forms of state aid which might be permissible under federal Supreme Court rulings.

(3) Any change in the present provision, whether substantial or merely formal, might endanger passage of the entire Constitution. The church-state issue, which is interwoven with the question of public aid to nonpublic schools, stirs deeply held emotional feelings in various sectors of the public. The emotionalism aroused over potential debates on this question might obscure other important issues in education and in the Constitution as a whole. The change in this area proposed in New York's 1967 Constitution is thought to have been a significant contributing factor to the Constitution's defeat at the polls. A large number of witnesses, representing various religious and nonreligious organizations, testified emphatically against any change in the present provision.

(4) public aid to sectarian schools which might result from a relaxation of the prohibition also poses a potential threat to religion. The control which comes with aid could excessively involve the state in religious matters and could inadvertently favor one religious group over another. Several witnesses testified that they opposed aid not only from the standpoint of the protection of the state from religious influence but also from the standpoint of the protection of religion from political influence.

The above reasons apply to the decision by the majority of the committee to preserve the present provision, rather than to adopt the language of the federal First Amendment or make any other change in the existing provision.

A second alternative considered by the committee was to exclude federal funds administered by the state from the applicability of the provision. A fundamental concern expressed by some witnesses before the committee was that some forms of federal aid to nonpublic schools, particularly of the type envisaged in "revenue sharing" programs, are or would be prohibited under the existing provision. The committee does not agree that this poses a realistic problem. As indicated in Appendix F, students in nonpublic educational institutions in the state are now receiving the benefit of a significant amount of federal aid, some of which is administered by the state. It is the majority of committee's opinion that presently operating federal aid programs in education are not being significantly affected by the constitutional provision. As to future federal programs, the committee feels that precedent shows that potential problems can be resolved uithcut a change in the institutional provision. No specific case was brought to the committee's attention in which federally granted funds have been denied in Montana to nonpublic schools because of the operation of the existing Constitutional provision.

> Section 7. NON-DISCRIMINATION IN EDUCATION. No religious or partisan test or qualification shall ever be required of any person as a condition of admission into any public educational institution of the state, either as teacher or student; nor shall attendance be required at any religious service whatever, nor shall any sectarian tenets be taught in any public educational institution of the state; nor shall any person be debarred admission to any public institution of learning on account of sex, race, creed, religion or national origin.

COMMENTS

This section is a broadened version of the present section 9. A statement specifically banning discriminatory practices in education provides a necessary specification with respect to teachers and students of nondiscrimination principles broadly articulated in the Bill of Rights. The committee feels that the principle set forth in the last sentence of the present section i.e., "nor shall any person be debarred admission to any of the collegiate departments of the university or account of sex," represents an arbitrary limitation on the general principle of nondiscrimination in admission policies. The committee has therefore broadened the language to include all public educational institutions under the protection of the provision and to prohibit other kinds of possible discrimination.

The committee also considered carefully the language of the phrase, "nor shall any sectarian tenets be taught in any public educational institution," and decided against any change in wording. There has been no record of difficulty in the interpretation of the meaning of this provision, which clearly is not intended to restrict objective learning about religious principles, but rather to prohibit the active promotion in a public school of religion or of any particular religious doctrine. The existing language adequately expresses this principle.

Section 8. SCHOOL ELECTIONS. The legislative assembly shall provide for elections of school district trustees.

COMMENTS

This section is similar to section 10 of the existing Constitution, but changes its effect. The original intent of the present section 10 was to segregate school elections from partisan elections. The committee feels that there are other reasons which negate this original intent and which dictate that decisions on this matter should be of a legislative rather than a Constitutional nature. First, it is questionable whether the holding of separate elections has the effect of insulating school issues from partisan ones. Other nonpartisan issues and candidates appear on the same ballot with partisan ones. Moreover, partisanship of various sorts may play a role in a school election whether held separately or not. At least one locality in Montana officially recognizes special parties just for the purposes of such school elections.

Secondly, the holding of separate school elections causes most localities a great deal of extra expense which could be better spent on education itself. One delegate informed the committee that her community spent $10,000 or more on every school election. The committee feels that such expenses are needless, particularly if the separate election does not accomplish its intended aims.

The proposed new section thus allows for flexibility by leaving the specification of election dates to the legislature, but it still reaffirms the importance of a Constitutional mandate that such elections shall continue to be held. The committee understands the vital importance of the principle of local control of schools and desires to insure the continuation of the system of local election of school trustees. These local school elections are an essential and irreplaceable part of the education system and their existence must be constitutionally guaranteed.

Section 9. STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION. The board of public education and the board of regents of higher education, as hereafter designated shall together constitute the state board of education which shall meet periodically on matters of mutual concern. In cast of a tie vote at such meeting the superintendent of public instruction may cast 3 vote.

COMMENTS

Sections 9, 10, and 11 of the proposed new article deal with the state administrative structure for education. Together, these sections provide a substantially revised framework for the operation of the educational system. Under the authority of section 11 of the existing Constitution, a single state board of education presently exercises "supervision and control" over the entire state educational system, sitting as the state board of education on matters concerning the public school system and as ex officio board of regents on university matters. The proposed sections would replace this structure with two boards which would separately supervise higher education and the public school system, but would meet jointly as the state board of education on matters of mutual concern.

The proposed structure would provide a much needed reform in the administration of education in Montana. The state board of education, as it presently exists, operates under a provision written at a time (1889) when the educational system was fundamentally different from what it is today. The educational system of Montana in the nineteenth century consisted only of primary grammar schools and a newly founded state university. Today it consists of a universal system of elementary and secondary schools and a public higher educational system composed of two major universities, four colleges, and three community colleges. In 1889 there were less than 12,000 students in the public educational system; in 1970 there were more than 200,000 students enrolled. At the time statehood was granted Montana, the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction consisted of the superintendent and a clerk who performed mainly information-gathering functions in connection with local districts; at present the office has a staff of 162 and administers more than 352 million funds for a vast array of state educational programs.

The provision for a board which was appropriate to the 1889 situation is clearly not appropriate today. It is not even clear that the state board of education was ever intended to serve as the board for the Entire educational system. The phrase, "and the various other state educational institutions" in the existing section 11, appears to refer only to what are commonly thought to be state-run institutions, i.e. state normal schools, school for the deaf and blind, and so forth. It was only by virtue of a Montana Supreme Court interpretation of this phrase in State v. Cooney (132 Mont. 521 [1936]) that this section was specifically ruled to apply to the elementary and secondary school system.

II! practice, the state board cf education has devoted the great majority of its time tc matters of higher educaticn. Cne important study of Montana educaticn cbserves that there is a kind cf informal division cf labcr between the board and the state superintendent, such that the lower rchccls are looked after by the superintendent and that the tcard sees its duties primarily in the field cf higher education. The study ccrcludes:

> 'The result is that the board's functicrs in public education become mcre cf the nature of "trcuble shocting" and too little cf consistent lcng-range planning, policy formulaticn, appraisal, and the like. (Montana Taxaticr-Educaticn Commission, Public Schccls cf Montana, 1558. p.2).

Cne major reascn, therefcre, fcr the creaticn cf a tuc-board structure is the establishment cf a L-card that will be specifically qualified for and ccncerned with the prcblems of elementary and seccndary education and otter institutions which may be assigned by law. The correlate of this structure is the establishment of a separate board for higher education which will be similarly qualified for and attuned tc the particular problems cf higher educaticn.

The necessary cccrdinaticn between these two separate bcards would cccur in the jciat tcard prcvided fcr in the proposed sectiсn 9. This joint board, the state bcard cf educaticn, would meet periodically tc act cn matters cf mutual ccncern to both sectors of educaticn.

Further reasons for the recrganizatiсn cf the bcards cf educaticn are presented in the fcllcwing secticrs.

> Section 15. BOARD CF PUBLIC EDUCATICN. There shall be a board cf public educaticn which shall exercise general supervisicn cver the public schccl system and such other public educational institutions as assigned by law. Said board shall ccnsist cf seven members appcinted by the governor with cccfiruaticn cf the senate to six year cverlapping terms. The governor and the state superintendent of public instruction shall be ex officio ncn-voting members of the bcard. The duties of the superintendent cf public instructicn shall be prescribed by law.

This sectiсn creates the bcard cf public educaticn and prescribesits membership and responsibility. As described in the comments to the preceding sectiсn, the greatly expanded activities, personnel, and funding involved in elementary and secondary educaticn require that this crucial sector cf education have its own administrative bcard. The largest share cf state funds for any cne purpose go to elementary and seccndary education. The state administers over 25 major federal prcgrams in education. The kinds cf education needed and offered are cccstantly changing and expanding. A board which is to cope adequately with this vast area of responsibilities must consist of members who are qualified and who have sufficient time to become knowledgeable about the particular problems and issues of public education. A board is no more capable than is a superintendent of being competent to administer two fundamentally different areas of education.

The need for a separate board for public education promises to become even greater in the future. The present trends indicate the assumption of much greater role in educational financing by state and federal governments, possibly as much as 90 percent or more of total public school costs. Other trends also suggest an increasing centralization in education. This means an even greater degree of potential control of education at the state level. A well-informed and representative board would provide a much-needed balance to decisions on administrative policies.

A large majority of witnesses who testified on the subject, including key state officials and many educators, spoke in favor of the two-board concept. They agreed that both from the standpoint of public education and from that of higher education, the separation of functions is eminently sensible. A former chairman of the state board of education, a long-time distinguished member of the board, articulated the position of many:

> Please give every consideration to a two-board system. Frankly, even the most capable, dedicated board member finds it impossible to do justice to the total assignment. (Letter from Mr. M. E. Richard, February 15, 1972).

Numerous studies of the Montana educational system have recommended the creation of two boards. A legislative council report in 1963 resulted in the proposal for a Constitutional amendment to create two boards. The amendment was passed by the legislature but kept off the ballot for other reasons. The Legislative Council's recommendation, which was based on previous studies, offered the following major justification for a two-board system:

> Increased demands on our educational facilities due to a growing population and inflationary pressures require that the responsibility for the administration of our educational system be divided into two boards, a Board of Education whose responsibility would be primary and secondary education, and a Board of Regents whose responsibility would be higher education. There is a limit to the amount of time a lay board member can devote to these responsibilities. The overwhelming responsibility placed on board members has prevented them from devoting adequate time to the consideration of policy questions. (Montana Legislative Council, Higher Education, Report Number 5, Helena, 1960, p. 1).

The fear has been expressed that a separate board for public education might usurp the powers of local boards. There is no reason to be concerned about such a possibility, however, since the powers granted the state board would be almost identical to those now granted. Indeed, the committee has actually deleted the word "control" from the powers now granted the board so that the new section reads, "exercise general supervision over the public school system." It would be difficult to argue that this grants any additional powers to the state board at the expense of local school boards.

Under existing law, vocational-technical centers will remain within the public school system and thus under the jurisdiction of the board of public education. Witnesses from the "vo-tech" field assured the committee that this was their preference at the present time. However, the language of this section and of the new section 11 allows sufficient flexibility so that, should conditions change, these institutions could be accommodated in the system of higher education.

The voting members of the board would consist of seven members selected by the governor for six-year overlapping terms. The governor and superintendent retain ex officio membership on the board but in a nonvoting capacity. The committee feels that the elective officials should be separate from board decision-making, but should retain membership on the board for informational and coordinating purposes.

The committee feels that the duties of the superintendent should be legislatively prescribed, to allow for changing conditions and possible alterations of the relationship between the board and the superintendent. It is fully expected by the committee that the office of the superintendent of public instruction will be provided for in the executive article. A majority of the committee feels strongly that the superintendent should be elected, and the committee has structured the educational article with this notion in mind. An elected superintendent provides a necessary direct link to the people which is important to the educational system.

> Section 11. BOARD OF REGENTS OF HIGHER EDUCATION. There shall be a board of regents of higher education, a body corporate, which shall govern and control the academic, financial, and administrative affairs of the Montana university system, and shall supervise and coordinate other public educational institutions which may be assigned by law. Said board shall consist of seven members appointed by the governor to six year overlapping terms, subject to confirmation by the senate, Under regulations provided by law. The board shall appoint its executive officer and prescribe his term and duties. The governor and superintendent of public instruction shall be ex officio non-voting members of this board.

COMMENTS

The second fundamental component of the proposed new state administrative structure for education is a board of regents of higher education. The same reasons which apply to the need for specialization and concentration on the public school board hold also for the board of regents. Higher education is fundamentally different from public school education--in goals, curriculum, financing, control, and operation--and it must be administered accordingly. There is very little in common between the public school system and higher education, other than a shared need to provide a smooth transition for students between the two systems.

A recognition of the particular needs and problems of higher education has led all but two states to establish separate state governing boards for higher education. Montana and Idaho remain the only two states which retain a single board for both public schools and the university system. Some states have more than two boards for their educational systems, and the generally recognized principle is that different educational tasks require different administrative structures.

As noted in the comments to the previous section, major studies of education in Montana have recommended the creation of two separate boards. The Durham Report on higher education (G. Homer Durham, The Administration of Higher Education in Montana, Helena, Montana, Legislative Council, 1958), for instance, described the difficulties of a state board which was unable to deal satisfactorily with both areas of education. As a result of the recommendation of the Durham Report, the legislature passed a law which divided the board into two parts, one of which sits as the state board of education, and one of which sits as the ex officio board of regents. This name-shuffling, however, has done little to alleviate the difficulty inherent in a dualistic board.

In addition to administrative questions, another fundamental reason exists for the establishment of a separate board of regents of higher education. Higher education is not simply another state service; the administrative structure of higher education cannot be considered an ordinary state agency. The unique character of the college and university stands apart from the business-as-usual of the state. Higher learning and research is a sensitive area which requires a particular kind of protection not matched in other administrative functions of the state.

Few would dispute the vital importance of academic freedom to the process of higher learning. Such freedom is the essence of the American higher educational system. Only in an atmosphere of independent and unfettered inquiry can an objective pursuit of knowledge be conducted which is unhindered by prejudice and vested interest. The great contributions to both scientific and humanistic learning which have emerged from American colleges and universities can be attributed in large part to the freedom traditionally enjoyed by the teachers and students in such institutions.

This was the idea implicit in the founding of both private and public colleges and universities in the United States, and it is an idea which still prevails. The society as a whole accepts the principle unreservedly; rarely does a direct attack come upon the concept of free inquiry. However, a more subtle kind of coercion has made its appearance, and it is of the sort which is likely to become an even greater threat to the integrity of higher education in the future. This is the growing power of the centralized, bureaucratic state. Without overtly intending to curtail freedoms, the modern state has absorbed an increasing amount of power and control in the name of efficiency. A pervasive form of influence and manipulation has grown hand in hand with the emerging predominance of the government form and the computer.

A warning of this social trend was voiced in a landmark study of the condition of the American university conducted in the late 1950's under the chairmanship of Dr. Milton Eisenhower under a Ford Foundation grant. The study described a variety of creeping controls on university systems which have appeared in recent years across the country. It warns that, "strict" adherence by institutions of higher learning to a bewildering array of centralized bureaucratic controls will ultimately endanger the academic as well as the administrative freedom of the college" (Malcom Moos and Francis E. Rourke, The Campus and the State, Baltimore: The John Hopkins Press, 1959. p.6.). Among the sources of growing controls which increasingly impinge on universities are state budget offices, state auditors, comptrollers, purchasing departments, personnel offices, central building agencies, and a variety of older forms of control, such as legislative riders, which are being used in new ways to affect colleges and universities. The informal controls associated with these direct means often exert an even stronger influence on the educational process.

The study concludes that the maintenance of the system of higher education free from unnecessary bureaucratic and political interference is important not only to a healthy academic atmosphere but also to the administrative efficiency of the system of higher education:

> Creative research, by its very nature, requires freedom to move in a different direction if the facts uncovered require it. The farther away budget authority lies and the more time-consuming it is to get permission for > such changes, the less will be accomplished. Research and instruction at the higher levels, are not services for which specifications can be written in advance, and for which one seeks the lowest bidder. They are venture capital investments where one successful strike in a multitude, either in the form of a new ideal, or a trained individual capable of producing them, may spell the difference between a forward-moving or a retrograding nation. (p. 316)

The power to coordinate and operate the system of higher education is one which belongs properly to an informed board of regents who have the knowledge and ability to determine rationally the course of higher education. Master plans have been suggested for the guidance of higher education in Montana but have failed to be applied because of a lack of power on the part of the board for their implementation. A board of regents empowered to carry out its informed judgments would be an important force for efficiency in the higher educational system.

It is this factor of efficiency which is highlighted in the study chaired by Dr. Eisenhower. The primary conclusion of the study is that freedom actually enhances efficient operation of a university system:

> [T]he fact that higher education very largely owes its autonomous position in state government to the belief that freedom promotes rather than limits efficiency.
> .....
> In the future there is one point that colleges and universities will need to make to the public and its elected representatives very persuasively. This is simply that the goal of efficiency in higher education can be realized without noneducational officials intervening in the fiscal affairs of colleges and universities. (pp. 313, 318)

Two factors in particular add to the efficiency of a university system which is relatively free to control its own affairs: long-range planning and administrative decentralization. There is a clear need for a strong board of regents to make long-range plans which are appropriate to the needs of higher education and free from short-term political whims. The limits of centralization in government operations have become apparent; particularly in such an unpredictable and flexible field as higher education, local and regional decision-making has demonstrated a greater efficiency than have ultra-centralized management techniques.

A board of regents which is given the power to control and manage its own affairs would enormously improve the planning situation for higher education in Montana. At present duplication and inter-institutional rivalry for funds is the rule. Under the proposed system the board of regents would submit a unified budget to the legislature for action. Competition for funds which now occurs in the legislative halls would be resolved in advance by the board, which would have in mind a broad view of higher education. Similarly, the board would be in a position with knowledge and authority to eliminate wasteful duplication of courses and other endeavors which now drain university funds. Academic and administrative time which is now wasted in a multi-level budgeting process would be spared. Hard decisions concerning direction and operation of the entire university system could be made intelligently and objectively by such a board.

With these considerations in mind, the committee has developed the proposal for a board of regents of higher education embodied in section 11. The proposed board would fulfill the requirements for specialization, freedom, and efficiency described above. The board would have corporate status and would be charged with the function of controlling the academic, financial, and administrative affairs of the Montana university system. These are the characteristics and powers which such a board must necessarily have in order to be effective in carrying out the purposes for which it is designed.

In designating the board of regents a body corporate, the committee intends that the board be considered a legal entity which has powers as a board rather than as individuals and which is perpetuated as a separate administrative entity. With such status, the board gains a legal status appropriate to its task. One study notes:

> Many would interpret the granting of corporate status to a university as the highest achievement and fullest recognition of the independence of higher education. It is an acknowledgment of the freedom for objective inquiry necessary for an institution of higher education. [Hawaii, Legislative Reference Bureau, Hawaii Constitutional Convention Studies, Article IX: Education (Higher Education), Vol. 2, Honolulu: 1968, p. 8.]

As a Constitutional corporation, the board of regents would be presumed to exercise managerial control over its own internal affairs. Extensive studies which have been done on the Constitutional status of boards of higher education indicate that the particular determination of powers and responsibilities of a board for a given state depend to a large degree on the particular history and academic structure in that state. (See especially Charles H. Cashmore, Barry L. Hjort, and Ronald R. Lodders, Constitutional Authority for Higher Education: A Legal Analysis, report submitted to the Education and Public Lands Committee, Montana Constitutional Convention, 1971).

It is interesting to note that the Montana Constitution of 1884 named the board "The Regents of the University of Montana" and designated it a "body corporate" [Art. IX, sec. 12]. This language was changed when the concept of the state board was broadened in 1889 to include jurisdiction over other state educational institutions, [Art. XI, Sec. 8, Constitution of 1889].

Under the existing section 11, the Montana Supreme Court has declared that, "the board of education is a part of the executive department, and is but an agency of the state government" (State v. Brannon, 86 Mont. 206, 208 [1929]). In the same opinion, the court referred to the university as the "development arm" of the stats. It is the committee's view that this is not an adequate description of a state board of regents nor of the character or function of a university. The proposed section would establish the board and the university system in roles appropriate to a modern, free system of higher education.

The board of regents is also granted supervising and coordinating powers over other institutions of higher education as may be assigned by law. This distinction between board powers with respect to the university system and other institutions of higher education is of particular importance to community colleges, which are presently controlled by local boards. The language leaves flexibility to the legislature to respond to future developments in higher educatiocc. The membership and terms of the board are identical to those of the board of public education; however, in contrast to the lower board, the board of regents is authorized to appoint its own executive officer.

> Section 12. STATE UNIVERSITY FUNDS. The funds of the state university and of all other state institutions of learning, from whatever source accruing, shall forever remain inviolate and sacred to the purpose for which they were dedicated. The various funds shall be respectively invested under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and shall be guaranteed by the state against loss or diversion. The interest of said invested funds, together with the rents from leased lands or properties shall be devoted to the maintenance and perpetuation of these respective institutions.

COMMENTS

This section remains unchanged from section 12 of the existing Constitution. This provision has worked well in protecting the funds of the university system, and it is in accord with the conditions mandated in The Enabling Act for lands granted the university.

Section 3. The public school fund shall forever remain inviolate. The public school furd and the funds of the state university and of all other state institutions of learning, from whatever source accruing, shall be safely and conservatively invested in public securities with the state, or in bonds of the United States, or in other securities fully guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States, or in other such safe investments bearing a fixed rate of interest, as may be prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

A minority of the committee feels that, although unnecessary restrictions should be removed from the investment of state funds, nevertheless, security must be the predominant factor in the investment of school funds. To eliminate all restrictions except those adopted by statute would be to allow the school funds to come into possible jeopardy, in the case of, for instance, if the investment board were to emphasize the principle of growth over that of security. Due to the reliance of local districts upon an insured source of yearly funding, the minority feels that the greatest precautions must be taken in securing those public funds which are devoted to the support of education.

The minority, therefore, proposes that specific restrictions to guarantee the secure investment of school funds be included under section 3 of the proposed new article. This intention also requires a modification of the proposed article on investments. The addition of the phrase "not otherwise Constitutionally restricted" allows the requirements specified in the minority's proposed section 3 of the new Education article to be fulfilled.

MINORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED:

That the following be substituted for section 6 of the Majority Proposal of the Education and Public Lands Committee.

Section 6. AID PROHIBITED TO SECTARIAN SCHOOLS. Neither the legislative assembly, nor any county, city, town, or school district, or other public corporations, shall ever make directly any appropriation, or pay from any public fund or money whatever, or make any grant of lands or other property in aid of any church, or for any sectarian purpose, or to aid in the support of any school, academy, seminary, college, university, or other literary, scientific institution, controlled in whole or in part by any church, sect or denomination whatever. This section shall not apply to funds from federal sources provided to the state for the express purpose of distribution to non-public education.

Section 6. AID PROHIBITED TO SECTARIAN SCHOOLS. Neither the legislative assembly, nor any county, city, town, or school district, or other public corporations, shall ever make directly any appropriation, or pay from any public fund or monies whatever, or make any grant of lands or other property in aid of any church, or for any sectarian purpose, or to aid in the support of any school, academy, seminary, college, university, or other literary, scientific institution, controlled in whole or in part by any church, sect or denomination whatever. This section shall not apply to funds from federal sources provided to the state for the express purpose of distribution to non-public education.

COMMENTS

A minority of the committee proposes that the section 8 of the present Constitution be modified by deleting the words "Or indirectly" from the first sentence and that a new sentence be added at the end of the section to read as follows: "This section shall not apply to funds from federal sources provided to the state for the express purpose of distribution to nonpublic education."

The minority subscribes to the position expressed in the body of the majority proposal in which Equality of educational opportunity for all is stated as a primary goal. It is the conviction of the minority that this goal amounts to a hollow promise, unless some provision is made in our Constitution which will protect the rights of that sector of our society which is engaged in nonpublic education. There are presently 11,645 elementary and secondary students, or 6.3% of the total elementary and secondary students of the state enrolled in nonpublic schools. A total of 2,775 students, or 10% of the total higher education students of the state, are enrolled in nonpublic institutions of higher learning.

It is common knowledge that many nonpublic institutions are facing extreme difficulties in financing their institutions. Nationally, in 1950 over 50 percent of university and college students were enrolled in nonpublic institutions. In 1969 this figure had dropped to 28 percent. many nonpublic elementary and secondary schools are also being forced to close.

Due to school closures, since 1964-65 the number of students enrolled in nonpublic elementary and secondary schools in Montana has dropped from 19,878 to 10,579, a cut in enrollment of almost half. In the same period 22 of the previous total of 64 nonpublic schools were forced to close their doors. (See Appendix G).

In an age when the state exercises vast economic powers and when inflationary pressures are rising, the hopes for the survival of any nonpublic educational institutions become increasingly dim.

The result is not only a denial of educational opportunity and diversity, but also a significantly greater drain on public revenue than would be the case if the schools were allowed to survive through the types of aids permitted under the federal First Amendment. An example of the increased costs to taxpayers resulting from the closing of nonpublic schools is that of the recent closing of parochial schools (334 high school students; 160 junior high students; 336 elementary students) in Helena. The additional costs which resulted in Helena from the displacement of students from nonpublic to public schools without any increase in tax base has been estimated to be approximately $1,767,600 over the Fast three-year period (based on bond issue, permissive levy, voted amount, and deficiency). This does not include the additional cost to the state foundation program for the support of the additional students. In the state as a whole the estimated savings to state taxpayers resulting from students educated in nonpublic elementary and secondary schools is approximately $6,000,000 per year. A table showing the state-wide savings to taxpayers is included in Appendix H.

In a time when the nation's courts are insisting on education as a fundamental and basic right, and that equality of educational opportunity be measured by a corresponding equality of financial expenditure, it is incongruous to retain a Constitutional statement that might deprive a significant segment of our students of any aid available which might help to equalize their educational opportunity.

Education is by its very nature a public purpose. This is the reason why the state involves itself so fully in accrediting and setting standards for both public and nonpublic schools. The ability of a student to receive a secular education should not be hampered by his religious or other beliefs. Incidental aid which might accrue to religiously connected institutions should not preclude the major benefit to the child of the receipt of an education, any more than religiously affiliated hospitals should be denied public assistance because of possible indirect aid to a church.

Section 8 of the existing Constitution is among the most restrictive, if not the most restrictive, such Constitutional provision in the nation. In addition to a complete ban listing all possible sources of public aid to sectarian schools or for sectarian purposes (which is identical to the most strirgently worded provisions in several other states), the Montana provision adds the words "directly or indirectly". This precludes even the kind of student benefit aid which has been accepted by the Federal Supreme Court.

It is the belief of the minority that the language contained in section 8 of the present Constitution is unnecessarily stringent and poses a serious threat to the educational rights of students attending nonpublic educational institutions. The financing of education in America in the future is in a state of flux but there is every indication that the federal government will become increasingly involved. A recent study by the National Educational Finance Project concludes:

> Whatever federal grants are made in the days ahead, they should not by-pass state governments; instead, federal grants for public schools should be made to the state educational agency for allocation to local schools in accordance with state plans. (National Educational Finance Project, Future Directions for School Financing, Gainesville, Florida: 1971, p. 35.)

Should revenue sharing, block grants, and other forms of federal financing, yet to be devised, fall within the jurisdiction of state control, nonpublic educational institutions might be seriously affected if such funds had to be restricted in accordance with the regulations of the present section 8.

In reply to those who are fearful of changing the present system lest state aid to parochial institutions violate the principle of separation of church and state, the minority wishes to point out that the First Amendment of the federal Constitution guarantees the enforcement of that principle. The First Amendment has a back-log of almost 200 years of legal interpretation. That interpretation has evolved through the years to a rather clear definition of the types of aid which are permissible and those which are not. The primary concerns expressed by the Court in its most recent cases on the subject are on the principles of non-entanglement and state neutrality. In Lemon v. Kurtzman (403 U.S. 602) the Chief Justice Burger gave the opinion of the Court which stated:

> Our prior holdings do not call for total separation between church and state; total separation is not possible in an absolute sense. . . .Judicial caveats against entanglement must recognize that the line of separation , far from being a "wall," is a blurred, indistinct and variable barrier depending on all the circumstances of a particular relationship. . . .
> In order to determine whether the government entanglement with religion is excessive, we must examins the character and purposes of the institutions which are benefited, the nature of the aid that the State provides, and the resulting relationship between the government and the religious authority. (Id. at 756-757)

In this case the court ruled that state subsidized salaries for teachers of secular subjects in parochial schools violated this principle of non-entanglement and therefore was not acceptable as a form of aid.

The minority proposal is in accord with the principles set forth in the First Amendment. What is at stake in the minority proposal is not separation of church and state, which is an issue of basic rights already delineated by the Federal Constitution and federal courts, but rather the issue of encouraging equality of educational opportunity.

Finally, the minority wishes to take the position that the language of the existing section 8 is rigid and inflexible, and is not in keeping with changing legal interpretations nor fluxuating social patterns. In order to protect our heritage of pluralism and foster the principle of equal educational opportunity, the minority report urges adoption of its proposal.

Section 1. PUBLIC LAND TRUST, DISPOSITION. All lands of the state that have been or that may hereafter be granted to the state by congress, and all lands acquired by gift or grant or devise, from any person or corporation, shall be public lands of the state, and shall be held in trust for the people, to be disposed of as hereafter provided, for the respective purposes for which they have been or may be granted, donated or devised; and none of such land, nor any estate or interest therein, shall ever be disposed of except in pursuance of general laws providing for such disposition, nor unless the full market value of the estate or interest disposed of, to be ascertained in such manner as may be provided by law, be paid or safely secured to the state; nor shall any lands which the state holds by grant from the United States (in any case in which the manner of disposal and minimum price are so prescribed) be disposed of, except in the manner and for at least the price prescribed in the grant thereof, without the consent of the United States. COMMENTS

In testimony on the issue of public lands, officials of The State Land Board described public lands as trust lands held by the state and stated that the income derived from these lands is credited to the state school fund or other respective purpose for which said land was granted. Sportsmen maintained that there is a lack of public access to public lands. The committee also heard from several witnesses on existing and proposed management practices on public lands.

The committee took into account the mandate of The Enabling Act of 1889 in drafting its proposal. It is the general view of the committee that the primary Constitutional issue with regard to state lands is the designation of state responsibility for public lands as held in trust by the state to be disposed of as provided in the terms of the grant. Admittedly, some dispute as to the mandate of The Enabling Act has and will, in all probability, be raised. The "general public benefit" notion articulated in Thompson v. Babcock (147 Mont. 46) requires continual interpretation and specification. The question of just what is the "largest measure of legitimate and reasonable advantage to the state" remains open to further determination. The committee emphasizes the singular mandate in The Enabling Act that the lands granted in section 10 were "for the support of common schools." The proposal embodies a fundamental protection of these lands entrusted to the state so that their disposition will be in accordance with the greatest public benefit, commensurate with the purposes for which the lands were granted.

This proposal expresses the committee's view of the best Constitutional method of Serving public interest, granting powers, and providing for needed flexitility. Convinced of the need for sound and efficient management of State School lands, the committee delegated this responsibility in aocther section of the Constitution to the Board of Land Commissioners. The merits for such action are (1) success Of present system and (2) need for flexibility. The economic success of the present system of land management is borne out ty the fact that the state had as of June 30, 1970, $52,907,243 dollars in its permanent school fund, with almost $3,000,000 dollars coming in on deferred payments every year. Montana remains one of two or three states in the nation which has been wise enough to retain almost the entirety of its federally granted school lands and which, as a result, now reaps a substantial income from such lands for schools.

The committee decided to delete the Constituticnal specification of land classes. House Joint Resolution #32 (Laws of Montana, 42nd Session, 1971, Vol. 11, p. 1709) expressed the sense of the legislature in the form of a recommendation to the Constitutional Convention that the board of Land Commissioners be given the authority to grant multiple use classifications and the power to change these classifications as the board deemed necessary. The committee agrees with the intent of this resolution to provide flexitility in management of public lands. No arguments were presented to the committee in opposition to Such a change. The committee can foresee only tenefits in the elirination of rigid Constituticnal classifications.

The other area of change in the article was the inclusion of the sentence, "Any of said lands may be exchanged for other lands, public or private, which are equal in value and as closely as possible equal in area." Due to the fact that The Enabling Act was amended in 1932 to provide for such an exchange of lands, the committee proposes a Constitution that contains a provision consistent to the amended Enabling Act. Several witnesses pointed out the advantages which would accrue to the state from tile ability to make judicious exchanges to consolidate state holdings.

The committee also eliminated sections 2 and 3 of the existing Constitution, Article XVII, on the grounds that they have been made obsolete by the proposed new language.

In Summary, the committee has retained almost the entire first section of the Public Lands Article (Article XVII) of the present Constitution, with the inclusion of "exchange" of state lands to add an important managerial power. The committee chose to eliminate Constitutional classifications for state lands due to the need for flexibility. sections 2 and 3 were eliminated because they are obsolete or are matters of purely legislative concern.

COMMENTS

The relevant article of the existing Constitution (Article XXI) was jointly assigned to the Revenue and Finance Committee and the Education and Public Lands Committee. After due consideration of the provision in conjunction with the Revenue and Finance Committee, a majority of the Education and Public Lands Committee has decided to adopt replacement language similar to that proposed by the former committee.

The Education and Public Lands Committee is concerned with the security and protection of the public funds of the state, but recognizes the obsolete character of most of the fxistirg article on the Trust and Legacy Fund. Due to the confused history of the fund and the statutory nature of most aspects of its investment, the committee feels that only a broad statement of investment policy is necessary. A unified state investment program is the most rational way to administer such funds, and it is a method which promises to increase the income from such monies over what has been realized in the Fact.

This proposed section differs from the eajority proposal of the Revenue and Finance Committee in two major respects. First, the committee feels that it is important to allow investment of the funds of localities only at their own request. Secondly, due to the particular character of gifts and grants made to the educational systen, the committee agrees that it is important to maintain records of such gifts and to commemorate the benefactors. Otherwise the majority of the Education and Public Lands Committee is in agreement with the proposed language and rationale of the majority of the Revenue and Finance Committee on this provision.

OFFICE OF THE STATE SUPERINTENDENT

February 16, 1972

To: Richard Champoux, Chairman, Education Committee

From: Mike Billings, Director, financial Support for Schools /s/ Mike Billings

Subject: Request for a fiscal note concerning proposed new wording of article XI, section 5.

If the wording in Article Xl, section 5 is changed in such a way that the I & I money is distributed to the elementary and secondary schools of the state (in place Of to the public schools according to the 6-20 aye census), no cost increase will be realized in administering the distribution of the funds. In fact, a substantial cost reduction would be realized, provided that the legislature includes the I and I noney in the state equalization aid account, This act uould eliminate tte current costly annual practice of distributing the I and I money in March. This practice presently causes the school districts to spend a cumulative total of about $50,000 annually to collect the census, and causes the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction to expend about $3,000-$5,000 to process the census.

Thus, if the wording of Article XI, section 5, is charged as indicated, an annual savings of approximately $53,000-$55,000 could very well be realized by the education establishment in Montana. Under no conditions uould the proposed section lead to increased cost of administration at the state or local levels.

Date: February 19, 1972

To: MCNTANA CCNSTITUTICNAL CCNVENTICN

From: Local Government Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The Local Government Committee submits here-with its unanimous proposal for a new local Government Article. The proposal is intended to replace in their entirety the present Article XVI ("Counties--Municipal Corporations and Offices") and Article XIX, section 6 (dealing sith county offices).

The committee was in general agreement that a new local government article should provide flexibility, but was divided on how best tc attain this goal. This proposal tends to work with the existing local government structure of cities, towns and counties and seeks tc achieve improvement by encouraging experimentation in local government powers and form. Strong minority support originally was voiced in the committee for a proposal by Delegate Franklin Arness tc replace the existing city, town, county and school district structure with a new one-level district structure.

Eventually, each of the eleven committee members voted for the adaption of this proposal. In signing this report, however, a committee member does not necessarily endorse each and every statement in it.

This proposal was adopted after consideration was given" tc nearly 3,000 citizen suggestions and 19 delegate proposals. The committee expresses its thanks to the citizens for their interest and tc the delegates uhc submitted proposals, the intent cf which influenced the final prcpcsal tc a great degree.

Tho committee utilized the services cf the fcllcwing people in addition tc its members: Mrs. William I. Romine, committee secretary; Miss Pat Chvatal, a Carrcll College senior, intern, and Jerry Hcllcrcn, committee research analyst,

The committee believes this prcpcsal provides a much improved Ccnstitutional framework fcr local government in Montana and urges its adoption by the Ccastituticnal Conventicn.

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Local Government to read as follows:

ARTICLE__

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. DEFINITION. The term "local government units" includes, but is not limited to, counties and incorporated cities and towns. Other local government units may be established by law.

Section 2. COUNTIES. The counties of the state of Montana as they exist at the adoption of this Constitution are the counties of the state. County boundaries shall not be changed or county seats transferred until approved by a majority of those voting on the question in each county affected.

Section 3. FORMS OF GOVERNMENT. The legislature shall provide by law for the government of local government units and for procedures of incorporating, classifying, merging, consolidating, and dissolving such units and of altering their boundaries. The legislature shall provide by law for optional or alternative forms of government for each unit or combination of units to enable a unit or combination of units to adopt, amend or abandon an optional or alternative form by a majority of those voting on the question.

One optional form of county government includes, but is not limited to, the election of three county commissioners, a clerk and recorder, a clerk of district court, a county attorney, a sheriff, a treasurer, a surveyor, a county superintendent of schools, an assessor, a coroner, and a public administrator whose terms, qualifications, duties and compensation shall be prescribed by law. The board of County Commissioners may consolidate two or more offices. The boards of Commissioners of two or more counties may provide for a joint office and for the election of one official to perform the duties of that office in the respective counties.

Section 4. GENERAL POWERS. Local government units not exercising self-government powers under sections 5 and 6 shall have the following general powers:

(1) Incorporated cities and towns shall have the powers of a municipal corporation and such legislative, administrative, and other powers as provided or implied by law.

(2) Counties shall have such legislative, administrative and other powers as provided or implied by law.

(3) The powers of incorporated cities and towns and counties shall be liberally construed.

(4) Other local government units shall have such powers as provided by law.

Section 5. SELF-GOVERNMENT CHARTERS. The legislature shall prescribe procedures and may set limits under which a local government unit or combination of units may frame, adopt, amend, revise or abandon a self-government charter with the approval of a majority of those voting on the question. The prescribed procedures, however, shall not require approval of a charter by a legislative body.

Charter provisions with respect to a local government unit's executive, legislative and administrative structure and organization shall be superior to statutory provisions.

Section 6. SELF-GOVERNMENT POWERS. local government units adopting self-government charters may exercise all powers not prohibited by this Constitution, by law or by charter.

This grant of self-government powers may be extended to other local government units through optional forms of government provided for in section 3.

Section 7. INTERGOVERNMENTAL COOPERATION. A local government unit by act of its governing body may, or, upon being required by initiative or referendum, shall cooperate, consolidate or agree in the exercise of any function, power or responsibility with, or share the service of an officer, or transfer or delegate any function, power or responsibility or duties of an officer to one or more other local government units, school districts, the state or the United States, unless prohibited by law or charter.

Section 8. REVENUE SHARING. Nothing in this Constitution shall prohibit the state from sharing revenue with local government units or the units from participating in revenue sharing with the state or the United States.

Section 9. INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM. The initiative and referendum powers reserved to the people by the Constitution shall be extended by law to the qualified voters of each local government unit.

Section 10. RECALL. All elected public officials of local government units are subject to recall by the voters of the unit from which elected. Procedures for recall shall be prescribed by law.

Section 11. VOTER REVIEW OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT. The legislature shall within four years of the adoption of this Constitution provide for procedures by which each local government unit either separately or jointly shall review the government structure of the local unit or joint unit and shall submit one alternative form of government to the voters at the next general or special election. The legislature shall provide for a review procedure each ten years after the first election.

COMMENTS ON COMMITTEE PROPOSAL

"Flexibility" and "accountability" best describe the goals embodied in the proposal of the Local Government Committee.

The proposal aims at creating the widest possible array of local government forms so that local structure may be tailored to local needs. It provides for new self-government powers that may be exercised on the local level and gives a Constitutional boost to local efforts to eliminate costly and inefficient duplication of services and functions.

At the same time, the proposal requires accountability from local government units. Each new form of government authorized under the proposal would require the approval of local voters before it could be implemented. Local governments could exercise self-government powers only with the approval of local residents. County boundaries could be changed only if a majority of the affected residents agree. The people would be guaranteed the powers of initiative, referendum and recall on the local level.

Although the proposal would not force Montanans to change their local governments, it would force them to closely examine the local units with an eye toward improving them. This examination is provided for in a unique "voter review of local government" feature which--at the least--should pay huge dividends in terms of increased voter awareness in and concern for local government.

The length of the present local government provisions is more than cut in half by this proposal. Statutory material concerning indebtedness of new counties, county commissioner districts and county office location is deleted. The form of county government now in effect in 55 counties is mentioned--but only as one of what hopefully will be several optional forms of county government.

But the real "news" in the proposal is its incorporation of new devices to make local governments more responsive and responsible. Totally new provisions are added allowing local citizens to design their own form of local government, to increase local authority and responsibility and to end needless duplication of local services.

The Local Government Committee did not set out to replace the thinking of 1889 with that of 1972. Rather, it attempted to replace the thinking of 1889 with a broad framework that would allow implementation of the thinking of 1990, 2010, and 2072, as well as that of 1972. The committee believes this proposal creates that framework.

Section 1. DEFINITION. The term "local government units" includes, but is not limited to, counties and incorporated cities and towns. Other local government units may be established by law.

COMMENTS

The present Montana Constitution creates considerable confusion in its scattergun use of terminology concerning local government. Such imprecise Constitutional terminology has resulted in confusion and court litigation. In an attempt to avoid this problem, section 1 adopts "local government units" as a generic term and specifies that counties and incorporated cities and towns fall within its meaning. However, the section specifically authorizes the legislature to create other local government units, thus providing freedom for the legislature to meet future needs that cannot be met by the traditional city or county structures. Certain special districts, for example, might be appropriately designated as "local government units" by the legislature.

The committee believes that section 1 will discourage litigation and avoid confusion concerning the rest of the Local Government Article; it also recommends that terminology corresponding to that used in this section be incorporated in other articles of the new Constitution when local government units are discussed.

Section 2. COUNTIES. The counties of the state of Montana as they exist at the adoption of this Constitution are the counties of the state. County boundaries shall not be changed or county seats transferred until approved by a majority of those voting on the question in each county affected.

COMMENTS

Section 2, admittedly extraneous, provides that the present county boundaries and county seats will be retained unless changed by a majority of those voting on the question in each county affected. County "A" could be consolidated with county "B" only if a majority of those voting on the question in each county approves. Thus, a large county could not "swallow" a small county with the latter's permission.

The proposed section combines sections 1, 2 and 8 of Article XVI of the present Constitution. Other than deletion of statutory material, the basic intent of these sections is retained-with one exception. The present language (sections 2 and 8) requires approval of a majority of the qualified electors of the county affected before a county boundary can be changed or a county seat transferred; the proposed section 2 would require approval of a majority of those voting on the question.

The difference can be quickly seen. Under the present provision, for example, if a county to be consolidated had 5,000 'qualified electors" but only 3,000 of them vote on the consolidation question, a majority of the 5,000 (or 2,501), rather than a majority of the 3,000 (or 1,501), apparently would have to favor consolidation to meet the Constitutional restriction. Under the proposed language, on the other hand, a majority of those voting--or 1,501--would be required.

In substituting the less stringent--but more common--majority requirement, the committee endorses the reasoning that persons who do not vote on an issue should not be able to thwart the will of those who do. Let the proponents and opponents of county consolidation or county seat transfer go to the polls and let the majority rule.

County Boundaries

Calls for county consolidation--both nationwide and statewide--have gone unanswered, despite their frequency during the Twentieth Century. Indeed, the number of counties nationwide has remained almost constant in the last 40 years, despite frequent complaints that many counties lack the population and economic base to be viable units of local government.

If judged by national standards, certainly many of Montana's 56 counties are too sparsely populated to meet the tests of viability. But who should be the final judge of whether a county is too large or too small and of whether it should be consolidated with another? The Local Government Committee believes this choice must be left to the voters of the counties affected.

Therefore, section 2 allows changes in county boundaries only if approved by a majority of those voting on the question in each county affected. The committee considered leaving the matter of county boundaries entirely to the legislature, but decided that the authority would be more appropriately lodged in the people of the affected counties. After all, if sparsely populated counties are as inefficient and uneconomical as their critics claim, certainly the residents of these counties soon will be clamoring for county consolidation because of high tax bills and insufficient local government services.

It should be stressed that the proposed section 2 does not prevent county consolidation. It simply requires that any such boundary change must be approved by the persons most directly affected-the residents of the counties concerned. It also should be noted that the proposed Local Government Article allows ways short of total consolidation in which counties with dwindling population and tax base can be aided. Under sections 3 and 5, a wide range of structural options can be provided, including one or more directed toward those counties that do not need the full range of county offices and services. Indeed, Petroleum County-the county with the smallest population in the state--already makes successful use of a county manager form of government. In addition, the broad language of section 7 should encourage counties to band together--and to join with cities and towns within their boundaries--to provide more efficient, economical government services.

Provisions in the present Constitution (Article XVI, section 3) conceroing the division of debt when new counties are formed were deleted from this proposal on the basis that they can be provided by legislation--if they ever are needed.

County Seats

Constitutional provisions protecting county seats from being changed by legislative action are common among the 50 states. section 2 simply substitutes a concisa statement of the protection now found in Article XVI, sfction 2 and Article V, section 26. The present Constitution's requirement that county offices must be kept at the county seat (Article XIX, section 6) was deleted from the proposal. Such a requirement might prevent counties from sharing officers and setting up branch county offices. To the extent that such a requirement is needed, it can be provided for by legislation.

> Section 3. FORMS OF GOVERNMENT. The legislature shall provide by law for the government of local government units and for procedures of incorporating, classifying, merging, consolidating, and dissolving such units and of altering their boundaries. The legislature shall provide by law for optional or alternative forms of government for each unit or combination of units to enable a unit or a combination of units to adopt, amend or abandon an optional or alternative form by a majority of those voting on the question.
> One optional form of county government includes, but is not limited to, the election of three county commissioners, a clerk and recorder, a clerk of district court, a county attorney, a sheriff, a treasurer, a surveyor, a county superintendent of schools, an assessor, a coroner, and a public administrator whose terms, qualifications, duties, and compensation shall be prescribed by law. The board of County Commissioners may consolidate two or more offices. The boards of Commissioners of two or more counties may Provide for a joint office and for the election of one official to perform the duties of that office in the respective counties.

COMMENTS

Section 3 aims at allowing the legislature to provide the broadest possible range of forms of local government for counties, cities, towns and other local government units, including consolidated forms. Virtually every national and state authority on local government urges such flexibility; indeed, the Montana Constitution (Article XVI, section 7) already gives the legislature broad powers to provide "any plan, kind, manner or form" cf lccal government.

The intent cf section 3 is to cffer just as brcad freedom tc the legislature to provide various fcrms cf lccal government as is allcwed under the present section 7. Because cf that intent, the committee ccnsidered retaining the present language cf sectiсn 7; this idea eventually was rejected because the present wording is unclear and confusing. It is hoped that section 3's straightforward directiсn tc the legislature tc prcvide cptional and alternative forms cf gcvernment will result in a greatly expanded offering tc the local gcvernment units in Montana.

The possibilities that cculd be provided under sectiсn 3 are great. At present, cnly three forms cf city government (maycr-ccuncil, ccamission, and ccnaissiсn-manager); two forms of county government (the traditiсnal form and ccunty manager), and one general fcrm cf city-county ccrsclidatiсn are authcrized ty statute in Mcntana. Cther states cffer ccnsiderably more alternatives. New Jersey, for example, emplcys what has been called the "cafeteria-style" fcrm cf lccal government cpticns, under which a lccal unit may choose different alternatives within a fcrm of govern me nt cffered by the legislature. sectico 3 was drafted to allow such a flexible "cafeteria" in Mcntana, tcc. Thus, the legislature cculd cffer the maycr-ccuncil fcrm of government but leave tc the locality the questiсn cf whether tc elect cr appcint a city treasurer, pclice judge and cther city cfficers. In this regard, it shculd be noted that section 3 specifically directs the legislature to provide fcrms cf gcvernment which can be amended as well as adcpted and abandcned, by a vcte cf the lccal residents.

Sectiсn 3 provides the legislature with authcrity to meet the rapidly shifting gcvernmental needs of vastly different units of lccal government. For example, the legislature under sectiсn 3 could provide streamlined forms cf ccunty government specially suited for areas in which pcpulatiсn is dwindling and a variety of forms of consclidated government fcr areas where virtually all of a ccunty's populatiсn is urban.

Sectiсn 3 clearly states ttat any cpticnal cr alternative plan will gc intc effect cn a local level cnly after it has been approved by the voters. The legislature is directed tc cffer choices of government structure fcr lccal gcvernment units; the voters cf thcse units have the final control over what type of structure they select.

Present County Government Fcrm

Section 3 provides that cne fcrm cf cptional government available to counties shall be what might be called the "traditionalform"--that structure now used in 55 cf the state's 56 counties. This fcrm cf government-including 13 elected officials--has been spelled cut ir Mcntana's Constitution since 1889. Similar forms receive Constitutional reccgnitiсn in most other states.

The question facing the Local Government Committee was whether to continue the present Constitutional emphasis on the "traditional" form of county government or to Eliminate ary Constitutional mention of the "traditional" form. The committee believes its solution to the problem is both wise and workable.

Section 3 emphasizes the legislature's broad power to offer optional and alternative forms of government, subject to local voter approval. But it provides that one of these optional forms must be the "traditional" form of county government. In other words, section 3 assures the people that they may, if they wish, continue to operate under their present county government structure, while at the same time encouraging counties to adapt their government structure to local needs. Under section 3, the "traditional" structure of county government might best be described as an "assured option."

And section 3 builds flexibility even within the "traditional" option. That is accomplished in two ways:

--The board of County Commissioners is empowered to consolidate offices within the county. This power already is contained in the present Constitution (Article XVI, section 5) and has received limited application, most notably in the frequent combination of the offices of sheriff and coroner.

--The boards of County Commissioners of two or more counties are authorized to provide for a multicounty office. For example, the commissioners of three sparsely populated counties might agree to elect one coroner to serve all three counties.

The offices of county attorney and clerk of district court, also mentioned in the proposed judicial article, are enumerated in section 3 for the express purpose of making the offices eligible for inter-county and multicounty consolidation. The Local Government Committee strongly recommends that the judicial article be worded so as not to foreclose the possible consolidation of these two offices with others as provided under section 3.

Eliminated from the provision for the "traditional" plan are the present complicated provisions for overlapping terms, procedures by which county offices may be consolidated and the method Of filling vacancies in county offices. If needed, these procedures may be outlined by law. More specifically, it is the intent of the committee that the language allowing the legislature to set qualifications for the county commissioners should allow the election of commissioners from districts, as is now the case.

Section 3 omits the present prohibition against county treasurers succeeding themselves in office.

The committee believes it is clear that the provisions of section 3 concerning a majority vote on a new form of government in no way will weaken section 2, which requires a majority vote in each county affected when county boundaries or county seats are changed. If a new plan of government involves two or more counties to the extent that they would be consolidated, it is the intent of the Local Government Committee that section 2 would control, and a majority vote in each county would be required. It should be noted that the present Constitution (Article XVI, sections 7 and 8) also contains different majority requirements for form of government (section 7) and boundary changes (section 8).

"Incorporating...Dissolving"

Section 3 directs the legislature to provide procedures for "incorporating, classifying, merging, consolidating and dissolving" units of local government and of altering their boundaries. The importance of these factors dictates their Constitutional mention. For example, the committee wishes to clearly direct the legislature to classify local government units in order to deal with them more effectively through legislation. Classification probably will take the form of dividing cities into population classes, then applying certain legislation only to one or several classes. Such classificatica is used now under Montana law for instances in which legislation must be tailored for the specific needs of a group of local government units.

The committee also wishes to direct the legislature to provide methods by which cities and towns, in effect, may go out of business. At present, methods for disincorporation are provided by law only for towns with less than 500 population. The committee believes disincorporation might be a workable means of ending needless duplication of governmental services on the local level.

Section 4. GENERAL POWERS. Local government units not exercising self-government powers under sections 5 and 6 shall have the following general powers:

(1) Incorporated cities and towns shall have the powers of a municipal corporation and such legislative, administrative and other powers as provided or implied by law.

(2) Counties shall have such legislative, administrative and other powers as provided or implied by law.

(3) The powers of incorporated cities and towns and counties shall be liberally construed.

(4) Other local government units shall have such powers as provided by law.

COMMENTS

The question of what powers local government units should exercise is crucial, controversial and confusing. Involved are desires for local control of local affairs on the one hand and the need for certain uniformity and statewide standards for minimum services on the other. To deal with the problem, the Local Government Committee proposes a basic, two-level system of powers for local government units. One level, described in section 4, is a somewhat liberalized version of the powers now exercised by the local units; the other level, described in section 6, is new to Montana and provides a self-government concept for local units.

The present Montana Constitution makes no general mention of what powers units of local government have. The result is that Constitutional silence, rather than Constitutional language, has become the basis for local government authority in Montana. The Local Government Committee believes that express Constitutional wording should be included concerning the important question of the power relationship between state and local governments. Such wording is necessary to distinguish between self-government units and other units and to change the traditional power relationship between the state and its local units.

Cities and Towns

Subsection 1 of section 4 provides that incorporated cities and towns shall have the "powers of a municipal corporation and such legislative, administrative and other powers as provided or implied by law."' Subsection 3 adds that the powers shall be liberally construed.

Subsection 1, to a degree, restates the present power position of Montana cities and towns-a position based largely On the "Dillon Rule" of judicial construction. The "Dillon Rule," named after a 15th century Iowa judge, provides:

> It is a general and undisputed proposition of law that a municipal corporation possesses and can exercise the following powers, and no others: First, those granted in express words; second, those necessarily or fairly implied in or incident to the powers expressly granted; third, those essential to the accomplishment Of the declared objects and purposes of the corporation,—not simply convenient, but indispensable. Any fair, reasonable, substantial doubt concerning the existence of power is resolved by the courts against the corporation, and the power is denied. Of every municipal corporation the charter or statute by which it is created is its organic act. Neither the corporation nor its officers can do any act, or make any contract, or incur any liability, not authorized thereby, or by some legislative act applicable thereto, All acts beyond the scope of the powers granted are void. (John F. Dillon, Commentaries on the Law of Municipal Corporations, 5th ed., vol. 1, pp. 142-143.)

In Montana, the court repeatedly has cited the "Dillon Rule" in determining the powers of cities and towns. But it also occasionally has suggested that cities and towns have certain inherent rights, at least in narrowly limited areas of concern. Two 1935 decisions--State ex rel. City of Missoula v. Holmes and State ex rel. Kern v. Arnold--provide leading examples of the latter, suggesting that municipal corporations, when acting as private corporations, have more freedom of action.

The intent of section 4 is to encourage the court to liberally interpret the powers of incorporated cities and towns--to allow them reasonable control over local affairs or concerns without granting them a full range of self-government powers in all areas of concern. Section 4 does not attempt to upset the present established power relationship between the state and cities and towns. What it does intend to do is direct the court, when possible, to give the benefit of the doubt to the city or town. Section 4 attempts to give cities and towns a crf elbowroom to act.

In this regard, it should be pointed out that under this section--and, indeed, under the present Montana Constitution--the legislature could give considerably more freedom to local units than it has chosen to do. In recent sessions, the legislature has been moving toward freeing local governments; authorizing an all-purpose mill levy as a substitute for the individual levy limits on separate funds is a leading example.

Counties

Montana counties--like most of those elsewhere in the nation--are even more tightly under the legislature's thumb than are cities and towns. The Montana county presently is more administrative than governmental in nature; rules are made in Helena every other year and carried out-or administered--on the county level day-to-day.

Through stringent court interpretations (notably Plath v. Hi-Ball Contractors, Inc. in 1961 and Bacus v. Lake County in 1960), Montana counties have been denied the local legislative, or ordinance-making powers possessed by cities and towns.

It is not enuyh to say that montana counties can act only when authorized to do so by the legislature. That statement may be true of Montana's cities and towns, but fox the state's counties, authorization to act is not sufficient. Father, the legislature must not only tell counties that they may act; it also must spell out in what manner they may act. Neil S. Reefer succinctly summed up the role to which Montana counties have been relegated in a 1964 article in the Montana Law Review:

> TO be Constitutional, a statute granting authority to counties must be sufficiently explicit and restrictive, so that its execution requires only administrative action and not an exercise of legislative power. (p. 197).

In the past, the court has struck down Montana planning and zoning legislation and laws authorizing county and district health boards as unconstitutional delegations of legislative powers to counties. An Idaho professor, author of perhaps the leading text on county government, describes the lack of a more extensive ordinance-making power as "an important weakness in county government" (see Herbert Sydney Duncombe, County Government in America, p. 48).

The Local Government Committee is well aware of contentions that counties should not exercise any legislative power because the traditional county structure does not allow for clear separation of the legislative and executive functions and thus does not provide for clear separation of powers. However, the committee believes the legislature can build safeguards into any grant of legislative powers to counties to guard against such alleged abuse of the separation of powers concept. The language of section 4, subsection 2 clearly hinges the grant of legislative powers to counties on grants from the legislature; no broad grant of power is given directly to counties by this section.

The committee's overriding concern is that Montana counties, through the officials elected locally, be allowed to meet the increasing challenges of a rapidly changing state. Allowing the legislature to give counties legislative power will provide another tool in coping with the urban sprawl outside incorporated municipalities and in eliminating some of the present reasons feeding the growth of overlapping governmental jurisdictions and special districts.

Other Local Units

Section 4 provides that local government units other than cities, towns and counties will have those powers provided by law. Thus, the legislature could establish special districts to provide special functions and could assign either municipal-corporation or county-type powers to a city-county consolidated government.

General Comments

In general, the intent of section 4 is to provide that units of local government not adopting self-government powers will not be crippled in meeting local needs. Thus, the powers of incorporated cities. towns and counties are to be "literally construed" and counties may be allowed to exercise legislative powers--something the court has said they may not do under the present Constitution.

However, section 4 is not intended as a broad grant of self-government powers; such powers are provided for in section 6 only upon an affirmative vote of the residents of a local government unit.

Section 5. SELF-GOVERNMENT CHARTERS. The legislature shall prescribe procedures and may set limits under which a local government unit or combination of units may frame, adopt, amend, revise or abandon a self-government charter with the approval of a majority of those voting on the question. The prescribed procedures, however, shall not require approval of a charter by a legislative body.

Charter provisions with respect to a local government unit's Executive, legislative and administrative structure and organization shall be superior to statutory provisions.

COMMENTS

At present in Montana, only the legislature can draw up charters: local residents are only given the authority to adopt or reject the legislature's work.

Section 3 reaffirms the authorization for the legislature to continue its practice of providing alternative forms of government for local units, subject to local voter approval. Section 5 adds a new feature: authorization for the people of a locality to frame and adopt their own form of government through a "self-government charter." Such local charter-writing power now is authorized in about half of the state Constitutions.

Section 5 directs the legislature to provide procedures and limitations under which local government units-or combinations of those units (for example, a county and the cities and towns within the county)-can design their own form of government. Two major safeguards are built into the plan:

(1) The legislature must set limits and procedures under which charters may be drafted. For example, the legislature might determine that only those units or corbination of units with more than 10,000 population should have charter-uriting authority. Or the legislature could specify the ethod of selection and the number of members of a local charter-drafting commission. The committee considered including such provisions within section 5, as some state Constitutions do, fut rejected the idea on the basis that such provisions should have the flexibility of statutory law.

(2) No charter or charter amendment could become effective until it is approved by a majority of the local voters.

The section also limits the power of the legislature over locally written charters in two ways:

(1) Although it allows the legislature to set procedures and limitations concerning the drafting of a local charter, section 5 specifically denies both the state legislature and local legislative bodies (such as city councils) the power to veto a locally approved charter. The committee believes that a legislative body should not be allowed to set aside a properly drafted charter that local residents believe meets their needs.

(2) Charter provisions on a local unit's executive, legislative and administrative structure will supercede statutory provisions under the language of section 5. Thus, if a local unit decides through its local charter to elect a treasurer but state law generally requires that treasurers must be appointed, the charter provision calling for election will become effective.

Testimony before the committee indicated that no massive movement toward locally drafted charters is likely to occur in the foreseeable future. However, at least one official--the mayor of Missoula--did express considerable interest in a self-government charter. The committee believes local charter writing authority is a valuable tool for several reasons:

--It allows a locality to tailor its governmental structure to its own needs and offers an excellent method whereby more people can become directly involved in their government.

--It provides a method whereby a local government unit can bypass a recalcitrant legislature which refuses to provide optional forms of government.

Many of the states which authorize local charter writing limit the grant of authority to local units over a certain population size. The committee, however, believes that no such Constitutional limitations should be imposed; rather, it would leave such restrictions to the legislature.

> Section 6. SELF-GOVERNMENT POWERS. Local government units adopting self-government charters may exercise all powers not prohibited by this Constitution, by law or by charter.
> This grant of self-government powers may be extended to other local government units through optional forms of government provided for in section 3.

COMMENTS

Local government units adopting self-government charters, or adopting a special optional form of government that the legislature is empowered to authorize, will be allowed to exercise all powers not prohibited by this Constitution, by law or by charter.

In effect, section 6 grants to local units the authority to share powers with the state governoect--a form of what generally has become known as "home rule." The local Government committee, however, has studiously avoided this term, preferring to call the grant of authority "self-government powers."

Section 6 is intended to authorize certain local units to have considerably more freedom in determining their local affairs. Under the present Montana Constitution--and under the general authority authorized in section 4 of this proposal--local units would have only those powers granted or directly implied by the legislature. The provisions of section 6, on the other hand, would reverse this situation: self-govvernoent units would be able to exercise all powers that their charters, the legislature or the Constitution did not prohibit.

This "shared powers" concept is relatively new. It is endorsed by the National Municipal League and the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and is included in the Constitutions of at least five states--Alaska, South Dakota, Missouri, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. It clarifies lines of responsihili'ty. Legislative inaction no longer could block local action; instead, such inaction on the state level would serve as a go-ahead for local governments. Significantly, the "shared powers" concept does not leave the local unit free from state control; it does, however, change the basic assumption concerning the power of local government. At present, that assumption is that local government lacks power unless it has been specifically granted. Under the shared powers concept, the assumption is that local government possesses the power, unless it has been specifically denied.

The legislature, in areas such as pollution control where statewide uniformity is desirable, still could impose statewide standards under the shared powers concept. Some areas--such as the definition and punishment of felonies--undouhtedly would be retained by the legislature. But in other areas of unique concern to a local unit, it could apply flexible approaches to problems and not be bound by state inaction or disinterest.

The committee believes the "shared powers" concept embodied in section 6 is desirable because it grants considerable autonomy to those local units that wish it, yet it allows the legislature at any time to step in and prohibit the local unit from proceeding in a manner contrary to state interests. It clearly is the most flexible approach toward local self-govverrsent,

As worded in section 6, the grant of self-government powers also is surrounded by ample safeguards. Most significantly, no unit of local government will be able to exercise the increased local authority without prior approval of its residents in one of two ways:

--Approval of a locally drafted charter, which can restrict the powers of the local unit.

--Approval of a legislatively drafted charter, which also can limit the powers of the local unit.

Thus, no local government unit will be able to exercise the self-government powers without the express approval of a majority of the local voters. The legislature would retain final authority to guard against infringement of the power.

A frequent question in regard to local self-government powers concerns what authority a unit should have in the area of taxation. Under this proposal, a self-government unit could exercise all taxation power not denied it by the Constitution, by law or by its charter. Theoretically, that may sound like a dangerous grant of power, but on a practical basis, taxation probably would be the first area to be circumscribed by the legislature or by the local charter. For example, the legislature might prohibit any self-governaent unit to impose any tax other than property and license taxes and might limit property taxes to no more than 70 mills. The committee is not endorsing such restrictions; it simply wishes to point out that from a practical standpoint, both the legislature and the local voters undoubtedly will impose taxation limitations on a self-governaant unit.

Section 7. INTERGOVERNMENTAL COOPERATION. A local government unit by act of its governing body, may, or, upon being required by initiative or referendum, shall cooperate, consolidate or agree in the exercise of any function, power or responsibility with, or share the service of an officer, or transfer or delegate any function, power or responsibility or duties of an officer to one or more other local government units, school districts, the state or the United States, unless prohibited by law or charter.

COMMENTS

Section 7 is intended to be a complete grant of authority to all local government units to cooperate in the exercise of powers and functions, share the services of officers and transfer functions and responsibilities to other units of government. Such functional cooperation and consolidation is increasingly demanded by the rising costs of governmental services and the careless duplication of governmental services.

Broad grants of power to cooperate already are provided under Montana law, but the committee believes that Constitutional language should be added giving broad latitude to local units in cooperative ventures. Section 7 has several features:

--It specifically authorizes local residents, through the initiative, to force their local governments to cooperate and to stop senseless duplication of services.

--It allows the legislature or, in case of locally drafted charters, the voters to directly prohibit certain forms of cooperation.

The committee believes that maximum activity by local government units under section 7 could solve many of the problems of inefficiency and duplication of services now plaguing some areas in Montana.

Section 8. REVENUE SHARING. Nothing in this Constitution shall prohibit the state from sharing revenue with local government units or the units from participating in revenue sharing with the state or the United States.

COMMENTS

Article XII, section 4 of the present Montana Constitution has been interpreted as limiting the state aid that can be provided for local governments. The result has been a tightening of the local fiscal squeeze, increased reliance on the property tax, subterfuge to "get around" the Constitutional limitation and the fact that Montana ranks 46th in the nation in state per capita aid to city and county governments.

At the time of adoption of this majority proposal by the committee, it appears that Article XII, section 4 will be deleted from the new Constitution. However, the committee believes it is highly desirable to affirmatively provide that the state may share revenue with the local units and that the local units may participate in revenue sharing with the state and the United States. Such a provision will not assure such state or federal assistance; it only will assure that the Constitution will not stand in the way of statutory provisions for such aid.

Section 9. INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM. The initiative and referendum powers reserved to the people by the Constitution shall be extended by law to the qualified voters of each local government unit.

COMMENTS

The committee believes it is essential that local residents have the powers of initiative and referendum, particularly in view of the broad self-government powers offered in this proposal. The committee also believes that the proper place to assure these "peoplepowers" is in the local government article. Specific provisions concerning petition requirements, however, should be left to statutory law where they can be easily reached if change is needed.

Section 10. RECALL. All elected public officials of local government units are subject to recall by the voters of the unit from which elected. Procedures for recall shall be prescribed by law.

COMMENTS

The people should have the right to remove public officials on the local level, for much the same reasons as cited in the comments to section 9. Once again, the committee favors leaving recall procedures to statutory law, although concern was expressed that the requirements should be of sufficient severity to eliminate frivolous and repeated recall elections.

Section 11. VOTER REVIEW OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT. The legislature shall within four years of the adoption of this Constitution provide for procedures by which each local government unit either separately or jointly shall review the government structure of the local unit or joint unit and shall submit one alternative form of government to the voters at the next general or special election. The legislature shall provide for a review procedure each ten years after the first election.

COMMENTS

Section 11 represents perhaps the most unique feature of the local government proposal. It requires that the legislature, within four years after the adoption of the Constitution, must provide methods by which each local unit, singly or in combination with another or others, must study its governmental structure. The key provision is that residents of each unit must have an opportunity to vote on whether to adopt an alternative form or retain their present form.

Although the procedures are left up to the legislature, the committee envisions that local commissions might be created to draft an entirely new type of government or simply take an alternative form authorized by the legislature and recommend that it be put on the ballot locally. Different counties and different cities could vote on different alternatives; some counties and cities might want to submit consolidated city-county forms for judgment by the voters.

The committee strongly believes that such local review of government is highly desirable. Costs would be minimum and more than repaid if local governments can be improved. Increased voter interest and awareness of local government issues would be assured, and some local units, through experimentation, might find answers to local government problems that would aid other units in the state.

An overriding consideration is that the local voters would be the final judges of whether the alternative proposed really would be a better form of government than that in effect at the time of the election. Even if every county, city and town decides to retain its existing form of government following the review procedure, the committee believes the time spent in study and discussion of local government will result indirectly in more responsive and responsible local government.

Section 11 directs the legislature to provide for a "review procedure" each ten years after the first election. Such decennial review would not necessarily have to require that each unit in ths state go through the complete review process required the first time.

To: MONTANA CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

From: General Government and Constitutional Amendment Committee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The General Government and Constitutional Amendment Committee submits herewith a proposed new General Government Article. The proposed Article is intended to replace all sections of the present Constitution dealing with general government areas.

The scope of an area such as general government is broad and, unless specific issues are cited, somewhat nebulous. The proposed Article does not have an exact duplicate in the Constitution of 1889. The content of the new Article was drawn from many sections of the old Constitution (See Appendix A) and from delegate proposals assigned to the committee (see Appendix E). The topics are varied and encompass many areas of state government. Though some members of the committee disagreed on various portions of the proposed Article, the committee agreed unanimously on the basic intent of the article. In signing this majority report a Committee member does not necessarily endorse each and every statement in it. Those members who disagree on specific sections signed minority reports outlining their dissent.

The committee utilized the services of the following people in addition to its members: James Grady (Research Analyst), Bobbie Murphy (Secretary) and Robert Skaggs (Intern).

MAJORITY PROPOSAL

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT AND CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTSCOMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on General Government to read as follows:

ARTICLE ___

GENERAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. SEPARATION OF POWERS. The powers of the government of this state are divided into three distinct departments: The legislative, executive, and judicial, and no person or collection of persons charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any powers properly belonging to either of the others, except as in this Constitution expressly directed or permitted.

Section 2. CONTINUITY OF GOVERNMENT. The seat of government shall be in Helena, except during periods of emergency resulting from disasters or enemy attack. The legislative assembly may enact laws to insure the continuity of governmental operations during a period of emergency. Such laws may deviate from other provisions of the Montana Constitution conflicting therewith but shall be effective only during the period of emergency that affects a particular office or governmental operation.

Section 3. OATH OF OFFICE. Members of the legislative assembly and all officers, executive, ministerial or judicial, shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation, to-wit: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the state of Montana, and that I will discharge the duties of my office with fidelity (so help me God)." And no other oath, declaration or test shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust.

Section 4. INITIATIVE. The people may enact laws by initiative on all matters except appropriations of money and local or special laws prohibited by this Constitution. Initiative petitions must be signed by eight percent or more of the legal voters in each of one-third or more of the legislative representative districts and the total number of signers must be eight percent or more of the total legal voters of the state. Each petition must contain the full text of the proposed measure. Petitions must be filed with the Secretary of State four months or more prior to the election at which they will be voted upon. The enacting clause of all initiative measures shall be: "Be it enacted by the people of the State of Montana."

Section 5. REFERENDUM. (1) The people may approve or reject acts of the legislature by referendum, except appropriations of money. A referendum may be ordered by the legislative assembly, or upon petition signed by eight percent or more of the legal voters in each of one-third or more of the legislative representative districts and the total number of signers must be eight percent or more of the total legal voters of the State. Referendum petitions must be filed with the Secretary of State no later than six months after adjournment of the legislative assembly which passed the bill.

(2) Acts of the legislature referred to the people are in full force and effect unless suspended by petitions signed by 15 percent of the legal voters of a majority of the whole number of the legislative representative districts of the state, in which case the law shall be inoperative until Such time as it Shall be passed upon at an election, and the result has been determined and declared as provided by law.

Section 6. ELECTIONS. All measures referred to the people shall be voted upon at the regular biennial election unless a Special election is ordered by the legislative assembly.

Section 7. LEGAL VOTERS. The number of legal voters for each legislative representative district and for the state is determined by the votes cast for the office of Governor in the regular election immediately preceding filing of petitions for initiative or referendum measures.

Section 8. GUBERNATORIAL VETO. The governor does not have power to veto initiative or referendum measures.

Section 9. RESTRICTION. This article is not applicable to Constitutional revision as covered in Article ___ of this Constitution.

Section 10. RECALL. Laws shall be enacted to provide for the recall of all elected officials of the State and of its political subdivisions upon petition of electors equal in number to 25 percent of the number of persons voting in the last preceding election for the office of Governor in the state or political subdivision of the official sought to be recalled.

Section 11. GAMBLING. All forms of gambling, lotteries, and gift enterprises are prohibited unless authorized by acts of the legislature or by the people through initiative or referendum.

COMMENTS CA MAJORITY PROPOSAL

Section 1. SEPARATION OF POWERS. The powers of the government of this state are divided into three distinct departments: The legislative, executive, and judicial, and no person or collection of persons charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments shall exercise any powers properly belonging to either of the others, except as in this Constitution expressly directed or permitted.

COMMENTS

This section with the exception of the title change from "Distribution" to "Separation" is identical to Article IV of the present Constitution. The committee feels a statement dividing the powers of government among the three branches of state government is essential to any Constitution. The present article has been the crucial factor in determining much litigation, and is an invaluable tool for the courts in deciding matters of governmental jurisdiction. A statement dividing the powers of government is designed to act as a check on an overly ambitious branch of government.

The committee carefully considered Delegate Proposal 79 which would have extended the separation of powers doctrine to all political subdivisions of the state. The committee rejected this proposal, as it feels such a Constitutional provision would create far-reaching, unwieldly problems. The separation of powers by a Constitution necessitates that the governmental powers, since separated, be distributed among several branches of government. If such a separation-distribution were mandatorially extended to the state (which now operates under the doctrine) and all its political subdivisions (some of which do not operate under the doctrine), chaos could result under present Montana government. The extension would require that every political subdivision, every governmental level, have its powers separated and distributed. Thus, school boards would cease to function as they now do. school boards now both legislate school regulations and hear appeals on the results of their rules, both legislative and judicial functions. Under Delegate Proposal 79, at least two separate boards would have to be created: one to hear appeals and one to make the rules, as both functions could not be performed by the same board. The committee feels the additional burdens and expense Delegate Proposal 79 would incur offset any benefits of the proposal.

Section 2. CONTINUITY OF GOVERNMENT. The seat of government shall be in Helena, except during periods of emergency resulting from disasters or enemy attack. The legislative assembly may enact laws to insure the continuity of governmental operations during a period of emergency. Such laws may deviate from other provisions shall be effective only during the period of emergency that affects a particular office or governmental Operation.

COMMENTS

This section would revise the provisions in Article X, sections 2, 3 and 4 of the present Constitution relating to the seat Of government and Article V, section 46 relating to continuity of government. The proposed section is sufficient to allow the legislature to enact laws to provide for continuity of government under any situation that may arise.

Section 3. OATH OF OFFICE. Members of the legislative assembly and all officers, executive, ministerial or judicial, shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation, to-wit: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the state of Montana, and that ,I will discharge the duties of my office with fidelity (so help me God)." And no other oath, declaration or test shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust.

COMMENTS

This oath is a shortened version of the oath presently contained in Article XIX, section 1 of the present Constitution. This oath contains the intent of the present Constitution's oath, but without the extensive detail. The proposed oath also allows a person of any religious persuasion, including an atheist or agnostic, to take thr oath without violating his principles. The provisicc also prohibits any other oath as a qoalification for any state public office.

Section 4. INITIATIVE. lbe people may enact laws by initiative on all matters except appropriations of money and local or special laws prohibited by this Constitution. Initiative petitions must be signed by eight percent (8%) or more of the legal voters in each of 1/3 or more of the legislative representative districts and the total number of signers must be eight percent (8%) or more of the total legal voters of the state. Each petition must contain the full text of the proposed measure. Petitions must be filed with the Secretary of State four months or more prior to the election at which they will be voted upon. The enacting clause of all initiative measures shall be: "Be it enacted by the people of the state of Montana."

COMMENTS

This is the prcvisicn for statutory initiative agreed on by the General Government and Legislative Committees. The General Government Committee feels the petiticn requirements of eight percent (8%) in each of 1/3 or more cf the legislative representativf districts and eight percent (8%) or mcre of the total legal voters of the state are high encugh tc prevent frivclcus legislative efforts by a small mircrity, yet lcw enough to allcw sericus, pcpular measures to be initiated by the pecple.

Sectiicn 5. REFERENDUM. (1) The people may apprcve or reject acts cf the legislature by referendum, except appropriaticns cf money. A referendum may be crdered by the legislative assembly, cr upon petitiicn signed by eight. percent (8%) cr more of the legal vcters in each of 1/3 or mcre of the legislative representative districts and the total number of signers must be eight percent (8%) or mcre of the total legal voters cf the state;. Referendum petitions nust be filed with the Secretary of stat2 n0 later than six months after adjournment of the legislative assembly which passed the bill.

(2) Acts of the legislature referred tc the people are in full fcrce and effect unless suspended by petitions signed by fifteen percent (15%) of the legal voters of a majority of the whcle number of the legislative representative districts of the state, in which case the law shall be incperative until such time as it shall be passed upon at an electicn, and the result has been determined and declared as prcvided by law.

COMMENTS

This secticn ccniains the prccedure fcr the tuo forms cf statutcry referendum as agreed upon by the General Gcvernment and Legislative Committees. This prcvision is parallel to the present referendum provisions as contained in Article V, secticn 1 cf the Constitution. The only changes are the petitiicn requirements, which the General Gcveroment Ccmmittee felt shculd be set at eight percent (8%) of the legal vcters in each cf 1/3 cr rcre cf the legislative representative districts and eight pfrcent (8%) or mcre of the total legal voters of the state for the petition referendum. The committee set the petition requirement for requiring suspension of enforcement cf a matter to be referred at fifteen percent (15%) of the whole number of legal voters of a majority of the legislative representative districts cf the state. This provision is analoqcus tc present Ccnstituticnal provisicn.

Sectiicn 6. ELECTIONS. All measures referred to the people shall be vcted upcn at the regular biennial election unless a special electicn is ordered by the legislative assembly.

Section 7. LEGAL VOTERS. The number of legal voters for each legislative representative district and for the state is determined by the votes cast for the office of governor in the regular election immediately preceding filing of petitions for initiative or referendum measures.

COMMENTS

These sections are administrative in nature and fairly self-explanatory. The committee feels such measures should be stated in the same place as the subject matter they cover.

Section 8. GUBERNATORIAL VETO. The governor does not have power to veto initiative or referendum measures.

COMMENTS

This section prohibits the governor from vetoing a" initiative or referendum. The present Constitution also contains such a provision. The committee feels one ma" should not have the power to overturn a decision made by a majority of the state's electorate.

Section 9. RESTRICTION. This article is not applicable to Constitutional revision as covered in Article ... of this Constitution.

COMMENTS

This section is included to prevent any confusion with the initiative and referendum provisions on Constitutional revision that are otherwise created in the Constitution.

Section 10. RECALL. Laws shall be enacted to provide for the recall of all elected officials of the state and of its political subdivisions upon petition of electors equal in number to twenty-five percent (254) of the "umber of persons voting in the last preceding election for the office of governor in the state or political subdivision of the official sought to be recalled.

COMMENTS

Section 13 provides for the recall of public officers. The committee feels this is a basic right Of the people under a form of government such as Montana's. The recall is designed to keep politicians "honest" in the political sense. Impeachment provisions are designed to keep politicians honest in the legal sense. In other words, recall is not designed for cases of malfeasance. Recall is designed to allow the public to remove an elected official who is making political decisions with which the majority of the people disagree. It is designed to help insure a politician will live up to his promises once elected. Recall gives the people remedy to a situation that they feel must be rectified before the next election day.

The requirement of twenty-five percent (25%) of the number of electors in the concerned political subdivision creates a workable and desirable system. The petition requirement is very steep. Frivolous attempts to call a recall election or the use of the recall as blackmail by a small minority are extremely doubtful and both instances represent hypothetical situations of dubious foundation.

The recall sponsors would be hard pressed to convince twenty-five percent (25%) of the concerned individuals that the deeds of the official were nefarious enough to warrant the cost of a recall election. On the other hand, should genuine grievances exist, the petition requirement is not so high that a recall election is unattainable.

Section 11. GAMBLING. All forms of gambling, lotteries, and gift enterprises are prohibited unless authorized by acts of the legislature or by the people through initiative or referendum.

COMMENTS

This section is designed to replace Article XIX, section 2 of the present Constitution. The present Constitution prohibits gambling of any kind. The proposed revision would continue this prohibition until the legislature specifically legalizes particular forms. The proposed revision would alleviate a good deal of fear among the populace that a Constitutional change would open the door to all sorts of gambling problems that do not now exist in the state. The committee revised the specific and inflexible prohibition because it feels the legislature should make the rules governing gambling.

The committee recommends that if at all possible, the convention decision on lotteries and gambling be presented to the voters as a separate issue.

MINORITY PROPOSAL 1

BE IT PROPOSED:

That there be a new Constitutional section as follcur:

Section ___ BOUNDARIES. The sovereignty and jurisdiction of the state of Montana shall prevail within the area encompassed by the follcwing bcurdaries:

Beginning at the Fciot cf intersection cf the 104th meridian of west longitude and the 45th parallel cf north latitude, thence clockwise west cn said parallel tc its intersection with the 111th meridian; south on said meridian tc the crest of the Rocky Mcuntains; northwestward on said crest (the continental divide) to the summit cf Lost Trail Pass intersrctinq there with the southeast end and crest cf the Bitterrcot Mountains; hence ncrthwestward on the crest cf the bitterroot Mountains and Range tc 116th meridian; north on said meridian to the 49th parallel; east cc said parallel tc the 104th meridian; and south on said meridian tc the place of beginning.

/s/ Don E. Belcher /s/ Paul K. Harlcw

COMMENTS

The wording for this mincrity report is taken from the wcrk of Walter Stamm, Dillcn, Mcntana. The mincrity feels the Constitutiicn should state the exact area over which the dccument establishes jurisdicticc.

MINORITY PROPOSAL 2

BE IT PROPOSED:

That section 10 of the proposed General Government Article dealing with recall be deleted and no comparable section be included in the Constitution. The section to be deleted reads as follows:

> Section 10. RECALL. Laws shall be enacted to provide for the recall of all elected officials of the state and of its political subdivisions upon petition of electors equal in number to 25 percent of the number of persons voting in the last preceding election for the office of governor in the state or Political subdivision of the official sought to be recalled.

/s/ Mark Etchart

/s/ Bruce M. Brown

COMMENTS

A recall provision is an unnecessary and dangerous harassment provision that would hinder an elected official in performance of his duties. Such a provision would tend to disrupt the body politic, and keep Montana in a state of permanent flux. The intent of recall is also basically covered under the present electoral system, as elected officials are subject to recall each time their office is up for election.

MINORITY PROPOSAL 3

EE IT PROPOSES:

That section 11 of the proposed General Government Article dealing with gambling and lotteries be deleted, and no comparable section be included in the Constitution. The section to be deleted reads as follows:

> Section 11. GAMBLING. All forms of gambling, lotteries, and gift enterprises are prohibited unless authorized by acts of the legislature or by the people through initiative or referendum.

/s/ Lyman W. Choate /s/ Paul K. Harlow

COMMENTS

The Minority Proposal and the Majority Proposal would accomplish the same end with regards to gambling. Both would leave the matter to statutory law, where extensive previsions prohibiting gambling already exist. Neither provision would legalize gambling of any nature. However, the Majority Proposal Constitutionally states that situation. The Minority feels that to state something is illegal unless made legal is superfluous and redundant. If, as is the case, there are laws on the books, the laws will stay in force unless overturned by the court, prohibited by the Constitution, or changed by the legislature. Discussion of any court action is speculative and neither proposal prohibits the legislature from acting on the present statutory laws. The minority does not feel it is necessary to list a specific instance in which the legislature or people may act when they have been given the general power to so do. Basically, the Majority Proposal is identical to the Minority Proposal.

The minority feels the majority provision also could be somewhat confusing to the voters, whereas no section of gambling would save the confusion resulting from the redundant majority article.

The minority would also like to point out that if the Majority Proposal is adopted, gambling would join treason as a Constitutional crime, while such crimes as murder, rape and assault are statutory crimes. In this light, the minority wonders if gambling is really a basic and Constitutional issue.

LCTTERIES AND GAMBLING
6. 24	Lyman Choate	This proposal called fcr nc mentien of lctteries or gambling cf any scrt in the Constitution. This propcsal was adopted as a minority repcrt.
7. 28	Don Belcher	'This proposal Provided that all fcrms of gambling wculd remain illegal until acted upon by the legislature. This proposal was revised and incorpcrated as the majcrity propcsal.
8. 111	Gene Barbaugh	This propcsal would prohibit gambling as a means of raising revenue for the state, and would allow nonprofit organizations to engage in gift enterprises. This proposal was rejected by the committee.

9. 123 A.W. Kamhoot This proposal would have allowed nonprofit organizations to sponsor bingo. As such, it was rejected by the committee.

OATH

10. 31 Paul Harlow This proposal established a short oath for office, and was adopted as the majority proposal.

CONTINUITY OF GOVERNMENT

11. 36 Don Belcher This proposal established the seat of government in Helena and served as the core proposal for the majority report on continuity of government.

INTEREST RATES

12. 64 Jerome Cate This proposal set a limit of twelve percent (12%) of all interest charges in the state. The committee feels such a provision is not a Constitutional matter, and consequently rejected the proposal. The committee recommends this proposal be studied by the Legislative Council.

STATE AND THE LIQUOR BUSINESS

13. 112 Arnold Jacobsen This proposal would have prohibited the state from engaging in the liquor business after 1974. The committee rejected this proposal. There is no mention of the state's involvement in the liquor business in the present Constitution, and the involvement was the result of legislation. consequently, the committee feels this proposal is legislative in nature, and if the intent of the proposal should be carried out, it should be done through the legislature. The committee recommends this proposal be referred to the Legislative Council.

14. 157 Torrey Johnson This proposal is similar to Delegate Proposal 112, but it goes beyond 112 in that it prohibits the state from "monopolize(ing) what would otherwise be a competitive business." The committee rejected this proposal for the same reasons it rejected 112, and also because of the monopoly provision. The committee is extremely leary of freezing such a provision into the Constitution, and feels the ramifications of such a move cannot be predicted and are extremely difficult to speculate on with the brief amount of time that the committee and the convention have.

TRANSITION

15. 115 Daphne Bugbee This proposal would have prohibited any changes dealing with elective offices called for in the proposed Constitution from taking effect until 1977. The committee feels this decision should be made by the concerned committees in consultation with the committee on Style and Drafting. Consequently, this committee rejected the proposal.

STATE INSTITUTIONS

16. 139 Mike McKeon This proposal would have Constitutionally established the location of all state institutions at their present site. The committee rejected this Proposal, as it dangerously ignores the possibility of changing conditions. Such a proposal would block reconstruction and necessary relocation of the state prison at Deer Lodge should the buildings and the general area be rendered unsuitable by an earthquake.

OMBUDSMAN OR PEOPLE'S ADVOCATE

17. 172 Richard Champoux This proposal called for the creation of the office of Ombudsman in Bontana. The committee noted that the Legislative Committee has recommended the creation of such an office in its report. The committee also noted that the Constitntion does not now prohibit the creation of such an office. The committee feels if the office of ombudsman (People's Advocate) is a Constitutional matter, then the Iegislative Committee's Proposal is adequate to Put this section before the convention. Consequently, the committee rejected Delegate Proposal 172.

REAPPORTIONMENT

18.	62	Katie Payne	This proposal called for the creation of a reapportionment commission. The committee feels this matter was provided for by the Legislative Committee, and consequently took no specific action on the proposal.

COMMENTS

The proposed Article is a response to Delegate Proposal No. 15, which was referred to this Committee, and to other expressions of concern at the Convention. It is similar to a provision in the new North Dakota Constitution. Its only function is to serve as a reminder that the guarantees upon which Congress conditioned the entry of Montana into the Union persist Even though Ordinance.

BE IT PROPOSED BY THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT AND CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on Suffrage and Elections to read as follows:

ARTICLE ___

SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS

Section 1. BALLOT. All elections by the people shall be by secret ballot.

Section 2. QUALIFIED ELECTOR. Any citizen of the United States ~~who is~~ 18 years of age or older ~~, and~~ who meets the registration and residence requirements as provided by law is a qualified elector~~, except that no person who is~~ unless he is serving a sentence for a felony in a penal institution or ~~who~~ is ~~judged~~ of unsound mind, as determined by a court, ~~may vote.~~

Section 3. ELECTIONS. The legislature shall provide by law the requirements for ~~residency~~ residence, registration, absentee voting, and administration of elections. ~~The legislature~~ It may provide for a system of poll booth registration. and shall insure the purity of elections and guard against abuses of the electoral process.

Section 4. ELIGIBILITY FOR PUBLIC OFFICE. Any ~~person~~ qualified ~~to vote for state officers at general elections~~ elector is eligible to any public office except as otherwise provided in this Constitution~~, subject to any~~ The legislature may provide additional qualifications ~~provided by the legislature; provided, however, that~~ but no person convicted of a felony shall be eligible ~~qualified~~ to hold office ~~except upon~~ until his final discharge from state supervision.

Section 5. RESULT OF ELECTIONS. In all elections held by the people ~~under this Constitution~~, the person or persons receiving the ~~highest~~ largest number of ~~legal~~ votes shall be declared elected.

Section 6. PRIVILEGE FROM ARREST. ~~Electors shall in all cases, except treason, felony or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at elections and in going to and returning therefrom.~~ A qualified elector is privileged from arrest at polling places and in going to and returning therefrom, unless apprehended in the commission of a felony or a breach of the peace.

Report NO. 1 -- SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS

Comments on style, form, and grammar

General: A title was added to each section.

Section 2: The grammatical changes achieve brevity without altering substance.

Section 4: The language deleted from lines 22 and 23 repeated the qualifications set forth in section 2. The form of lines 25 through 2E was changed to avoid the presence of "except," "subject to," and "provided, however" in ths same sentence.

Section 5: The words deleted from line 33 are superfluous. The words "by the people" in line 25 aay also be superflucus, but remain to insure certainty that "elections" were political (as opposed to corporate, for example). Re line 1, p. 2 "numbers" are "large" or "small", not "high" or "low". If a vote is not "legal", it is cct a "vote".

Section 6: The Convention voted to adopt the language from the present Constitution, the style of which varies from that of this Article. The Committee on Style interpreted the existing language as intended to protect the voter from arrest only for acts committed enroute to the polls. it expressed that interpretation in the proposed substitute. The word "treason" has been omitted because it is the opinion of the Committee on Style that it is included within the term "felony".

Report #2 - Constitutional Revision

COMMENTS ON STYLE, FORM, AND GRAMMAR

General: 1. Section titles were added as necessary.

2. The phrase "qualified elector", adopted in report #1, was substituted for "legal voter" or its equivalent.

Section 1. The adjective "unlimited" was deleted from line 12 and line 17, section 2, because its presence is not necessary to provide for such power. In addition, its presence would make possible an interpretation that there is no power to call a "limited" Convention.

Section 2. The structural changes do not alter substance, but clarify the Convention's intention to require that the number of petitioners be spread across the state. Adding subsections serves clarity.

Section 3. The words deleted are superfluous. Adding "as provided by law" empowers the legislature to identify the submitter.

Section 4. Deletion, sutstitution, and rearrangement of language does not alter substance. The noun "delegate" was substituted for "member" because it is more appropriate.

Section 5. Grammatical changes do not alter substance.

Section 6. Two changes of labels, deletion of "otherwise" in line 18, and moving one sentence to section 4, do not alter substance.

Section 7. Structural change and deletion of superfluity do not alter substance.

Sections 8 and 9. The operative portions of each section were combined to produce one section with no change in substance.

Section 10. Renumbered "9". Structural changes and removal of superfluity do not alter substance. That portion prescribing the number of signers accords with the alteration in section 2.

Section 11. Renumbered "10". Sentence structure has been altered for clarity without change in substance.

Section 12. Renumbered "11". Structural change and deletion of superfluity do not alter substance.

CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

Section 1. CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION. The legislature, by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the members, whether one or more bodies, may at any time submit to the qualified electors the question of whether there shall be an unlimited Convention to revise, alter, or amend this Corrtitution.

Section 2. INITIATIVE FOR CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION. (1) The people may by initiative petition direct the secretary of state to submit to the qualified electors the question of uhether there shall be an unlimited Convention to revise, alter, or amend this Constitution. The petition shall be signed by at least 10 percent of the qualified electors of the state. That number shall include at least 10 percent of the qualified electors in each of two-fifths of the legislative districts.

(2) The secretary of state shall certify the filing of the petition in his office and cause the question to be submitted at the next general election.

Section 3. PERIODIC SUBMISSION. If the question of holding a Convention is not otherwise submitted during any period of 20 years, it shall be submitted as provided by law at the general election in the twentieth year following the last submission.

Section 4. CAIL OF CONVENTION. If a majority of those voting on the question answer in the affirmative, the legislature shall provide for the calling thereof at its next session. The number of delegates to the Convention shall be the same as that of the larger body of the legislature. The qualifications of delegates shall be the same as the highest qualifications required for election to the legislature. The legislature shall determine whether the delegates may be nominated on a partisan or a non-partisan basis. They shall be elected at the same places and in the same districts as are the members of the legislative body determining the number of delegates.

Section 5. CONVENTIGN EXPENSES. The legislature shall, in the act calling the Convention, designate the day, hour, and place of its meeting, and fix and provide for the pay of its members and officers and the necessary expenses of the Convention.

Section 6. OATH, VACANCIES. Before proceeding, the delegates shall take the oath provided in this Constitution. Vacancies occuring shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the legislature if not otherwise provided by law.

Section 7. CONVENTION DUTIES. The Convention shall meet after the election of the delegates and prepare such revisions, alterations, or amendments to the Constitution as may be deemed necessary. They shall be submitted to the qualified electors for ratification or rejection as a whole or in separate articles or amendments as determined by the Convention at an election appointed by the Convention for that Purpose not less than two months after adjournment. Unless so submitted and approved by a majority of the electors voting therein, no such revision, alteration or amendment shall take effect.

Section 8. AMENDMENT BY LEGISLATIVE REFERENDUM. Amendments to this Constitution may be proposed by any member of the legislature. If adopted by an affirmative roll call vote of two-thirds of all the members thereof, whether one or more bodies, the proposed amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors at the next general election. If approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, the amendment shall become a part of this Constitution on the first day of July after certification of the election returns unless the amendment provides otherwise.

Section 9. AMENDMENT BY INITIATIVE. (1) The people may also propose Constitutional amendments by initiative. Petitions including the full text of the proposed amendment shall be signed by at least 13 percent of the qualified electors of the state. That number shall include at least 10 percent of the qualified electors in each of two-fifths of the legislative districts.

(2) The petitions shall be filed with the secretary of state. If the petitions are found to have been signed by the required number of electors, the secretary of state shall cause the amendment to be published as provided by law twice each month for two months previous to the next regular state-wide election.

(3) At that election, the proposed amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors for approval or rejection. If approved by a majority voting therein, it shall become a Part of the Constitution effective the first day of July following its approval, unless the amendment provides otherwise.

Section 10. PETITION SIGNERS. The number of qualified electors required for the filing of any petition provided for in this Article shall be determined by the number of votes cast for the office of governor in the preceding general election.

Section 11. SUBMISSION. If more than one amendment is submitted at the same election, each shall be so Prepared and distinguished that it can be voted upon separately.

Report No. 3 - Legislative - (Unicameral)

COMMENTS CN STYLE, FORM, AND GRAMMAR

Section 1. Deletion cf unnecessary words does not change substance. The addition cf "s" tc "power" is self-explanatory.

Section 2. Grammatical changes dc nct alter substance.

Section 3. Rearrangement dces nct altar substance.

Section 4. As the seccnd sentence came frcm the Ccrmittee of the Whole, it did nct require six mcnths' residence in a multi-ccunty district. Because there did nct appear tc be a substantive reason fcr the difference, the drafting change does require such residence. Additicns concern districts which may consist cf only parts cf *ore thar cne ccunty.

Section 5. Here and throughcut the rest cf the Article, the label "senator" *as substituted fcr "member for the legislature," in crder that the unicameral and bicameral alternatives might be separate. Other changes dc ncr alter substance. The second sentence of subsection (1) permits a "carryover" senator to fix his own compensation.

Section 6. NC change in substance.

Section 8. The provision has been rewritten to accord with the treatment cf the elector's privilege in section 6, SUFFRAGE ANC ELECTIONS. There is no change in substance.

Section 9. The rewriting attempts tc update style, and to avoid repetition cf the phrase "under the state," the meaning cf which is unclear.

Section 10. Changes tc accomplish Clarity and brevity do not affect substance. Additicr of "fcr good cause shown" to the last sentence of subsectiоn (1) clarifies the extent cf the power.

Section 11. Changes in language and crder dc not alter substance. The last sentence of subsecticr (3) becomes subsection (6).

Section 12. The verb has been changed tc make certain the prchibitiсn.

Section 13. The change in verb in subsection (1) makes clear that removal is required. Other changes dc nct alter substance.

Section 14. Line 3: "Ccmmission" was substituted for "committee" because the members are called "ccmmissicners". Tbe language of the proposal in what is now the first sentence of subsection (3) could have been read to require the first commission to report to the session which appointed it. The alteration in language seeks to avoid that construction.

Section 15. As it came from Committee of the Whole, subsection (3) attempted to amend the Constitution without providing a method or the substantive content of the amendment. The new subsection (3) supplies those omissions but is not a change in substance. Changes in language in other subsections do not alter substance.

Sections 16 and 17. Titles were added. Rewriting does not alter substance. Both sections will probably be moved to other more appropriate Articles later.

Report #4 - Executive

COMMENTS CN STYLE, FORM, AND GRAMMAR

section 1. "Department" is the generic label adopted in report NC. 12, GENERAL GCVERNMENT. There may be scme minor confusion because tile word is used in a different context in section 7 cf this article. The GENERAL GCVERNMENT comments speak cf dividing the powers of government among three "branches". Changes for brevity and clarity do not alter substance. The order in which the offices are listed in section 1 will be used ir final form.

Section 2. Deletion cf superfluity does not alter substance.

Section 3. Some language has been rearranged and some omitted. Omissions do not alter substance.

Section 4. The Committee on Style interprets subsection (2) as differentiating between "duties" and gutfrnatorial "power" which is Constitutionally vested.

Changes do not alter substance. The provision for a "legislative post-auditor" in what was subsection (6) shouldbe moved to the Article on THE LEGISLATURE.

Section 5. (1) The Committee on Style interprets this subsection as not prohibiting either increases or decreases in salaries at any time.

(2) The changes in language are intended tc make plain that the officer will be paid for the services he renders in his office.

Section 6. Changes in language do not alter substance.

Section Celetion of the language beginning with "subsequently" removes a statutory provision which has been effected.

Section 8. (3) and (4) The words "is not in session" were substituted for "recess", which was ambiguous.

Section 10. (1) The changes in language avoid the seeming possibility that a bill becomes law only if it is not signed or vetoed. Opinion is divided on whether "veto power" is EXECUTIVE or LEGISLATIVE.

Section 11. The section was deleted because the matter is provided for in the last sentence of Section 6 cf the LEGISLATIVE ARTICLE. All following sections have been renumbered.

Section 11t The verb "restore" was substituted for "reinstate" before "citizenship" because it is used in R.C.M. 1947, section 94-4720.

Section 12. Changes in language do not alter substance.

Section 13. (2) The changes make plain that the lieutenant governor does not begin to act as governor until after the passage of 45 consecutive days.

(8) The words deleted from sentence 1 do not add force to the statement that "the successor shall be the governor." Sentence 2 was rewritten to produce brevity.

Section 14. Language changes do not alter substance. A title was added.

REPCRT NC. V — JUDICIARY

COMMENTS CN STYLE, FORM, AND GRAMMAR

Section 1. The cardinal number "one" was substituted for the indefinite article "a" tc provide harmcny with the similar provision in the United States Ccnstitutiсn. The addition of what is ncw section 5 required additicn cf "justice ccurts."

Section 2. Subsections were added and language deleted tc aid clarity withcut altering substarce. Subsection (3): Deleting "apprcval or" expresses the intent of flocr debate. Subsection (4) was moved from sectiсn 4.

Section 3. (1) Numbers in the first sentence were changed to express Intent. Reorganizatiсn and deletiсn do not alter substance.

Section 4. The first clause of subsecticr (3) was mcved to b&come the second sentence of subsecticn (2). The first sentence of the last paragraph, which was nct part cf the Ccmmittee cf the Whole amendment, ccnflicts with subsecticn (2), sc it was deleted. The reference tc process in the seccnd sentence was moved.

Section 5. Was added in Committee cf the whcle as section 10. The language deleted at the end repeats part cf section 1. The cther changes in language dc not alter substance.

Section 6. The additicn cf the wcrds "cf the district judge" to subsection (3) clarifies the scurce of the request. Changes in language and crder dc nct alter substance.

Section 7. Deletiсn and recrganizing achieve brevity and clarity without altering substance. The phrase "cther judges" in subsection (2) is understood by the Ccmmittee tc include, amcng others, "magistrates" and "Justices cf the peace."

Section 8. Sutsecticn (2) was redrafted tc clarify meaning. In addition, references to "primary electiсn" were deleted to avoid perpetuating the primary mode of selecticr in the Ccnstitution. The underlined additicn tc subsecticn (3) was substituted for "dces not run" to reconcile its prcvisicns with subsectiсn (2). Removing the adjective "contested" avcids a requirement that more than cne candidate file.

Section 9. The phrase "as prcvided ty law" uas deleted frcr subsecticn (2) because it ccntains a prohibiticr which is nct to be affected by any law but the Constitutiсn. Other extensive language and crder changes do not alter substance. Two sentences concerning forfeiture were combined in the next new sectiсn 10.

Section 11. Subsection (2) was redrafted to differentiate the requirements laid upon the commission and its discretionary power to subpoena. Other changes in the section clarify.

Sections 12 and 13. These sections will be moved to other Articles when the entire Constitution is proposed.

Report No. VI - ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

COMMENTS ON STYLE, FORM, AND GRAMMAR

Section 1. (1) The Committee added "a" before "clean and healthful", and deleted "the Montana" before environment and added "in Montana" thereafter, in order to preserve what was recalled to be the sense of amendments adopted in Committee of the Whole. Other changes in the section do not alter substance.

Section 2. Deletion of repetition at the end of the second sentence does not alter substance.

Section 2. Reordering and deletion of language do not alter substance. It should be noted, however, that the substantive committee comments appended to subsection (2) were that section 15, Article III, of the present Constitution were duplicated verbatim "to preserve the substantial number of court decisions interpreting and incorporating the language".

REPORT NC. VII - REVENUE AND FINANCE

COMMENTS CN STYLE, FCRM, AND GRAMMAR

Section 2. A much more descriptive title was substituted for cne which was misleading.

Section 3. Rewriting the sentence avoids the error cf asserting that "property... shall be...equalized."

Section 4. Rewriting serves brevity and clarity and creates consistency with the principle cf state assessment established in Section 3.

Section 5. Reorganization achieves clarity without changing substance. (As a matter of substance, it should be noted that the state has no power tc tax property of the United States, absent its permission.)

Section 6. A new title was substituted for cne which suffered the twin deficiencies cf smacking of the vernacular and misleading. Reorganization achieves clarity withcut changing substance.

Section 7. Rewriting makes plain that people -- not things -- have grievances.

Sections 8 and 9. Changes serve brevity and clarity mithcut altering substance.

Sections 10, 11, 12, 13. Consultaticn with the substantive committee revealed that the phrase "subdivisions and districts of the state" did not express that committee's intention. The definitiicn of "local government units" proposed in secticr 1 cf report NO. XI from the LOCAL GCVERNMENT COMMITTEE is not adequate. Research showed that the ucrds "local", "gcvernmental", and "entity" have been legally applied and construed. Acccrdingly, the Committee on Style adopted, as expressive of the intentiicn o f the substantive committee, the phrase "ccunties, cities, towns, and all cther local governmental entities." That phrase (modified to suit the context) is substituted in each of these sections for the phrase "subdivisicns and districts cf the state."

BE II PROPOSED BY THE BILL OF RIGHTS COMMITTEE:

That there be a new Article on the Bill of Rights to read as follows:

PREAMBLE

We the people of Montana grateful to God for the quiet beauty of our state, the grandeur of our mountains, the vastness of our rolling plains, and desiring to improve the quality of life, equality of opportunity and to secure the blessings of liberty for this and future generations do ordain and establish this Constitution.

ARTICLE ---

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS

Section 1. POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY. All political power is vested in and derived from the people. All government of right originates with the people, is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole.

Section 2. SELF-GOVERNMENT. The People have the exclusive right of governing themselves as a free, sovereign, and independent state. They may alter or abolish the Constitution and form of government whenever they deem it necessary.

Section 3. INALIANABLE RIGHTS. All Persons are born free and have certain inalienable rights. They include the right to a clean and healthful environment and the rights of pursuing life's basic necessities, enjoying and defending their lives and liberties, acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and seeking their safety, health and happiness in all lawful ways. In enjoying these rights, all persons recognize corresponding responsibilities.

Section 4. INDIVIDUAL DIGNITY. The dignity of the human being is inviolable. No person shall be denied the equal protection of the laws. Neither the state nor any Person, firm, corporation, or institution shall discriminate against any person in the exercise of his civil or political rights on account of race, color, sex, culture, social origin or condition, or political or religious ideas.

Section 5. FREEDOM OF RELIGION. The state shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

Section 6. FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY. The people shall have the right to assemble peaceably in order to petition for redress of grievances or protest governmental action.

Section 7. FREEDOM OF SPEECH, EXPRESSION, AND PRESS. No law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech or expression. Every person shall be free to speak or publish whatever he will on any subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty. In all suits and prosecutions for libel or slander the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the facts.

Section 8. RIGHT OF PARTICIPATION. The public has the right to expect governmental agencies to afford such reasonable opportunity for citizen participation in the operation of the agencies prior to the final decision as may be provided by law.

Section 9. RIGHT TO KNOW. No person shall be deprived of the right to examine documents or to observe the delitfrations of all public bodies or agencies of state government and its subdivisions, except in cases in which the demand of individual privacy clearly exceeds the merits of public disclosure.

Section If. RIGHT OF PRIVACY. The right of individual privacy is essential to the well-being of a free society and shall not be infringed without the showing of a compelling state interest.

Section 11. SEARCHES AND SEIZURES. The people shall be secure in their persons, papers, homes and effects from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any place, or seize any person or thirg shall issue without describing the place to be searched or the person or thing to be seized, or without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation reduced to writiny.

Section 12. RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS. The right of any person to keep or bear arms in defense of his own home, person, and property, or in aid of the civil power when thereto legally summoned, shall not be called in question, tut nothing herein contained shall be held to permit the carrying of concealed weapons.

Section 13. RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE. All elections shall be free and open, and no power, civil or military, shall at ary time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage.

Section 14. ADULT RIGHTS. A person 18 years of age or older is an adult for all purposes.

Section 15. RIGHTS OF PERSONS NOT ADULTS. The rights of persons under 18 years of age shall include, but not be limited to, all the fundamental rights of this article unless specifically precluded by laws which enhance the protection of such persons.

Section 16. THE ADMINISTRATICN CF JUSTICE. Courts of justice shall be open to every person, and speedy remedy afforded for every injury cf person, property, or character. No person shall be deprived of this full legal redress for injury incurred in employment for which another person may be liable except as to fellcw employees and his immediate employer whc hired him if such immediate employer provides ccverage under the workmen's Compensation laws of this state. Right and justice shall be administered without sale, denial, or delay.

Section 17. CUE PROCESS CE LAW. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property withcut due prccess of law.

Section 18. STATE SUBJECT TO SUIT. The state, ccnnties, cities, towns, and all other local governmental entities shall have no immunity frcm suit for injury to a person or property. This provision shall apply only to causes of actic n arising after July 1, 1973.

REPORT NO. VIII - EILL CF RIGHTS

COMMENTS CN STYLE, FCRM, AND GRAMMAR

Introduction: The Committee cn Style, sensitive to the point made by the substantive committee's ccnnents that scme "political philcsophy provisions are nct cften immediately justiciable," has stayed its editcrial hand.

Section 1. Punctuation changes serve clarity and dc not alter substance.

Section 2. Deleting "of the state" frcm the first sentence avoids repetiticr. Changing the third persch plural possessive prcncun "their" tc the definite article makes Plain the function of a Ccnstitutich is to constitute the crganic law cf the state rather than to establish a pcssessory relaticnship between the pecple and the instrument.

Section 3. Structural charges serve clarity uithcut altering substance.

Section 4. The word "law" was made plural to agree with the parent 14th Amendment. Alteratich of the form, but nct the substance, cf the second sentence makes the prchibitich crystal clear. Ccuntless court decisichs make plain that a prohibition directed against the "state" includes all its arms, including "agencies or subdivisichs".

Section 6. Words were added tc clarify the intention of the substantive committee expressed in its ccmment to this sectich. As rewritten, the sectich makes plain that it prctects one right - "tc assemble peaceably" - fcr tuc purposes: (1) to petition for redress cf grievances cr (2) tc prctest gcvernmental actich.

Section 8. Adding "such" and "may be" dces not alter substance. The additicns were necessitated by the flccr amendment having been appended.

Section 11. Slight changes clarify without altering substance.

Section 14 The fcrm was changed tc consist with drafting standards.

Section 15. The title and content were changed tc accord with the substance cf sectich 14.

Section 18. The substituted phrase is the same as that adopted for the same purpcse in the Article cn REVENUE AND TAXATION. The second sentence should be mcved to the adoption schedule. (Suggestich for title: SCVEREIGN IMMUNITY IS DEAD! LCNG LIVE

THE KING!)

Section 20. Changes in form do not alter substance.

Sections 21, 22, 23, and 24. "Once burned, twice shy". The substantive committee comments to each section read that the committee voted unanimously tc retain the old section unchanged. SO....

Section 25. Changes remcve redurdancy.

Section 26. Rewriting for clarity does nct alter substance.

Section 27. "The committee voted unanimously to retain former Article TII, Section 12 uncharged".

Section 28. Rewriting makes plain that it is the act cf termination of state supervision which restcres "all civil and pclitical rights." That phrase from the substantive ccmaittee comments specifies "full rights." The proposal: "Death shall not be prescribed as a penalty for any crime against the state." will be placed on the ballct, as directed by the Convention.

Sections 30, 31, 32, 33, 34. The substantive committee voted unanimously to preserve these provisicns unchanged.

COMMENTS ON STYLE, FORM AND GRAMMAR

NON-MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS

Section ~~63~~. The number was changed.

LABOR

Section 1. The words "headed by" were substituted for "under the control of" to produce consistency with section 8 (1) of the EXECUTIVE Article. The transition schedule will provide for substituting the word "legislature" for "senate" if the voters approve a unicameral.

Section ~~32~~. The number was changed. Other changes serve brevity, but do not alter substance.

INSTITUTIONS AND ASSISTANCE

Sections 7 and 3. Substitution of the active for the passive form of the verb does not alter substance. The phrase "as may be prescribed by law" was deleted as redundant.

Sections 2 and 3. The order was reversed so that the phrase "such institutions" in what was originally section 3 would follow immediately after the section containing the antecedent of "such."

(2) The legislature shall ~~provide for~~ require a review procedure ~~each~~ once every ten years after the first election.

REPORT NO. XI - LOCAL GOVERNMENT

COMMENTS ON STYLE, FORM, AND GRAMMAR

Section 2. Changes in the first sentence specify the date upon which the identity of the counties will be established. The noun "ratification" was substituted for "adoption" because the former is applied by the present Constitution to the process which will occur on June 6.

Section 3. Language changes shorten and clarify without altering substance.

Section 4. Changes in language and order do not alter substance.

Section 5. Language changes do not alter substance. The words "may set limits" were removed from subsection (1) for two reasons: 1. The verb shifts from the mandatory "shall" to the permissive "may." 2. The legislature "may set limits" in the usual exercise of its powers without any reference being made thereto.

Section 6. Changes from plural to singular accord with good drafting standards.

Section 7. Reorganizing produces clarity without changing substance.

Section 9. Language changes do not alter substance.

COMMENTS

The proposed Article is a response to Delegate Proposal No. 15, which was referred to this Committee, and to other expressions of concern at the Convention. It is similar to a provision in the new North Dakota Constitution. Its only function is to serve as a reminder that the guarantees upon which Congress conditioned the entry of Montana into the Union persist even though ordinance No. I is not reprinted.

PREAMBLE

We the people of Montana grateful to God for the quiet beauty of our state, the grandeur of our mountains, the vastness of our rolling plains, and desiring to improve the quality of life, equality of opportunity and to secure the blessings of liberty for this and future generations do ordain and establish this Constitution.

ARTICLE I

COMPACT WITH THE UNITED STATES

All provisions of the enabling act of Congress (approved February 22, 1889, 25 Stat. 676), as amended and of Ordinance No. 1, appended to the Constitution of the state of Montana and approved February 22, 1889, including the agreement and declaration that all lands owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States, continue in full force and effect until revoked by the consent of the United States and the people of Montana.

ARTICLE II

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS

Section 1. POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY. All political power is vested in and derived from the people. All government of right originates with the people, is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole.

Section 2. SELF-GOVERNMENT. The people have the exclusive right of governing themselves as a free, sovereign, and independent state. They may alter or abolish the Constitution and form of government whenever they deem it necessary.

Section 3. INALIENABLE RIGHTS. All persons are born free and have certain inalienable rights. They include the right to a clean and healthful environment and the rights of pursuing life's basic necessities, enjoying and defending their lives and liberties, acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and seeking their safety, health and happiness in all lawful ways. The CONSTITUTION of the STATE OF MONTANA

PREAMBLE

We the people of Montana grateful to God for the quiet beauty of our state, the grandeur of our mountains, the vastness of our rolling plains, and desiring to improve the quality of life, equality of opportunity and to secure the blessings of liberty for this and future generations do ordain and establish this constitution.

ARTICLE I
COMPACT WITH THE UNITED STATES

All provisions of the enabling act of Congress (approved February 22, 1889, 25 Stat. 676), as amended and of Ordinance No. 1, appended to the Constitution of the state of Montana and approved February 22, 1889, including the agreement and declaration that all lands owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the congress of the United States, continue in full force and effect until revoked by the consent of the United States and the people of Montana.

ARTICLE II
DECLARATION OF RIGHTS

Section 1. POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY. All political power is vested in and derived from the people. All government of right originates with the people, is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole.

Section 2. SELF-GOVERNMENT. The people have the exclusive right of governing themselves as a free, sovereign, and independent state. They may alter or abolish the constitution and form of government whenever they deem it necessary.

Section 3. INALIENABLE RIGHTS. All persons are born free and have certain inalienable rights. They include the right to a clean and healthful environment and the rights of pursuing life's basic necessities, enjoying and defending their lives and liberties, acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and seeking their safety, health and happiness in all lawful ways. In enjoying these rights, all persons recognize corresponding responsibilities.

Section 4. INDIVIDUAL DIGNITY. The dignity of the human being is inviolable. No person shall be denied the equal protection of the laws. Neither the state nor any person, firm, corporation, or institution shall discriminate against any person in the exercise of his civil or political rights on account of race, color, sex, culture, social origin or condition, or political or religious ideas.

Section 5. FREEDOM OF RELIGION. The state shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

Section 6. FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY. The people shall have the right peaceably to assemble, petition for redress or peaceably protest governmental action.

Section 7. FREEDOM OF SPEECH, EXPRESSION, AND PRESS. No law shall be passed impairing the freedom of speech or expression. Every person shall be free to speak or publish whatever he will on any subject, being responsible for all abuse of that liberty. In all suits and prosecutions for libel or slander the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and the jury, under the direction of the court, shall determine the law and the facts.

Section 8. RIGHT OF PARTICIPATION. The public has the right to expect governmental agencies to afford such reasonable opportunity for citizen participation in the operation of the agencies prior to the final decision as may be provided by law.

Section 9. RIGHT TO KNOW. No person shall be deprived of the right to examine documents or to observe the deliberations of all public bodies or agencies of state government and its subdivisions, except in cases in which the demand of individual privacy clearly exceeds the merits of public disclosure.

Section 10. RIGHT OF PRIVACY. The right of individual privacy is essential to the well-being of a free society and shall not be infringed without the showing of a compelling state interest.

Section 11. SEARCHES AND SEIZURES. The people shall be secure in their persons, papers, homes and effects from unreasonable searches and seizures. No warrant to search any place, or seize any person or thing shall issue without describing the place to be searched or the person or thing to be seized, or without probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation reduced to writing.

Section 12. RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS. The right of any person to keep or bear arms in defense of his own home, person, and property, or in aid of the civil power when thereto legally summoned, shall not be called in question, but nothing herein contained shall be held to permit the carrying of concealed weapons.

Section 13. RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE. All elections shall be free and open, and no power, civil or military, shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage.

Section 14. ADULT RIGHTS. A person 18 years of age or older is an adult for all purposes.

Section 15. RIGHTS OF PERSONS NOT ADULTS. The rights of persons under 18 years of age shall include, but not be limited to, all the fundamental rights of this Article unless specifically precluded by laws which enhance the protection of such persons.

Section 16. THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE. Courts of justice shall be open to every person, and speedy remedy afforded for every injury of person, property, or character. No person shall be deprived of this full legal redress for injury incurred in employment for which another person may be liable except as to fellow employees and his immediate employer who hired him if such immediate employer provides coverage under the Workmen's Compensation Laws of this state. Right and justice shall be administered without sale, denial, or delay.

Section 17. DUE PROCESS OF LAW. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.

Section 18. STATE SUBJECT TO SUIT. The state, counties, cities, towns, and all other local governmental entities shall have no immunity from suit for injury to a person or property. This provision shall apply only to causes of action arising after July 1, 1973.

Section 19. HABEAS CORPUS. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall never be suspended.

Section 20. INITIATION OF PROCEEDINGS. (1) Criminal offenses within the jurisdiction of any court inferior to the district court shall be prosecuted by complaint. All criminal actions in district court, except those on appeal, shall be prosecuted either by information, after examination and commitment by a magistrate or after leave granted by the court, or by indictment without such examination, commitment or leave.

(2) A grand jury shall consist of eleven persons, of whom eight must concur to find an indictment. A grand jury shall be drawn and summoned only at the discretion and order of the district judge.

Section 21. BAIL. All persons shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses, when the proof is evident or the presumption great.

Section 22. EXCESSIVE SANCTIONS. Excessive bail shall not be required, or excessive fines imposed, or cruel and unusual punishments inflicted,

Section 23. DETENTION. No person shall be imprisoned for the purpose of securing his testimony in any criminal proceeding longer than may be necessary in order to take his deposition. If he can give security for his appearance at the time of trial, he shall be discharged upon giving the same; if he cannot give security, his deposition shall be taken in the manner provided by law, and in the presence of the accused and his counsel, or without their presence, if they shall fail to attend the examination after reasonable notice of the time and place thereof.

Section 24. RIGHTS OF THE ACCUSED. In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to appear and defend in person and by counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation; to meet the witnesses against him face to face; to have process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county or district in which the offense is alleged to have been committed, subject to the right of the state to have a change of venue for any of the causes for which the defendant may obtain the same.

Section 25. SELF-INCRIMINATION AND DOUBLE JEOPARDY. No person shall be compelled to testify against himself in a criminal proceeding. No person shall be again put in jeopardy for the same offense previously tried in any jurisdiction.

Section 26. TRIAL BY JURY. The right of trial by jury is secured to all and shall remain inviolate. But upon default of appearance or by consent of the parties expressed in such manner as the law may provide, all cases may be tried without a jury or before fewer than the number of jurors provided by law. In all civil actions, two-thirds of the jury may render a verdict, and a verdict so rendered shall have the same force and effect as if all had concurred therein. In all criminal actions, the verdict shall be unanimous.

Section 27. IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT. No person shall be imprisoned for debt except in the manner provided by law, upon refusal to deliver up his estate for the benefit of his creditors, or in cases of tort, where there is strong presumption of fraud.

Section 28. RIGHTS OF THE CONVICTED. Laws for the punishment of crime shall be founded on the principles of prevention and reformation. Full rights are restored by termination of state supervision for any offense against the state.

Section 29. EMINENT DOMAIN. Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation to the full extent of the loss having been first made to or paid into court for the owner. In the event of litigation, just compensation shall include necessary expenses of litigation to be awarded by the court when the private property owner prevails.

Section 30. TREASON AND DESCENT OF ESTATES. Treason against the state shall consist only in levying war against it, or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort; no person shall be convicted of treason except on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on his confession in open court; no person shall be attainted of treason or felony by the legislature; no conviction shall cause the loss of property to the relatives or heirs of the convicted. The estates of suicides shall descend or vest as in cases of natural death.

Section 31. EX POST FACTO, OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS, AND IRREVOCABLE PRIVILEGES. No ex post facto law nor any law impairing the obligation of contracts, or making any irrevocable grant of special privileges, franchises, or immunities, shall be passed by the legislature.

Section 32. CIVILIAN CONTROL OF THE MILITARY. The military shall always be in strict subordination to the civil power; no soldier shall in time of peace be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, except in the manner provided by law.

Section 33. IMPORTATION OF ARMED PERSONS. No armed person or persons or armed body of men shall be brought into this state for the preservation of the peace, or the suppression of domestic violence, except upon the application of the legislature, or of the governor when the legislature cannot be convened,

Section 34. UNENUMERATED RIGHTS. The enumeration in this constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny, impair, or disparage others retained by the people.

Section 35. SERVICEMEN, SERVICEWOMEN, AND VETERANS. The people declare that Montana servicemen, servicewomen, and veterans may be given special considerations determined by the legislature.

ARTICLE III
GENERAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. SEPARATION OF POWERS. The power of the government of this state is divided into three distinct branches-legislative, executive, and judicial. No person or persons charged with the exercise of power properly belonging to one branch shall exercise any power properly belonging to either of the others, except as in this constitution expressly directed or permitted.

Section 2. CONTINUITY OF GOVERNMENT. The seat of government shall be in Helena, except during periods of emergency resulting from disasters or enemy attack. The legislature may enact laws to insure the continuity of government during a period of emergency without regard for other provisions of the constitution. They shall be effective only during the period of emergency that affects a particular office or governmental operation.

Section 3. OATH OF OFFICE. Members of the legislature and all executive, ministerial and judicial officers, shall take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation, before they enter upon the duties of their offices: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support, protect and defend the constitution of the United States, and the constitution of the state of Montana, and that I will discharge the duties of my office with fidelity (so help me God)." No other oath, declaration, or test shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust.

Section 4. INITIATIVE. (1) The people may enact laws by initiative on all matters except appropriations of money and local or special laws.

(2) Initiative petitions must contain the full text of the proposed measure, shall be signed by at least five percent of the qualified electors in each of at least one-third of the legislative representative districts and the total number of signers must be at least five percent of the total qualified electors of the state. Petitions shall be filed with the secretary of state at least three months prior to the election at which the measure will be voted upon.

(3) The sufficiency of the initiative petition shall not be questioned after the election is held.

Section 5. REFERENDUM. (1) The peoplemay approve or reject by referendum any act of the legislature except an appropriation of money. A referendum shall be held either upon order by the legislature or upon petition signed by at least five percent of the qualified electors in each of at least one-third of the legislative representative districts. The total number of signers must be at least five percent of the qualified electors of the state. A referendum petition shall be filed with the secretary of state no later than six months after adjournment of the legislature which passed the act.

(2) An act referred to the people is in effect until suspended by petitions signed by at least 15 percent of the qualified electors in a majority of the legislative representative districts. If so suspended the act shall become operative only after it is approved at an election, the result of which has been determined and declared as provided by law.

Section 6. ELECTIONS. The people shall vote on initiative and referendum measures at the general election unless the legislature orders a special election

Section 7. NUMBER OF ELECTORS. The number of qualified electors required in each legislative representative district and in the state shall be determined by the number of votes cast for the office of governor in the preceding general election.

Section 8. PROHIBITION. The provisions of this Article do not apply to CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION, Article XIV.

Section 9. GAMBLING. All forms of gambling, lotteries, and gift enterprises are prohibited.

ARTICLE IV
SUFFRAGE AND ELECTIONS

Section 1. BALLOT. All elections by the people shall be by secret ballot.

Section 2. QUALIFIED ELECTOR. Any citizen of the United States 18 years of age or older who meets the registration and residence requirements provided by law is a qualified elector unless he is serving a sentence for a felony in a penal institution or is of unsound mind, as determined by a court.

Section 3. ELECTIONS. The legislature shall provide by law the requirements for residence, registration, absentee voting, and administration of elections. It may provide for a system of poll booth registration, and shall insure the purity of elections and guard against abuses of the electoral process.

Section 4. ELIGIBILITY FOR PUBLIC OFFICE. Any qualified elector is eligible to any public office except as otherwise provided in this constitution. The legislature may provide additional qualifications but no person convicted of a felony shall be eligible to hold office until his final discharge from state supervision.

Section 5. RESULT OF ELECTIONS. In all elections held by the people, the person or persons receiving the largest number of votes shall be declared elected.

Section 6. PRIVILEGE FROM ARREST. A qualified elector is privileged from arrest at polling places and in going to and returning therefrom, unless apprehended in the commission of a felony or a breach of the peace.

ARTICLE V
THE LEGISLATURE

Section 1. POWER AND STRUCTURE. The legislative power is vested in a legislature consisting of a senate and a house of representatives. The people reserve to themselves the powers of initiative and referendum.

Section 2. SIZE. The size of the legislature shall be provided by law, but the senate shall not have more than 50 or fewer than 40 members and the house shall not have more than 100 or fewer than 80 members.

Section 3. ELECTION AND TERMS. A member of the house of representatives shall be elected for a term of two years and a member of the senate for a term of four years each to begin on a date provided by law. One-half of the senators shall be elected every two years.

Section 4. QUALIFICATIONS. A candidate for the legislature shall be a resident of the state for at least one year next preceding the general election. For six months next preceding the general election, he shall be a resident of the county if it contains one or more districts or of the district if it contains all or parts of more than one county.

Section 5. COMPENSATION. Each member of the legislature shall receive compensation for his services and allowances provided by law. No legislature may fix its own compensation.

Section 6. SESSIONS. The legislature shall be a continuous body for two-year periods beginning when newly elected members take office. Any business, bill, or resolution pending at adjournment of a session shall carry over with the same status to any other session of the legislature during the biennium. The legislature shall meet at least once a year in regular session of not more than 60 legislative days. Any legislature may increase the limit on the length of any subsequent session. The legislature may be convened in special sessions by the governor or at the written request of a majority of the members.

Section 7. VACANCIES. A vacancy in the legislature shall be filled by special election for the unexpired term unless otherwise provided by law.

Section 8. IMMUNITY. A member of the legislature is privileged from arrest during attendance at sessions of the legislature and in going to and returning therefrom, unless apprehended in the commission of a felony or a breach of the peace. He shall not be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in the legislature.

Section 9. DISQUALIFICATION. No member of the legislature shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office under the state; and no member of congress, or other person holding an office (except notary public, or the militia) under the United States or this state, shall be a member of the legislature during his continuance in office.

Section 10. ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURE. (1) Each house shall judge the election and qualifications of its members. It may by law vest in the courts the power to try and determine contested elections. Each house shall choose its officers from among its members, keep a journal, and make rules for its proceedings. Each house may expel or punish a member for good cause shown with the concurrence of two-thirds of all its members.

(2) A majority of each house constitutes a quorum. A smaller number may adjourn from day to day and compel attendance of absent members.

(3) The sessions of the legislature and of the committee of the whole, all committee meetings, and all hearings shall be open to the public.

(4) The legislature may establish a legislative council and other interim committees. The legislature shall establish a legislative post-audit committee which shall supervise post-auditing duties provided by law.

(5) Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn or recess for more than three days or to any place other than that in which the two houses are sitting.

Section 11. BILLS. (1) A law shall be passed by bill which shall not be so altered or amended on its passage through the legislature as to change its original purpose. No bill shall become law except by a vote of the majority of all members present and voting.

(2) Every vote of each member of the legislature on each substantive question in the legislature, in any committee, or in committee of the whole shall be recorded and made public. On final passage, the vote shall be taken by ayes and noes and the names entered on the journal.

(3) Each bill, except general appropriation bills and bills for the codification and general revision of the laws, shall contain only one subject, clearly expressed in its title. If any subject is embraced in any act and is not expressed in the title, only so much of the act not so expressed is void.

(4) A general appropriation bill shall contain only appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the legislative, executive, and judicial branches, for interest on the public debt, and for public schools. Every other appropriation shall be made by a separate bill, containing but one subject.

(5) No appropriation shall be made for religious, charitable, industrial, educational, or benevolent purposes to any private individual, private association, or private corporation not under control of the state.

(6) A law may be challenged on the ground of noncompliance with this section only within two years after its effective date.

Section 12. LOCAL AND SPECIAL LEGISLATION. The legislature shall not pass a special or local act when a general act is, or can be made, applicable.

Section 13. IMPEACHMENT. (1) The governor, executive officers, heads of state departments, judicial officers, and such other officers as may be provided by law are subject to impeachment, and upon conviction shall be removed from office. Other proceedings for removal from public office for cause may be provided by law.

(2) The legislature shall provide for the manner, procedure, and causes for impeachment and may select the senate as tribunal.

(3) Impeachment shall be brought only by a two-thirds vote of the house. The tribunal hearing the charges shall convict only by a vote of two-thirds or more of its members.

(4) Conviction shall extend only to removal from office, but the party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall also be liable to prosecution according to law.

Section 14. DISTRICTING AND APPORTIONMENT. (1) The state shall be divided into as many districts as there are members of the house, and each district shall elect one representative. Each senate district shall be composed of two adjoining house districts, and shall elect one senator. Each district shall consist of compact and contiguous territory. All districts shall be as nearly equal in population as is practicable.

(2) In the legislative session following ratification of this constitution and thereafter in each session preceding each federal population census, a commission of five citizens, none of whom may be public officials, shall be selected to prepare a plan for redistricting and reapportioning the state into legislative and congressional districts. The majority and minority leaders of each house shall each designate one commissioner. Within 20 days after their designation, the four commissioners shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the commission. If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time prescribed, a majority of the supreme court shall select him.

(3) The commission shall submit its plan to the legislature at the first regular session after its appointment or after the census figures are available. Within 30 days after submission, the legislature shall return the plan to the commission with its recommendations. Within 30 days thereafter, the commission shall file its final plan with the secretary of state and it shall become law. The commission is then dissolved.

ARTICLE VI
THE EXECUTIVE

Section 1. OFFICERS. (1) The executive branch includes a governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, superintendent of public instruction, and auditor.

(2) Each holds office for a term of four years which begins on the first Monday of January next succeeding election, and until a successor is elected and qualified.

(3) Each shall reside at the seat of government, there keep the public records of his office, and perform such other duties as are provided in this constitution and by law.

Section 2. ELECTION. (1) The governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, superintendent of public instruction, and auditor shall be elected by the qualified electors at a general election provided by law.

(2) Each candidate for governor shall file jointly with a candidate for lieutenant governor in primary elections, or so otherwise comply with nomination procedures provided by law that the offices of governor and lieutenant governor are voted upon together in primary and general elections.

Section 3. QUALIFICATIONS. (1) No person shall be eligible to the office of governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, superintendent of public instruction, or auditor unless he is 25 years of age or older at the time of his election. In addition, each shall be a citizen of the United States who has resided within the state two years next preceding his election.

(2) Any person with the foregoing qualifications is eligible to the office of attorney general if an attorney in good standing admitted to practice law in Montana who has engaged in the active practice thereof for at least five years before election.

(3) The superintendent of public instruction shall have such educational qualifications as are provided by law.

Section 4. DUTIES. (1) The executive power is vested in the governor who shall see that the laws are faithfully executed. He shall have such other duties as are provided in this constitution and by law.

(2) The lieutenant governor shall perform the duties provided by law and those delegated to him by the governor. No power specifically vested in the governor by this constitution may be delegated to the lieutenant governor.

(3) The secretary of state shall maintainofficialrecords ofthe executive branch and of the acts of the legislature, as provided by law. He shall keep the great seal of the state of Montana and perform any other duties provided by law.

(4) The attorney general is the legal officer of the state and shall have the duties and powers provided by law.

(5) The superintendent of public instruction and the auditor shall have such duties as are provided by law.

Section 5. COMPENSATION. (1) Officers of the executive branch shall receive salaries provided by law.

(2) During his term, no elected officer of the executive branch may hold another public office or receive compensation for services from any other governmental agency. He may be a candidate for any public office during his term.

Section 6. VACANCY IN OFFICE. (1) If the office of lieutenant governor becomes vacant by his succession to the office of governor, or by his death, resignation, or disability as determined by law, the governor shall appoint a qualified person to serve in that office for the remainder of the term. If both the elected governor and the elected lieutenant governor become unable to serve in the office of governor, succession to the respective offices shall be as provided by law for the period until the next general election. Then, a governor and lieutenant governor shall be elected to fill the remainder of the original term.

(2) If the office of secretary of state, attorney general, auditor, or superintendent of public instruction becomes vacant by death, resignation, or disability as determined by law, the governor shall appoint a qualified person to serve in that office until the next general election and until a successor is elected and qualified. The person elected to fill a vacancy shallhold the office until the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was elected.

Section 7. 20 DEPARTMENTS. All executive and administrative offices, boards, bureaus, commissions, agencies and instrumentalities of the executive branch (except for the office of governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, superintendent of public instruction, and auditor) and their respective functions, powers, and duties, shall be allocated by law among not more than 20 principal departments so as to provide an orderly arrangement in the administrative organization of state government. Temporary commissions may be established by law and need not be allocated within a department, Section 8. APPOINTING POWER. (1) The departments provided for in section 7 shall be under the supervision of the governor. Except as otherwise provided in this constitution or by law, each department shall be headed by a single executive appointed by the governor subject to confirmation by the senate to hold office until the end of the governor's term unless sooner removed by the governor.

(2) The governor shall appoint, subject to confirmation by the senate, all officers provided for in this constitution or by law whose appointment or election is not otherwise provided for. They shall hold office until the end of the governor's term unless sooner removed by the governor.

(3) If a vacancy occurs in any such office when the legislature is not in session, the governor shall appoint a qualified person to discharge the duties thereof until the office is filled by appointment and confirmation.

(4) A person not confirmed by the senate for an office shall not, except at its request, be nominated again for that office at the same session, or be appointed to that office when the legislature is not in session.

Section 9. BUDGET AND MESSAGES. The governor shall at the beginnning of each legislative session, and may at other times, give the legislature information and recommend measures he considers necessary. The governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail for all operating funds the proposed expenditures and estimated revenue of the state.

Section 10. VETO POWER. (1) Each bill passed by the legislature, except bills proposing amendments to the Montana constitution, bills ratifying proposed amendments to the United States constitution, resolutions, and initiative and referendum measures, shall be submitted to the governor for his signature. If he does not sign or veto the bill within five days after its delivery to him if the legislature is in session or within 25 days if the legislature is adjourned, it shall become law. The governor shall return a vetoed bill to the legislature with a statement of his reasons therefor.

(2) The governor may return any bill to the legislature with his recommendation for amendment. If the legislature passes the bill in accordance with the governor's recommendation, it shall again return the bill to the governor for his reconsideration. The governor shall not return a bill for amendment a second time.

(3) If after receipt of a veto message, two-thirds of the members present approve the bill, it shall become law.

(4) If the legislature is not in session when the governor vetoes a bill, he shall return the bill with his reasons therefor to the legislature as provided by law. The legislature may reconvene to reconsider any bill so vetoed.

(5) The governor may veto items in appropriation bills, and in such instances the procedure shall be the same as upon veto of an entire bill.

Section 11. SPECIAL SESSION. Whenever the governor considers it in the public interest, he may convene the legislature.

Section 12. PARDONS. The governor may grant repreives, commutations and pardons, restore citizenship, and suspend and remit fines and forfeitures subject to procedures provided by law.

Section 13. MILITIA. (1) The governor is commander-in-chief of the militia forces of the state, except when they are in the actual service of the United States. He may call out any part or all of the forces to aid in the execution of the laws, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, or protect life and property in natural disasters.

(2) The militia forces shall consist of all able-bodied citizens of the state except those exempted by law.

Section 14. SUCCESSION. (1) If the governor-elect is disqualified or dies, the lieutenant governor-elect upon qualifying for the office shall become governor for the full term. If the governor-elect fails to assume office for any other reason, the lieutenant governor-elect upon qualifying as such shall serve as acting governor until the governor-elect is able to assume office, or until the office becomes vacant.

(2) The lieutenant governor shall serve as acting governor when so requested in writing by the governor. After the governor has been absent from the state for more than 45 consecutive days, the lieutenant governor shall serve as acting governor.

(3) He shall serve as acting governor when the governor is so disabled as to be unable to communicate to the lieutenant governor the fact of his inability to perform the duties of his office. The lieutenant governor shall continue to serve as acting governor until the governor is able to resume the duties of his office.

(4) Whenever, at any other time, the lieutenant governor and attorney general transmit to the legislature their written declaration that the governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the legislature shall convene to determine whether he is able to do so.

(5) If the legislature, within 21 days after convening, determines by two-thirds vote of its members that the governor is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the lieutenant governor shall serve as acting governor. Thereafter, when the governor transmits to the legislature his written declaration that no inability exists, he shall resume the powers and duties of his office within 15 days, unless the legislature determines otherwise by two-thirds vote of its members. If the legislature so determines, the lieutenant governor shall continue to serve as acting governor.

(6) If the office of governor becomes vacant by reason of death, resignation, or disqualification, the lieutenant governor shall become governor for the remainder of the term, except as provided in this constitution.

(7) Additional succession to fill vacancies shall be provided by law.

(8) When there is a vacancy in the office of governor, the successor shall be the governor. The acting governor shall have the powers and duties of the office of governor only for the period during which he serves.

Section 15. INFORMATION FOR GOVERNOR. (1) The governor may require information in writing, under oath when required, from the officers of the executive branch upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

(2) He may require information in writing, under oath, from all officers and managers of state institutions.

(3) He may appoint a committee to investigate and report to him upon the condition of any executive office or state institution.

ARTICLE VII
THE JUDICIARY

Section 1. JUDICIAL POWER. The judicial power of the state is vested in one supreme court, district courts, justice courts, and such other courts as may be provided by law.

Section 2. SUPREME COURT JURISDICTION. (1) The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction and may issue, hear, and determine writs appropriate thereto. It has original jurisdiction to issue, hear, and determine writs of habeas corpus and such other writs as may be provided by law.

(2) It has general supervisory control over all other courts.

(3) It may make rules governing appellate procedure, practice and procedure for all other courts, admission to the bar and the conduct of its members. Rules of procedure shall be subject to disapproval by the legislature in either of the two sessions following promulgation.

(4) Supreme court process shall extend to all parts of the state.

Section 3. SUPREME COURT ORGANIZATION. (1) The supreme court consists of one chief justice and four justices, but the legislature may increase the number of justices from four to six. A majority shall join in and pronounce decisions, which must be in writing.

(2) A district judge shall be substituted for the chief justice or a justice in the event of disqualification or disability, and the opinion of the district judge sitting with the supreme court shall have the same effect as an opinion of a justice.

Section 4. DISTRICT COURT JURISDICTION. (1) The district court has original jurisdiction in all criminal cases amounting to felony and all civil matters and cases at law and in equity. It may issue all writs appropriate to its jurisdiction. It shall have the power of naturalization and such additional jurisdiction as may be delegated by the laws of the United States or the state of Montana. Its process shall extend to all parts of the state,

(2) The district court shall hear appeals from inferior courts as trials anew unless otherwise provided by law. The legislature may provide for direct review by the district court of decisions of administrative agencies.

(3) Other courts may have jurisdiction of criminal cases not amounting to felony and such jurisdiction concurrent with that of the district court as may be provided by law.

Section 5. JUSTICES OF THE PEACE. (1) There shall be elected in each county at least one justice of the peace with qualifications, training, and monthly compensation provided by law. There shall be provided such facilities that they may perform their duties in dignified surroundings.

(2) Justice courts shall have such original jurisdiction as may be provided by law. They shall not have trial jurisdiction in any criminal case designated a felony except as examining courts.

(3) The legislature may provide for additional justices of the peace in each county.

Section 6. JUDICIAL DISTRICTS. (1) The legislature shall divide the state into judicial districts and provide for the number of judges in each district. Each district shall be formed of compact territory and be bounded by county lines.

(2) The legislature may change the number and boundaries of judicial districts and the number of judges in each district, but no change in boundaries or the number of districts or judges therein shall work a removal of any judge from office during the term for which he was elected or appointed.

(3) The chief justice may, upon request of the district judge, assign district judges and other judges for temporary service from one district to another, and from one county to another.

Section 7. TERMS AND PAY. (1) All justices and judges shall be paid as provided by law, but salaries shall not be diminished during terms of office.

(2) Terms of office shall be eight years for supreme court justices, six years for district court judges, four years for justices of the peace, and as provided by law for other judges.

Section 8. SELECTION. (1) The governor shall nominate a replacement from nominees selected in the manner provided by law for any vacancy in the office of supreme court justice or district court judge. If the governor fails to nominate within thirty days after receipt of nominees, the chief justice or acting chief justice shall make the nomination. Each nomination shall be confirmed by the senate, but a nomination made while the senate is not in session shall be effective as an appointment until the end of the next session. If the nomination is not confirmed, the office shall be vacant and another selection and nomination shall be made.

(2) If, at the first election after senate confirmation, and at the election before each succeeding term of office, any candidate other than the incumbent justice or district judge files for election to that office, the name of the incumbent shall be placed on the ballot. If there is no election contest for the office, the name of the incumbent shall nevertheless be placed on the general election ballot to allow voters of the state or district to approve or reject him. If an incumbent is rejected, another selection and nomination shall be made.

(3) If an incumbent does not run, there shall be an election for the office.

Section 9. QUALIFICATIONS. (1) A citizen of the United States who has resided in the state two years immediately before taking office is eligible to the office of supreme court justice or district court judge if admitted to the practice of law in Montana for at least five years prior to the date of appointment or election. Qualifications and methods of selection of judges of other courts shall be provided by law.

(2) No supreme court justice or district court judge shall solicit or receive compensation in any form whatever on account of his office, except salary and actual necessary travel expense.

(3) Except as otherwise provided in this constitution, no supreme court justice or district court judge shall practice law during his term of office, engage in any other employment for which salary or fee is paid, or hold office in a political party.

(4) Supreme court justices shall reside within the state. Every other judge shall reside during his term of office in the district, county, township, precinct, city or town in which he is elected or appointed.

Section 10. FORFEITURE OF JUDICIAL POSITION. Any holder of a judicial position forfeits that position by either filing for an elective public office other than a judicial position or absenting himself from the state for more than 60 consecutive days.

Section 11. REMOVAL AND DISCIPLINE. (1) The legislature shall create a judicial standards commission consisting of five persons and provide for the appointment thereto of two district judges, one attorney, and two citizens who are neither judges nor attorneys.

(2) The commission shall investigate complaints, make rules implementing this section, and keep its proceedings confidential. It may subpoena witnesses and documents.

(3) Upon recommendation of the commission, the supreme court may:

(a) Retire any justice or judge for disability that seriously interferes with the performance of his duties and is or may become permanent; or

(b) Censure, suspend, or remove any justice or judge for willful misconduct in office, willful and persistent failure to perform his duties, or habitual intemperance.

ARTICLE VIII
REVENUE AND FINANCE

Section 1. TAX PURPOSES. Taxes shall be levied by general laws for public purposes.

Section 2. TAX POWER INALIENABLE. The power to tax shall never be surrendered, suspended, or contracted away.

Section 3. PROPERTY TAX ADMINISTRATION. The state shall appraise, assess, and equalize the valuation of all property which is to be taxed in the manner provided by law.

Section 4. EQUAL VALUATION. All taxing jurisdictions shall use the assessed valuation of property established by the state.

Section 5. PROPERTY TAX EXEMPTIONS. (1) The legislature may exempt from taxation:

(a) Property of the United States, the state, counties, cities, towns, school districts, municipal corporations, and public libraries, but any private interest in such property may be taxed separately.

(b) Institutions of purely public charity, hospitals and places of burial not used or held for private or corporate profit, places for actual religious worship, and property used exclusively for educational purposes.

(c) Any other classes of property.

(2) The legislature may authorize creation of special improvement districts for capital improvements and the maintenance thereof. It may authorize the assessment of charges for such improvements and maintenance against tax exempt property directly benefited thereby.

Section 6. HIGHWAY REVENUE NON-DIVERSION. (1) Revenue from gross vehicle weight fees and excise and license taxes (except general sales and use taxes) on gasoline, fuel, and other energy sources used to propel vehicles on public highways shall be used as authorized by the legislature, after deduction of statutory refunds and adjustments, solely for:

(a) Payment of obligations incurred for construction, reconstruction, repair, operation, and maintenance of public highways, streets, roads, and bridges.

(b) Payment of county, city, and town obligations on streets, roads, and bridges.

(c) Enforcement of highway safety, driver education, tourist promotion, and administrative collection costs.

(2) Such revenue may be appropriated for other purposes by a three-fifths vote of the members of each house of the legislature.

Section 7. TAX APPEALS. The legislature shall provide independent appeal procedures for taxpayer grievances about appraisals, assessments, equalization, and taxes. The legislature shall include a review procedure at the local government unit level.

Section 8. STATE DEBT. No state debt shall be created unless authorized by a two-thirds vote of the members of each house of the legislature or a majority of the electors voting thereon. No state debt shall be created to cover deficits incurred because appropriations exceeded anticipated revenue.

Section 9. BALANCED BUDGET. Appropriations by the legislature shall not exceed anticipated revenue.

Section 10. LOCAL GOVERNMENT DEBT. The legislature shall by law limit debts of counties, cities, towns, and all other local governmental entities.

Section 11. USE OF LOAN PROCEEDS. All money borrowed by or on behalf of the state or any county, city, town, or other local governmental entity shall be used only for purposes specified in the authorizing law.

Section 12. STRICT ACCOUNTABILITY. The legislature shall by law insure strict accountability of all revenue received and money spent by the state and counties, cities, towns, and all other local governmental entities.

Section 13. INVESTMENT OF PUBLIC FUNDS. (1) The legislature shall provide for a unified investment program for public funds and provide rules therefor, including supervision of investment of surplus funds of all counties, cities, towns, and other local governmental entities. Each fund forming a part of the unified investment program shall be separately identified. Except for monies contributed to retirement funds, no public funds shall be invested in private corporate capital stock. The investment program shall be audited at least annually and a report thereof submitted to the governor and legislature.

(2) The public school fund and the permanent funds of the Montana university system and all other state institutions of learning shall be safely and conservatively invested in:

(a) Public securities of the state, its subdivisions, local government units, and districts within the state, or

(b) Bonds of the United States or other securities fully guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States, or

(c) Such other safe investments bearing a fixed rate of interest as may be provided by law.

Section 14. PROHIBITED PAYMENTS. Except for interest on the public debt, no money shall be paid out of the treasury unless upon an appropriation made by law and a warrant drawn by the proper officer in pursuance thereof.

ARTICLE IX
ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Section 1. PROTECTION AND IMPROVEMENT. (1) The state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environmentin Montana for present and future generations.

(2) The legislature shall provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty.

(3) The legislature shall provide adquateremedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources.

Section 2. RECLAMATION. All lands disturbed by the taking of natural resources shall be reclaimed. The legislature shall provide effective requirements and standards for the reclamation of lands disturbed.

Section 3. WATER RIGHTS. (1) All existing rights to the use of any waters for any useful or beneficial purpose are hereby recognized and confirmed.

(2) The use of all water that is now or may hereafter be appropriated for sale, rent, distribution, or other beneficial use, the right of way over the lands of others for all ditches, drains, flumes, canals, and aqueducts necessarily used in connection therewith, and the sites for reservoirs necessary for collecting and storing water shall be held to be a public use.

(3) All surface, underground, flood, and atmospheric waters within the boundaries of the state are the property of the state for the use of its people and are subject to appropriation for beneficial uses as provided by law.

(4) The legislature shall provide for the administration, control, and regulation of water rights and shall establish a system of centralized records, in addition to the present system of local records.

Section 4. CULTURAL RESOURCES. The legislature shall provide for the identification, acquisition, restoration, enhancement, preservation, and administration of scenic, historic, archeologic, scientific, cultural, and recreational areas, sites, records and objects, and for their use and enjoyment by the people.

ARTICLE X
EDUCATION AND PUBLIC LANDS

Section 1. EDUCATIONAL GOALS AND DUTIES. (1) It is the goal of the people to establish a system of education which will develop the full educational potential of each person. Equality of educational opportunity is guaranteed to each person of the state.

(2) The state recognizes the distinct and unique cultural heritage of the American Indians and is committed in its educational goals to the preservation of their cultural integrity.

(3) The legislature shall provide a basic system of free quality public elementary and secondary schools. The legislature may provide such other educational institutions, public libraries, and educational programs as it deems desirable. It shall fund and distribute in an equitable manner to the school districts the state's share of the cost of the basic elementary and secondary school system.

Section 2. PUBLIC SCHOOL FUND. The public school fund of the state shall consist of: (1) Proceeds from the school lands which have been or may hereafter be granted by the United States,

(2) Lands granted in lieu thereof,

(3) Lands given or granted by any person or corporation under any law or grant of the United States,

(4) All other grants of land or money made from the United States fox-general educational purposes or without special purpose,

(5) All interests in estates that escheat to the state,

Section 3. PUBLIC SCHOOL FUND INVIOLATE. The public school fund shall forever remain inviolate, guaranteed by the state against loss or diversion.

Section 4. BOARD OF LAND COMMISSIONERS. The governor, superintendent of public instruction, auditor, secretary of state, and attorney general constitute the board of land commissioners. It has the authority to direct, control, lease, exchange, and sell school lands and lands which have been or may be granted for the support and benefit of the various state educational institutions, under such regulations and restrictions as may be provided by law.

Section 5. PUBLIC SCHOOL FUND REVENUE. (1) Ninety-five percent of all the interest received on the public school fund and ninety-five percent of all rent received from the leasing of school lands and all other income from the public school fund shall be equitably apportioned annually to public elementary and secondary school districts as provided by law.

(2) The remaining five percent of all interest received on the public school fund, and the remaining five percent of all rent received from the leasing of school lands and all other income from the public school fund shall annually be added to the public school fund and become and forever remain an inseparable and inviolable part thereof.

Section 6. AID PROHIBITED TO SECTARIAN SCHOOLS. (1) The legislature, counties, cities, towns, school districts, and public corporations shall not make any direct or indirect appropriation or payment from any public fund or monies, or any grant of lands or other property for any sectarian purpose or to aid any church, school, academy, seminary, college, university, or other literary or scientific institution, controlled in whole or in part by any church, sect, or denomination.

(2) This section shall not apply to funds from federal sources provided to the state for the express purpose of distribution to non-public education.

Section 7. NON-DISCRIMINATION IN EDUCATION. No religious or partisan test or qualification shall be required of any teacher or student as a condition of admission into any public educational institution. Attendance shall not be required at any religious service. No sectarian tenets shall be advocated in any public educational institution of the state. No person shall be refused admission to any public educational institution on account of sex, race, creed, religion, political beliefs, or national origin.

Section 8. SCHOOL DISTRICT TRUSTEES. The supervision and control of schools in each school district shall be vested in a board of trustees to be elected as provided by law.

Section 9. BOARDS OF EDUCATION. (1) There is a state board of education composed of the board of regents of higher education and the board of public education. It is responsible for long-range planning, and for coordinating and evaluating policies and programs for the state's educational systems. It shall submit unified budget requests. A tie vote at any meeting may be broken by the governor, who is an ex officio member of each component board.

(2) (a) The government and control of the Montana university system is vested in a board of regents of higher education which shall have full power, responsibility, and authority to supervise, coordinate, manage and control the Montana university system and shall supervise and coordinate other public educational institutions assigned by law.

(b) The board consists of seven members appointed by the governor, and confirmed by the senate, to overlapping terms, as provided by law. The governor and superintendent of public instruction are ex officio non-voting members of the board.

(c) The board shall appoint a commissioner of higher education and prescribe his term and duties.

(d) The funds and appropriations under the control of the board of regents are subject to the same audit provisions as are all other state funds.

(3) (a) There is a board of public education to exercise general supervision over the public school system and such other public educational institutions as may be assigned by law. Other duties of the board shall be provided by law.

(b) The board consists of seven members appointed by the governor, and confirmed by the senate, to overlapping terms as provided by law. The governor, commissioner of higher education and state superintendent of public instruction shall be ex officio non-voting members of the board.

Section 10. STATE UNIVERSITY FUNDS. The funds of the Montana university system and of all other state institutions of learning, from whatever source accruing, shall forever remain inviolate and sacred to the purpose for which they were dedicated. The various funds shall be respectively invested under such regulations as may be provided by law, and shall be guaranteed by the state against loss or diversion. The interest from such invested funds, together with the rent from leased lands or properties, shall be devoted to the maintenance and perpetuation of the respective institutions.

Section 11. PUBLIC LAND TRUST, DISPOSITION. (1) All lands of the state that have been or may be granted by congress, or acquired by gift or grant or devise from any person or corporation, shall be public lands of the state. They shall be held in trust for the people, to be disposed of as hereafter provided, for the respective purposes for which they have been or may be granted, donated or devised.

(2) No such land or any estate or interest therein shall ever be disposed of except in pursuance of general laws providing for such disposition, or until the full market value of the estate or interest disposed of, to be ascertained in such manner as may be provided by law, has been paid or safely secured to the state.

(3) No land which the state holds by grant from the United States which prescribes the manner of disposal and minimum price shall be disposed of except in the manner and for at least the price prescribed without the consent of the United States.

(4) All public land shall be classified by the board of land commissionersin a manner provided by law. Any public land may be exchanged for other land, public or private, which is equal in value and, as closely as possible, equal in area.

ARTICLE XI
LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Section 1. DEFINITION. The term "local government units" includes, but is not limited to, counties and incorporated cities and towns. Other local government units may be established by law.

Section 2. COUNTIES. The counties of the state are those that exist on the date of ratification of this constitution. No county boundary may be changed or county seat transferred until approved by a majority of those voting on the question in each county affected.

Section 3. FORMS OF GOVERNMENT. (1) The legislature shall provide methods for governing local government units and procedures for incorporating, classifying, merging, consolidating, and dissolving such units, and altering their boundaries. The legislature shall provide such optional or alternative forms of government that each unit or combination of units may adopt, amend, or abandon an optional or alternative form by majority of those voting on the question.

(2) One optional form of county government includes, but is not limited to, the election of three county commissioners, a clerk and recorder, a clerk of district court, a county attorney, a sheriff, a treasurer, a surveyor, a county superintendent of schools, and assessor, a coroner, and a public administrator. The terms, qualifications, duties, and compensation of those offices shall be provided by law. The Board of county commissioners may consolidate two or more such offices. The Boards of two or more counties may provide for a joint office and for the election of one official to perform the duties of any such office in those counties.

Section 4. GENERAL POWERS. (1) A local government unit without self-government powers has the following general powers:

(a) An incorporated city or town has the powers of a municipal corporation and legislative, administrative, and other powers provided or implied by law.

(b) A county has legislative, administrative, and other powers provided or implied by law.

(c) Other local government units have powers provided by law.

(2) The powers of incorporated cities and towns and counties shallbeliberally construed.

Section 5. SELF-GOVERNMENT CHARTERS. (1) The legislature shall provide procedures permitting a local government unit or combination of units to frame, adopt, amend, revise, or abandon a self-government charter with the approval of a majority of those voting on the question. The procedures shall not require approval of a charter by a legislative body.

(2) If the legislature does not provide such procedures by July 1, 1975, they may be established by election either:

(a) Initiated by petition in the local government unit or combination of units; or

(b) Called by the governing body of the local government unit or combination of units.

(3) Charter provisions establishing executive, legislative, and administrative structure and organization are superior to statutory provisions.

Section 6. SELF-GOVERNMENT POWERS. A local government unit adopting a self-government charter may exercise any power not prohibited by this constitution, law, or charter. This grant of self-government powers may be extended to other local government units through optional forms of government provided for in section 3.

Section 7. INTERGOVERNMENTAL COOPERATION. (1) Unless prohibited by law or charter, a local government unit may

(a) cooperate in the exercise of any function, power, or responsibility with,

(b) share the services of any officer or facilities with,

(c) transfer or delegate any function, power, responsibility, or duty of any officer to one or more other local government units, school districts, the state, or the United States.

(2) The qualified electors of a local government unit may, by initiative or referendum, require it do do so.

Section 8. INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM. The legislature shall extend the initiative and referendum powers reserved to the people by the constitution to the qualified electors of each local government unit.

Section 9. VOTER REVIEW OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT. (1) The legislature shall, within four years of the ratification of this constitution, provide procedures requiring each local government unit or combination of units to review its structure and submit one alternative form of government to the qualified electors at the next general or special election.

(2) The legislature shall require a review procedure once every ten years after the first election.

ARTICLE XII
DEPARTMENTS AND INSTITUTIONS

Section 1. AGRICULTURE. (1) The legislature shall provide for a Department of Agriculture and enact laws and provide appropriations to protect, enhance, and develop all agriculture.

(2) Special levies may be made on livestock and on agricultural commodities for disease control and indemnification, predator control, and livestock and commodity inspection, protection, research, and promotion. Revenue derived shall be used solely for the purposes of the levies.

Section 2. LABOR. (1) The legislature shall provide for a Department of Labor and Industry, headed by a Commissioner appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate.

(2) A maximum period of 8 hours is a regular day's work in all industries and employment except agriculture and stock raising. The legislature may change this maximum period to promote the general welfare.

Section 3. INSTITUTIONS AND ASSISTANCE. (1) The state shallestablish and support institutions and facilities as the public good may require, including homes which may be necessary and desirable for the care of veterans.

(2) Persons committed to any such institutions shall retain all rights except those necessarily suspended as a condition of commitment. Suspended rights are restored upon termination of the state's responsibility.

(3) The legislature shall provide such economic assistance and social and rehabilitative services as may be necessary for those inhabitants who, by reason of age, infirmities, or misfortune may have need for aid of society.

ARTICLE XIII
GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 1. NON-MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. (1) Corporate charters shall be granted, modified, or dissolved only pursuant to general law.

(2) The legislature shall provide protection and education for the people against harmful and unfair practices by either foreign or domestic corporations, individuals, or associations.

(3) The legislature shall pass no law retrospective in its operations which imposes on the people a new liability in respect to transactions or considerations already passed.

Section 2. CONSUMER COUNSEL. The legislature shall provide for an office of consumer counsel which shall have the duty of representing consumer interests in hearings before the public service commission or any other successor agency. The legislature shall provide for the funding of the office of consumer counsel by a special tax on the net income or gross revenues of regulated companies.

Section 3. SALARY COMMISSION. The legislature shall create a salary commission to recommend compensation for the judiciary and elected members of the legislative and executive branches.

Section 4. CODE OF ETHICS. The legislature shall provide a code of ethics prohibiting conflict between public duty and private interest for members of the legislature and all state and local officers and employees.

Section 5. EXEMPTION LAWS. The legislature shall enact liberal homestead and exemption laws.

Section 6. PERPETUITIES. No perpetuities shall be allowed except for charitable purposes.

ARTICLE XIV
CONSTITUTIONAL REVISION

Section 1. CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION. The legislature, by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the members, whether one or more bodies, may at any time submit to the qualified electors the question of whether there shall be an unlimited convention to revise, alter, or amend this constitution.

Section 2. INITIATIVE FOR CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION. (1) The people may by initiative petition direct the secretary of state to submit to the qualified electors the question of whether there shall be an unlimited convention to revise, alter, or amend this constitution. The petition shall be signed by at least ten percent of the qualified electors of the state. That number shall include at least ten percent of the qualified electors in each of two-fifths of the legislative districts.

(2) The secretary of state shall certify the filing of the petition in his office and cause the question to be submitted at the next general election.

Section 3. PERIODIC SUBMISSION. If the question of holding a conventionisnot otherwise submitted during any period of 20 years, it shall be submitted as provided by law at the general election in the twentieth year following the last submission.

Section 4. CALL OF CONVENTION. If a majority of those voting on the question answer in the affirmative, the legislature shall provide for the calling thereof at its next session. The number of delegates to the convention shall be the same as that of the larger body of the legislature. The qualifications of delegates shall be the same as the highest qualifications required for election to the legislature. The legislature shall determine whether the delegates may be nominated on a partisan or a nonpartisan basis. They shall be elected at the same places and in the same districts as are the members of the legislative body determining the number of delegates.

Section 5. CONVENTION EXPENSES. The legislature shall, in the actcalling the convention, designate the day, hour, and place of its meeting, and fix and provide for the pay of its members and officers and the necessary expenses of the convention.

Section 6. CONVENTION DUTIES. Before proceeding, the delegates shall take the oath provided in this constitution. Vacancies occurring shall be filled in the manner provided for filling vacancies in the legislature if not otherwise provided by law.

Section 7. CONVENTION DUTIES. The convention shall meet after the election of the delegates and prepare such revisions, alterations, or amendments to the constitution as may be deemed necessary. They shall be submitted to the qualified electors for ratification or rejection as a whole or in separate articles or amendments as determined by the convention at an election appointed by the convention for that purpose not less than two months after adjournment. Unless so submitted and approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, no such revision, alteration, or amendment shall take effect.

Section 8. AMENDMENT BY LEGISLATIVE REFERENDUM. Amendments to this constitution may be proposed by any member of the legislature. If adopted by an affirmative roll call vote of two-thirds of all the members thereof, whether one or more bodies, the proposed amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors at the next general election. If approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, the amendment shall become a part of this constitution on the first day of July after certification of the election returns unless the amendment provides otherwise.

Section 9. AMENDMENT BY INITIATIVE. (1) The people may also propose constitutional amendments by initiative. Petitions including the full text of the proposed amendment shall be signed by at least ten percent of the qualified electors of the state. That number shall include at least ten percent of the qualified electors in each of two-fifths of the legislative districts.

(2) The petitions shall be filed with the secretary of state. If the petitions are found to have been signed by the required number of electors, the secretary of state shall cause the amendment to be published as provided by law twice each month for two months previous to the next regular state-wide election.

(3) At that election, the proposed amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors for approval or rejection. If approved by a majority voting thereon, it shall become a part of the constitution effective the first day of July following its approval, unless the amendment provides otherwise.

Section 10. PETITION SIGNERS. The number of qualified electors required for the filing of any petition provided for in this Article shall be determined by the number of votes cast for the office of governor in the preceding general election.

Section 11. SUBMISSION. If more than one amendment is submitted at the same election, each shall be so prepared and distinguished that it can be voted upon separately.

ADOPTION SCHEDULE

These Schedule provisions are part of this Constitution only for the limited purposes of determining whether this Constitution has been adopted, determining what changes result from the vote on each of the separately submitted issues, and establishing the general effective date of this Constitution. No provision of this Schedule shall be published unless it becomes part of the Constitution as the result of the adoption of a separately submitted provision.

Section 1. This Constitution, if approved by a majority of those voting at the election as provided by the Constitution of 1889, shall take effect on July 1, 1973, except as otherwise provided in sections 1 and 2 of the Transition Schedule. The Constitution of 1889, as amended, shall thereafter be of no effect.

Section 2. (1) If separate issue 2A concerning the unicameral form of thelegislatureis approved by a majority of those voting at the election andif the proposed Constitutionis approved by the electors, then:

(a) ARTICLE V, THE LEGISLATURE, shall be deleted and the following substituted therefor:

ARTICLE V
THE LEGISLATURE

Section 1. POWER AND STRUCTURE. The legislative power is vested in a legislature of one chamber whose members are designated senators. The people reserve to themselves the powers of initiative and referendum.

Section 2. SIZE. The number of senators shall be prouided by law, but it shall not be smaller than 90 nor larger than 105.

Section 3. ELECTION AND TERMS. A senator shall be elected for a term of four years to begin on a date provided by law. One-half of the senators shall be elected every two years.

Section 4. QUALIFICATIONS. A candidate for the legislature shall be a resident of the state for at least one year next preceding the general election. For six months next preceding the general election, he shall be a resident of the county if it contains one or more districts or of the district if it contains all or parts of more than one county.

Section 5. COMPENSATION. Each member of the legislature shall receive compensation for his services and allowances prouided by law. No legislature may fix its own compensation.

Section 6. SESSIONS. The legislature shall be a continuous body for two-year periods beginning when newly elected members take office. Any business, bill, or resolution pending at adjournment of a session shall carry over with the same status to any other session of the legislature during the biennium. The legislature shall meet at least once a year in regular sessions of not more than 60 legislative days. Any legislature may increase the limit on the length of any subsequent session. The legislature may be convened in special sessions by the governor or at the written request of a majority of the members.

Section 7. VACANCIES. A vacancy in the legislature shall be filled by special election for the unexpired term unless otherwise provided by law.

Section 8. IMMUNITY. A member of the legislature is privileged from arrest during attendance at sessions of the legislature and in going to and returning therefrom, unless apprehended in the commission of a felony or a breach of the peace. He shall not be questioned in any other place for any speech or debate in the legislature.

Section 9. DISQUALIFICATION. No member of the legislature shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, be appointed to any civil office under the state; and no member of congress, or other person holding an office (except notarypublic, or the militia) under the United States or this state, shall be a member of the legislature during his continuance in office.

Section 10. ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURE. (1) The legislature shall judge the election and qualifications of senators. It may by law vest in the courts the power to try and determine contested elections. It shall choose its officers from among its members, keep a journal, and make rules for its proceedings. It may expel or punish a senator for good cause shown with the concurrence of two-thirds of all the senators.

(2) A majority of the senators constitutes a quorum. A smaller number may adjourn from day to day and compel attendance of absent members.

(3) The sessions of the legislature and of the committee of the whole, all committee meetings, and all hearings shall be open to the public.

(4) The legislature may establish a legislative council and other interim committees. The legislature shall establish a legislatiuepost-audit committee which shall supervise post-auditing duties prouided by law.

Section 11. BILLS. (1) A law shall be passed by bill which shall not be so altered or amended on its passage through the legislature as to change its original purpose. No bill shall become law except by a vote of the majority of all members present and voting.

(2) Every vote of each member on each substantive question in the legislature, in any committee, or in committee of the whole shall be recorded and made public. On final passage, the vote shall be taken by ayes and noes and the names entered on the journal.

(3) Each bill, except general appropriation bills and bills for the codification and general revision of the laws, shall contain only one subject, clearly expressed in its title. If any subject is embraced in any act and is not expressed in the title, only so much of the act not so expressed is void.

(4) A general appropriation bill shall contain only appropriations for the ordinary expenses of the legislative, executive, and judicial branches, for interest on the public debt, and for public schools. Every other appropriation shall be made by a separate bill containing but one subject.

(5) No appropriation shall be made for religious, charitable, industrial, educational, or benevolent purposes to any private individual, private association, or private corporation not under control of the state.

(6) A law may be challenged on the ground of noncompliance with this section only within two years after its effective date.

Section 12. LOCAL AND SPECIAL LEGISLATION. The legislature shall not pass a special or local act when a general act is, or can be made, applicable.

Section 13. IMPEACHMENT. (1) The governor, executive officers, heads of state departments, judicial officers, and such other officers as may be provided by law are subject to impeachment, and upon conviction shall be removed from office. Other proceedings for removal from public office for cause may be provided by law.

(2) The legislature shall provide for the manner, procedure, and causes for impeachment and shall provide for a tribunal.

(3) Impeachment can be brought only by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. The tribunal hearing the charges shall convict only by a vote of two-thirds or more of its members.

(4) Conviction shall extend only to removal from office, but the party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall also be liable to prosecution according to law.

Section 14. DISTRICTING AND APPORTIONMENT, (1) The state shall be divided into as many districts as there are senators and each district shall elect one senator. Each district shall consist of compact and contiguous territory. All districts shall be as nearly equal in population as is practicable.

(2) In the legislative session following ratification of this constitution and thereafter in each session preceding each federal population census, a commission of five citizens, none of whom may be public officials, shall be selected to prepare a plan for redistricting and reapportioning the state into legislative and congressional districts. The majority and minority leaders of the legislature shall each select two commissioners. Within 20 days after their designation, the four commissioners shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the commission. If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time provided, a majority of the supreme court shall select him.

(3) The commission shall submit its plan to the legislature at the first regular session after its appointment or after the census figures are available. Within 30 days after submission, the legislature shall return the plan to the commission with its recommendations. Within 30 days thereafter, the commission shall file its final plan with the secretary of state and it shall become law. The commission is then dissolved.

Section 15. REFERENDUM OF UNICAMERAL LEGISLATURE. (1) In 1980 the secretary of state shall place upon the ballot at the general election the question: "Shall the unicameral legislature form be continued?"

(2) If a majority of the qualified electors voting on the question answer in the affirmative, the form shall be continued, and this section shall be of no further effect.

(3) If a majority of the qualified electors voting on the question answer in the negative, Article V of this constitution is amended by deleting sections 1, 2, 3, 10, 13, and 14, and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

(a) "Section 1. POWER AND STRUCTURE. The legislative power is vested in a legislature consisting of a senate and a house of representatives. The people reserve to themselves the powers of initiative and referendum."

(b) "Section 2. SIZE. The size of the legislature shall be provided by law, but the senate shall not have more than 50 or fewer than 40 members and the house shall not have more than 100 or fewer than 80 members."

(c) "Section 3. ELECTION AND TERMS. A member of the house of representatives shall be elected for a term of two years and a member of the senate for a term of four years, each to begin on a dateprouided by law. One-half of the senators shall be elected every two years."

(d) "Section 10. ORGANIZATIONAND PROCEDURE. (1) Each house shall judge the election and qualifications of its members. It may by law vest in the courts the power to try and determine contested elections. Each house shall choose its officers from among its members, keep a journal, and make rules for its proceedings. Each house may expel or punish a member for good cause shown with the concurrence of two-thirds of all its members.

"(2) A majority of each house constitutes a quorum. A smaller number may adjourn from day to day and compel attendance of absent members.

"(3) The sessions of the legislature and of the committee of the whole, all committee meetings, and all hearings shall be open to the public.

"(4) The legislature may establish a legislative council and other interim committees. The legislature shall establish a legislatiuepost-audit committee which shall supervisepost-auditing duties provided by law.

"(5) Neither house shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn or recess formore than three days or to any place other than that in which the two houses are sitting,"

(e) "Section 13. IMPEACHMENT. (1) The governor, executive officers, heads of state departments, judicial officers, end such other officers as may be provided by law are subject to impeachment, and upon conviction shall be removedfrom office. Otherproceedings for removal from public office for cause may be provided by law.

'(2) The legislature shall provide for the manner, procedure and causes for impeachment and may select the senate as tribunal.

"(3) Impeachment shall be brought only by a two-thirds vote of the house. The tribunal hearing the charges shall convict only by a vote of two-thirds or more of its members.

"(4) Conviction shall extend only to removal from office, but theparty, whether convicted or acquitted, shall also be liable to prosecution according to law."

(f) "Section 14. DISTRICTINGANDAPPORTIONMENT. (1) The stateshall be divided into as many districts as there are members of the house, and each district shall elect one representative. Each senate district shall be composed of two adjoining house districts, and shall elect onesenator. Eachdistrict shall consist of compact and contiguous territory. Alldistricts shall be as nearly equal in population as is practicable.

"(2) In the legislative session following this amendment and thereafter in each session preceding each federal population census, a commission of five citizens, none of whom may be public officials, shall be selected to prepare a plan for redistricting and reapportioning the state into legislative and congressional districts. The majority and minority leaders of each house shall each designate one commissioner. Within 20 days after their designation, the four commissioners shall select the fifth member, who shall serve as chairman of the commission. If the four members fail to select the fifth member within the time provided, a majority of the supreme court shall select him.

"(3) The commission shall submit its plan to the legislature at the first regular session after its appointment or after the census figures are available. Within 30 days aftersubmission, the legislature shall return the plan to the commission with its recommendations. Within 30 days thereafter, the commission shall file its final plan with the secretary of state and it shall become law. The commission is then dissolved."

(4) The members of the unicameral legislature shall remain in office and their authority to act shall continue until the members of a bicameral body are elected and qualified.

(5) The Senate chamber existing upon the date of adoption of this Article shall remain intact until the election provided for in this section has determined whether the unicameral legislature is to continue.

(6) When the provisions of this section have been carried out, it shall be of no further effect.

(b) The words "of each house" are deleted from subsection (2) of section 6 and from section 8, ARTICLE VIII, REVENUE AND FINANCE.

(c) The word "legislature" is substituted for "senate" in subsections (1), (2), and (4) of section 8, ARTICLE VI, THE EXECUTIVE, in subsections (1) and (2) of section 8. ARTICLE VII. THE JUDICIARY, and in subsection (1) of section 2, ARTICLE XII, DEPARTMENTS AND INSTITUTIONS.

(2) If separate issue 2A concerning the unicameral form of the legislature is not approved by the electors and if the proposed Constitution is approved by the electors, then ARTICLE V, THE LEGISLATURE, shall be retained.

Section 3. (1) If separate issue 3A is not approved by a majority of those voting at the election and if the proposed Constitution is approved by the electors, then section 9 of ARTICLE III, GENERAL GOVERNMENT shall be retained.

(2) If separate issue 3A is approved by the electors and if the proposed Constitution is approved by the electors, then section 9 shall be deleted from ARTICLE III, GENERAL GOVERNMENT and the following substituted therefor: "Section 9. GAMBLING. All forms of gambling, lotteries, and gift enterprises are prohibited unless authorized by acts of the legislature or by the people through initiative or referendum."

Section 4. If separate issue 4B is approved by a majority of those voting at the election and if the proposed Constitution is approved by the electors, then there shall be added to section 28, ARTICLE II, DECLARATION OF RIGHTS, the following sentence: "Death shall not be prescribed as a penalty for any crime against the state." And there shall be deleted from section 21 of the same ARTICLE the following. ", except for capital offenses, when the proof is evident or the presumption great."

TRANSITION SCHEDULE

The following provisions shall remain part of this Constitution until their terms have been executed. Once each year the attorney general shall review the following provisions and certify to the secretary of state which, if any, have been executed. Any provisions so certified shall thereafter be removed from this Schedule and no longer published as part of this Constitution.

Section 1. Accelerated Effective Date

Section 2. Delayed Effective Date

Section 3. Prospective Operation of Declaration of Rights

Section 4. Terms of Judiciary

Section 5. Terms of Legislators

Section 6. General Transition

Section 1. ACCELERATED EFFECTIVE DATE. Section 6 (SESSIONS) and section 14 (DISTRICTING AND APPORTIONMENT) of Article V, THE LEGISLATURE, shall be effective January 1, 1973.

Section 2. DELAYED EFFECTIVE DATE. The provisions of sections 1, 2, and 3 of Article V, THE LEGISLATURE, shall not become effective until the date the first redistricting and reapportionment plan becomes law.

Section 3. PROSPECTIVE OPERATION OF DECLARATION OF RIGHTS. Any rights, procedural or substantive, created for the first time by Article II shall be prospective and not retroactive.

Section 4. TERMS OF JUDICIARY. Supreme court justices, district court judges, and justices of the peace holding office when this Constitution becomes effective shall serve the terms for which they were elected or appointed.

Section 5. TERMS OF LEGISLATORS. (1) The terms of all legislators elected before the effective date of this Constitution shall end on December 31 of the year in which the first redistricting and reapportionment plan becomes law.

(2) The senators first elected under this Constitution shall draw lots to establish a term of two years for one-half of their number.

Section 6. GENERAL TRANSITION. (1) The rights and duties of all public bodies shall remain as if this Constitution had not been adopted with the exception of such changes as are contained in this Constitution. All laws, ordinances, regulations, and rules of court

Volume III

PREFACE

Introduction

Volumes III through VII present the verbatim transcripts of the 1972 Montana Constitutional Convention. These volumes encompass the total deliberations of the 100 Convention delegates as they debated, amended, and adopted Montana's present Constitution.

The Legislative Council staff audited, edited, proofed, and indexed the five volumes presented here in their "copious free time" — between Legislative Sessions, work on the Montana Code and its Annotations, and numerous research publications. The arduous project owes much to the interest, dedication, and perseverance of the staff. Just as importantly, the project would never have begun without the generous support and encouragement of a Legislature dedicated to preserving the history of a state constitution which represents the foundation of Montana's laws.

History of Project

Chapter 373, Laws of 1977, provided that the Legislative Council appoint a three-member committee to supervise the staff of the Legislative Council in editing and publishing the Proceedings of the 1971 Constitutional Convention, The committee consisted of one senator, one representative, and a former constitutional convention delegate. Chapter 373 required the Committee to formulate editorial guidelines, establish the format of publication, and prepare a style manual for editorial consistency. Chapter 373 also provided that 1,000 copies of the proceedings be printed, with 60 copies to be distributed free of charge as follows: Law Library — 4 copies; State Library — 10 copies; Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, Superintendent of Public Instruction, State Auditor, and each state department — each 1 copy; Supreme Court — 5 copies; Montana Historical Society — 5 copies; and the Legislative Council — 10 copies.

On April 13, 1977, the Legislative Council appointed Senator Margaret Warden, Representative JoEllen Estenson, and Delegate Mae Nan Robinson Ellingson to the editing and publishing committee. In 1979, Senator Mark Etchart was appointed to take Mrs. Warden's Senate member position; Mrs. Warden was appointed to the delegate position; and Representative Arlyne Reichert appointed to the Representative position, In 1981, Representative John Shontz was appointed to take Representative Reichert's place on the committee. Mrs. Warden served as chairman throughout the duration.

Legislative Council staff, then under the able direction of Rose Weber, corresponded with staff of the Sixth Illinois Constitutional Convention (19691970) and studied the Illinois Proceedings publication which was published in 1972. This correspondence gave the committee and staff direction concerning time schedules and budgets.

Invaluable advice to staff on scheduling, budgeting, and procedure was given by the Council librarian, Raelen Williard, who also prepared the bibliography in Volume I.

At the committee's first meeting on June 9, 1977, it was decided that costs for text entry, equipment, editing, proofreading, supplies, billing, recordkeeping, and salaries would be absorbed by the Legislative Council — that costs of the set of Proceedings would include only committee expenses, t&composition charges, reproduction of 1,000 copies, binding, and distribution.

The GPO Style Manual and Reference Manual for Stenographers and Typists, Fourth Edition, Gavin and Sabin, were chosen as standard guides for capitalization, punctuation, and writing numbers.

At the second meeting of the committee on July 15, 1977, Dr. William Lang of the Montana Historical Society advised the committee and Council staff on how to present oral history.

The committee decided that Council staff would use as a master the Montana Constitutional Convention transcript prepared by Marie Durkee, reporter. Staff would listen to the tape recording of the proceedings, simultaneously read the Durkee draft, and, in red ink, insert, change, or delete as necessary to indicate every audible sound on the tape. Later, an editor would work on the audited transcript using a different colored ink. Instructions were given to make no changes to a speaker's English as it was on the tape. Staff could editorially point out errors but were not to polish or perfect the language used.

The listening project was begun in June of 1977 using the tapes that had been donated to the Montana Historical Society by Marie Durkee. Rick Newby was assigned to the project from June to August 1977 and Connie Duncan from August 1977 to January 1978.

Space for the auditing was provided in the Legislative Council library, which proved unsatisfactory because of the daily traffic in that area coupled with the poor quality of the tapes. Loss of time and frustration were experienced by the staff in searching through poorly labeled tapes in their endeavor to piece together the sections of the transcripts in proper sequence.

As work progressed, it became apparent that the tapes were not the original master tapes recorded at the Convention. The project was halted while a search was conducted for the master tapes. In February, 1978, they were discovered in unpacked boxes of President Leo Graybill's Constitutional Convention memorabilia, stored in his garage. These mastertapes were then donated to the Montana Historical Society and were used for the rest of the project. In the meantime, there were several changes in Legislative Council staff positions, including that of Executive Director.

In October, 1978, a more appropriate work area was obtained in the archives of the Montana Historical Society and Carlyce Skjervem was assigned to complete the auditing project. All roll call votes were checked against the official journal on file with the Historical Society by Mary Ellen Randall and Jan Sperry and the audit continued.

Another problem encountered was that the equipment being used was Z-track to accommodate the Durkee tapes, but the master tapes were 4-track. This caused a delay until authorization was obtained to purchase the proper equipment. Whenever there was a discrepancy between the transcript and the tape, the tape was backed up and listened to as many times as necessary to be certain. Eventually the constant "stop-start" process for 8 hours a day rendered two recorders unusable with the third recorder barely fit to finish the project,

In April, 1979, after 9,234 pages of transcript and 24 weeks of listening to 21 tapes, this phase of the project was completed. Then the editing phase began. Doug Sternberg and Margaret Liles read each of the 9,234 pages at least twice in the editing process. They were responsible for paragraphing, punctuation, spelling, and capitalization. The editors deleted false starts, crutch words, repetitions, and stutters, added explanatory comments, and pointed out errors and inconsistencies.

The original plan was to enter the text of the proceedings on the Council's computerized bill-drafting system (ALTER) and produce camera-ready copy therefrom. It became obvious in 1979 that because of the full-time responsibilities of Council staff for the Montana Code Annotated and the increased costs for computer time, it was no longer feasible to input the text on ALTER.

Subsequently, a contract was entered into with the printer, Color World of Montana, to do the typesetting from the edited transcripts. The first volume was sent to Color World in November 1979. The 9,234 typewritten pages of transcript were typeset into 3,058 pages.

As the galleys were set by the printer they were proofread by Council proofreaders Phyllis Cote and Marie Fuhrmann. Page proofs were checked by the proofreaders and read word-for-word by Jean Stearns. The dyluxes were again checked by the proofreaders, who not only read and proofed the material over and over again, but also checked spacing, headings, page numbers, and general format. It is impossible to give the proofreaders the credit they deserve in producing these volumes.

At this writing Margaret Liles is beginning work on the index to the proceedings which will be published in a separate volume and will have its own preface.

Costs

The 1977 Legislature had appropriated $136,000 in House Bill 160 for the expenses of editing and publishing the proceedings and for the expenses of the supervisory committee. The 1979 Legislature appropriated another $80,000 in House Bill 897 to "complete the editing and publishing". House Bill 897 also provided:

> "The committee shall set the sales price of the proceedings at an amount sufficient to totally recoup the amount appropriated for the proceedings, including the $130,000 [sic] appropriated by HB 160 of the 45th Legislature. Proceeds from sales of the proceedings shall be deposited in the general fund."

Because of inflation, it was necessary in 1981 to appropriate still another $100,000, bringing the total amount appropriated for committee expense, typesetting, printing, and binding, to $316,000.

Morning Session November 29, 1971 lo:oo a.m.

CHAIRMAN BLEWETT: The proceedings will now commence, ladies and gentlemen.

Before we get into the formal program, I have been asked to make an announcement. If by chance any delegate desires to speak or to be heard on any matter during these proceedings, and particularly in the subsequent proceedings, be certain that you state your name and district from which you come. This is necessary in order for the proper record.

Ladies and gentlemen, we come to the point of an historic occasion in the State of Montana, the beginning of the Constitutional Convention.

I would like, at this time, to appoint a committee from the Constitutional Preparatory Commission members to escort into this chamber our distinguished guests. At this time I would like to appoint Clyde Hawks, chairman, Leonard Schulz, Bruce Toole, Charles Harrington, Randall Swanberg and Clyde Rader. Would those gentlemen kindly escort the distinguished guests into this chamber?

Ladies and gentlemen, while we are waiting for the escort group, I also would like to appoint at this time a committee from the Commission members to notify Governor Anderson that we would like to have him attend the chamber, and I now appoint those members: Eugene Mahoney, chairman, Jack Brenner, Arthur Hagenston, Charles Bovey and Eugene Phillips. Would those gentlemen kindly now escort the Governor to this chamber?

Is the escort committee ready to proceed with the guests?

MR. HAWKS: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN BLEWETT: Would the escort committee kindly lead our distinguished guests into the chamber?

All rise.

(Whereupon, the distinguished guests were escorted to the front of the chamber by the appointed committee.)

CHAIRMAN BLEWETT: Will the next escort committee kindly proceed?

Will the next escort committee proceed please?

Ladies and gentlemen, will you kindly remain standing while the escort committee proceeds with the escorting of our distinguished guests?

Now, the First Lady of the State of Montana, Evelyn Anderson.

Now, the Honorable Forrest H. Anderson, Governor of the State of Montana.

Will the escort committee kindly escort the Governor to the Chair?

(Whereupon, the Governor was escorted to the Chair by the appointed committee.)

CHAIRMAN BLEWETT: Governor Anderson, I have the honor and the privilege of presenting to you at this time the pen and the gavel used by William Andrews Clark, presiding in the Constitutional Convention of 1889. I would therefore, at this time, like to present to you officially the 1889 gavel so that you may officially open this 1971.1972 Constitutional Convention.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Thank you, Mr. Blewett.

The hour appointed by the Montana State Legislature having arrived for the convening of the Montana Constitutional Convention, I do accordingly, as Governor of this State, call the Convention to order.

For the purposes of organization I appoint as temporary secretary, Mr. Walter Marshall; as temporary sergeant-at-arms, Mr. Roger Barber; as temporary reporter, Mrs. Virginia Waterman; as temporary parliamentarian, Mrs. Phyllis Baden, and as temporary journal clerk, Mrs. Rosemary Acher.

It is appropriate that those to whom so much has been entrusted by our voters call upon God for the guidance at the outset of their task. It is my privilege at this time to present pastor Lionel B. Simonson, who will offer the invocatory prayer.

Mr. Simonson.

PASTOR SIMONSON: Almighty eternal God of truth and of mercy, in earnest prayer we ask Your blessing upon this Constitutional Convention, upon its delegates, upon its deliberations, upon its decisions. Oh God, ruler over all things, You are a tender father. You desire the lasting welfare, as well as the eternal happiness, of your children. You have wisdom and goodness. You have given us a land to live in, in which people, through their freely elected representatives and their freely designed laws, are the source of governmental authority in their midst. For these institutions, by which ours is a government of the people, and by the people, and for the people, we thank You, oh God.

We thank You for each one of these one hundred delegates, and for their willingness to enter this arena to work at this historic task with the talents, the energies, the experiences and the convictions given them. We ask of You to bring their united efforts to flourition in a truly good Constitution for our beloved State.

Bless and inspire these men and women, oh God, with all that they need to do a good job, a job pleasing in Your sight, a job that is beneficial to all the people of our generation and of generations to come. Give them, oh Father, a great measure of wisdom and of mutual respect, of patience and faith, and courage to build one another up in a common endeavor to serve Your purposes. Help them to be alert, both to their own deepest convictions as well as to the fundamental needs of people in these times, but above all, oh God, keep them alert to Your guidance, to Your yearning for the earthly well being of Your children.

Even as we pray for this Convention and its delegates, oh God, so too we ask for Your blessing upon all the people of our State. Inspire many, many people to uphold these men and women in fervent prayer, so that these delegates may do their work in the confidence that many God-fearing people are praying for them.

We ask You, oh God, to bless this Convention in its quest to formulate a Constitution that will help us to establish justice, to insure domestic tranquility, that will help us to promote the general welfare of all people and to secure the blessings of liberty and opportunity for ourselves and for our posterity. These petitions, oh God, we offer in the name of Jesus Christ, Your son, our Savior. Amen.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Mr. Blewett, we will now have the posting of the colors.

CHAIRMAN BLEWETT: Will you kindly remain standing while we have the posting of the colors, led by Major Liston of the Montana National Guard.

Mr. Liston.

MAJOR LISTON: Color Guard, prepare to post the colors...

(Whereupon there was the posting of the colors by the Montana National Guard.)

CHAIRMAN BLEWETT: Ladies and gentlemen, join me in the Pledge of Allegiance to our Flag...

We will now sing the National Anthem... ...

Thank you, Major Liston, and your grand staff.

Will you now all be seated?

Ladies and gentlemen, it is now my privilege and again my pleasure to introduce to all of you present those distinguished guests who have heretofore been escorted to this chamber.

Our first guest to be introduced is a man who gave us the pleasure of his remarks at the banquet last evening, Mr. Samuel Whitwer, president of the 1969-1970 Illinois Constitutional Convention. Mr. Samuel Whitwer. Thank you again for joining us.

Next, our elected state officials. The Honorable Lieutenant Governor, Thomas Judge. The Honorable Robert Woodahl, Attorney General. The Honorable Frank Murray, Secretary of State. The Honorable Dolores Colburg, Superintendent of Public Instruction. The Honorable Alex Stephenson, State Treasurer. The Honorable Lou Boedecker, Railroad and Public Service Commission, and I haven't yet seen Ernest Steel. I don't know whether he made it. Did he make it, Lou?

COMMISSIONER BOEDECKER: No.

CHAIRMAN BLEWETT: Next, our Supreme Court Justices. The Honorable Chief Justice James T. Harrison. The Honorable Associate Justice Wesley Castles. The Honorable John Harrison, Associate Justice. The Honorable Gene Daly, Associate Justice. The Honorable Frank Haswell, Associate Justice. The Honorable Thomas J. Kearney, Clerk of the Supreme Court.

And, ladies and gentlemen, from our legislative leadership, the Honorable Dick Dzivi, Senate Majority Leader; the Honorable Bill Mathers, Senate Minority Leader; the Honorable James Lucas, Speaker of the House; the Honorable James T. Harrison, Jr., House Majority Leader; and in the absence of Bill Christiansen, House Minority Leader, who was unable to be present, I present Representative Larry Fasbender.

Thank you very much, Governor Anderson.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Thank you, Mr. Blewett.

Mr. Blewett, distinguished state officials, at this time I have a golden opportunity to address what I think is one of the great meetings in this century for Montana.

The Constitutional Convention will reestablish the foundation of law for the government in this State. I believe that this is a profound expression of our fundamental belief in self-government. The people of Montana called this Convention, they elected you as delegates, and they will ultimately approve or reject the constitution you write.

A properly written constitution will define the structure and responsibilities of government and provide for the protection of the rights of the people of this State. Many generations of Montanans not yet born will live under these laws if you do your job well.

Constant change and the emergence of new ideas and beliefs will challenge the wisdom of your efforts. And each of you will leave a mark forever on the history of Montana. But more importantly, you have an opportunity to initiate a new history-a history of dynamic and responsive state government.

Montana's present Constitution is an expression of the distrust in government that was prevalent when it was written in 1889. It imposes strict limitations on the exercise of the powers of government-legislative, executive and judicial. It is burdened with accumulated statutory detail. And it restricts and confuses the capability of state government to respond to the rapidly changing problems of modern society.

I do not believe, however, that the entire Constitution should be stricken, because there are sections which are enduring statements of the rights of individuals and precise definitions of the responsibilities of state government.

I believe the revision of the Montana Constitution must accomplish four essential objectives:

It must establish the structures and responsibilities of state and local government.

It must guarantee the rights of the individual in this state.

It must free state government from the strictures that shackle us to the past.

And it must allow us to move freely into the future.

In this century, the balance of power within the American federal system has been distorted. The states have failed to act-too often because of constitutional restrictions-and the Federal Government has been forced to exercise the needed authority.

This has occurred in Montana and every other state in the Union. And if the decline of the states within the national system continues, they will become nothing more than federal subdivisions. We must not allow this to happen.

There are going to be changes in this state in the coming years. We cannot expect Montana to remain as it is forever.

If this Convention does not revitalize our state government, and give it the authority to act and solve problems, it may be one step further in the decline of the federal system, and the destiny of Montana will be decided in Washington, D.C.

The people have demonstrated that we are willing and able to solve our problems.

Those who came before us changed a wilderness into a state. We have fought to lift this state up from its colonial status in the national economy. We are working to preserve our unequalled environment. We have undertaken many programs to improve our state and local governments. We are now beginning the task of revising our State Constitution. And by these acts-and others-Montanans are saying that they will not forfeit their right to determine the necessary policies for the right to govern.

The purpose of the Constitutional Convention is to write a document that will be the basis and the inspiration of a dynamic and responsive state government. And the timeless wisdom of the National Constitution should be the inspiration for the document you write.

Like the national prototype, our Constitution must not include extraneous statutory provisions that are properly within the jurisdiction of the Legislature. And like the national prototype, our Constitution must be a statement of your faith and the belief that good and decent men and women will govern this state in the coming years.

You should not be afraid to include new and progressive ideas in the Constitution. Passage of the referendum calling for this Convention, executive reorganization, and the nineteen-year old vote are proof that the people of Montana recognize the need for change. And if a proposal is good it will be approved by the people.

There are those who consider this Constitutional Convention to be an extension of the legislative process. And they would make it the responsibility of this Assembly to decide issue; of present importance-now and forever. I believe, if this is allowed to happen, the intent of the Constitution will be compromised and its hope of success will be destroyed.

You are here to write a constitution-not a body of statutes. And this document must withstand the seasons of history-not just theclimate of current opinion.

I wish you well...

Thank you very much.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, I call upon the Honorable Eugene Mahoney, vice-chairman of the Montana Constitutional Convention Commission, to call the roll of the delegates elect. Mr. Mahoney.

MR. MAHONEY: The following is the true and correct roster, by district, ofthedelegates elect to the 1971.1972 Constitutional Convention of the State of Montana as compiled by the Secretary of State in accordance with the Constitutional Convention Enabling Act.

I now call upon the Chief Justice of the Montana Supreme Court, the Honorable James T. Harrison, to administer the oath of office.

CHIEF JUSTICE HARRISON: I consider this a great privilege, and I thank you for it.

You will each raise your right hands and say: "I," and pronounce your name, and then repeat after me, "do solemnly swear that I will support, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the State of Montana, and that I will discharge the duties of my office of the delegate to the Constitutional Convention with fidelity; that I have not paid or contributed, or promised to pay or contribute, either directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing to procure my nomination or election except for necessary and proper expenses expressly authorized by law; that I have not knowingly violated any election law of this state, or procured it to be done by others in my behalf; that I will not knowingly receive, directly or indirectly, any money or other valuable thing for the performance or non-performance of any act or duty pertaining to my office other than the compensation allowed by law, SO HELP ME GOD."

CHAIRMAN BLEWETT: Delegates and ladies and gentlemen, will you now all be seated, and will those of you who are delegates kindly sign the oath of office which is before you, and pass it to the center so that the pages may pick them up.

Is there anyone who has not yet signed his or her oath of office?

(No response.)

We'll then proceed with the balance of the proceedings. At this time, let's all of us stand and join together in the singing of our State Song, "Montana".

Governor Anderson, I now turn over to you for the proceedings from this time forward. Governor Anderson.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Thank you, Mr. Blewett.

According to the Enabling Act, nominations are now open for the office of temporary president. The secretary will record the nominations.

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Yes.

DELEGATE: This is George Harper, District 12. In keeping with our concensus of opinion in last Saturday's meeting, I'll offer this resolution:

I move that the votes for temporary president be cast by a written ballot placed in the ballot box by each delegate as his or her name is called; that, after all delegates present have voted, the ballots be counted out loud by a teller appointed by the presiding officer, that the number of votes for each candidate be tabulated and announced by the temporary secretary, and the candidate receiving a bare plurality be elected as temporary president; that the counted ballots may be examined upon request by the person who nominated any candidate and shall be thereafter destroyed after the conclusion of the three-day organization meeting; that, in the event of a tie for the most votes, an additional ballot be taken immediately, in the same manner, without any speeches or any new candidates or any withdrawal of candidates; that it shall not be known how any delegate has voted.

I further move that the Convention shall elect the permanent president in like manner, except that a majority of the votes cast shall be required for such election; that in the event no candidate receives such a majority in either the first or second balloting process, the person receiving the lowest number of votes (or, if there be a tie in low position as to votes received, those so tied) shall be removed from consideration on the third ballot and succeeding ballots, and thereafter the low vote getter or those so tied shall be eliminated from further consideration on each succeeding ballot until only two candidates remain for final consideration.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Reverend Harper, would you bring that motion to the rostrum, please?

DELEGATE HARPER: Yes.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Does everybody understand the motion made by Reverend Harper?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman, may I be heard?

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Yes.

DELEGATE: Thomas F. Joyce, District 20. I move, at this time, that the motion is out of order, as not responsive to the call of the Chair, which was to nominate a temporary president, GOVERNOR ANDERSON: You heard the motion-substitute motion by Mr. Joyce. I hesitate, as the Governor, to rule on the motion as to whether it is or is not out of order and I believe, probably, the democratic thing to do is to let the elected members of the Constitutional Convention decide whether or not they wish to follow the motion made by Reverend Harper.

As I say, I have great hesitancy to want to attempt, in any way, to get involved to where I may be critical of your deliberations, and for that reason, is there a second to Reverend Harper's motion?

DELEGATE CATE: Mr. Chairman, under the rules-Jerome Cate, District 8-I don't believe a second is necessary for the motion. I do believe the motion is in order, but if it requires a second, I'll second the motion at this time.

DELEGATE: Mr. President,

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Mr. Romney.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: Miles Romney, District 22, Ravalli County where the sun is shining.

I wish to move a substitute motion. I'm taken by surprise at this motion, so I have not written a motion out.

I move that the election of all officers of this Convention be made via an open roll call, in which each delegate specifically votes "Yes" or "No" for the particular candidates to be voted upon, and I wish to speak upon the substitute motion.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Mr. Romney, here again I recognize your substitute motion. I don't profess to be a parliamentarian, and among the parliamentarians that I see at my left over here is Jim Lucas, and I'm going to ask him to come up here and advise me as to what the parliamentarian procedure would be. Mr. Lucas.

I'm going to make this just as nonpartisan as possible. Mr. Lucas, would you give me this advice? Mr. Lucas has been the Speaker of the House and I think he can advise me as to what procedure I follow here.

MR. LUCAS: Gentlemen, I think if we follow the Mason's Rules of Procedure, the original motion, of course, was in order; the substitute motion was in order; and we now have a substitute motion for all motions pending, which ends the motion. The third motion made by Delegate Romney is now properly before the body, and then you have to backtrack up the ladder if it should be defeated.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: You just stand by.

We'll vote on the substitute motion of Mr. Romney. Would you again, Mr. Romney, state your motion, so it will be clearly understood?

DELEGATE ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman, I move that all votes taken in the election of officers of this Convention be done by roll call.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: You heard the motion. All those in favor say Aye.

DELEGATES: Aye.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Opposed No.

DELEGATES: No.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: The Chair is in doubt. We'll use the machine. I know that much.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Mr. Romney.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: I would like to know if the Delegate Romney is not privileged to speak on his motion?

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Well, it's a little late, after having the motion before the group and they're voting, Mr. Romney.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: I so specified when I made my original motion.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: It's a non-debatable motion, I'm sure. It's a motion upon a motion upon a motion, so the Chair will rule that you will not debate it.

Has everyone voted?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman, I request that the roll call be published and that it not be a secret roll call, and that the Ayes and Nays on the motion be recorded on the board.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: I have no objection to that.

Has everyone voted? Does anyone wish to change their vote? If not, the secretary will take the tape. Mr. Secretary.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 50 have voted Aye, 49 have voted No.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: That's what you call a horse race. 50 voting Aye, and 49 voted No, Mr. Romney's motion has passed. Mr. Romney, would you mind reducing your motion to writing?

Does the secretary have it? Do you have it—well, I'm sure he does. Did you want it reported in the Journal, Mr. Romney?

DELEGATE ROMNEY: I'm not so particular, as long as we have the 50 votes.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Your point is well taken, sir.

Mr. Davis.

DELEGATE DAVIS: Delegate Davis, District 21. I move the nomination of Delegate Cedor Aronow, District 15, Shelby, Montana, to act as temporary president to the Montana Consitutional Convention.

Delegate Aronow has performed a lifetime of service to the State of Montana and to our great nation. He's a former practicing-former county attorney, city attorney, legislator, and he's now a practicing attorney, and I'm very pleased to say, a Marine in World War II and in the Korean War.

So, I would nominate and recommend to my fellow delegates, my fellow attorney and my fellow Marine, and I think this is a privilege and an honor that would be very well to confer upon our Delegate Aronow. Thank you.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Are there any other nominations?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman, I rise to second the motion. Am I in order?

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: You can if you wish. There is no need for a second to a nomination.

DELEGATE: I'm Rod Hanson, District 15. I do second the nomination of Mr. Aronow for temporary president.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Are there any other nominations?

DELEGATE: Mr. Governor.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Mr. Felt.

DELEGATE FELT: Delegate Felt, District 8. In order to eliminate any questions any individuals may have, I'll point out to them that the individual who requested the opportunity to nominate me for this position will not do so because I informed him this morning that I felt, in the interest of harmony within the Convention, there would be no particular reason for him to do so.

I have a little interest in a few other aspects of the Convention, and one you may be sure of is that our lights don't burn out, as I noticed that our lights are still on. I don't know if this is any problem or not, but down here, at least, they're still on-the lights of the last vote.

This last vote, while we'll accept the decision of the majority, is regrettable, perhaps because we spent an hour of our time yesterday reaching a different decision, almost unanimously, only to have it overturned without discussion, where it was open to the public.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Are there any other nominations? Are there any other nominations?

(No reply.)

There being no other nominations, do I hear a motion to-Mr. Martin.

DELEGATE MARTIN: Fred Martin, District 11. I move the nominations be closed.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: It's been moved that the nominations be closed. All those in favor, signify by saying Aye—

DELEGATES: Aye.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: -those opposed, No.

(No reply.)

The Ayes have it, and so ordered. We will now have the roll call vote for temporary president.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Aasheim — this is for Aronow for temporary president—

99 voted Aye-98 voted Aye-[Records show 98 voted Aye, one Nay, one Absent]

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Cedor Aronow, having received all of the votes of those assembled, has been duly elected temporary president.

At this time I'd like to take the opportunity to thank my Republican colleague for coming up and helping me. And I want to suggest that he and I oftentimes don't agree, but I know that his advice in parliamentary matters areimportant, and I feel at liberty to call on him, and there have been occasions when he has felt free to call on me.

He is a Republican and I am a Democrat, and this is the way I hope the spirit of this Convention will follow through, all the way to its conclusion, because I believe that any man, no matter who he may be, has got something to tell you if you will just sit long enough to listen.

Thank you very much.

I hereby appoint the following committee to escort the temporary president to the Chair: Lyle Monroe and Fred Martin. Would you please escort Mr. Aronow to the Chair?

Mr. Aronow, it's a big Chair, treat it well.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Thank you.

I would like to thank the Governor for presiding over the opening of the Convention, and appoint the following committee to escort the Governor from the chamber: Franklin Arness from Libby, Tom Ask from Roundup and Louise Cross from Billings-or Glendive, excuse me.

GOVERNOR ANDERSON: Thank you very much, and God bless you.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: I want to thank the delegates to the Convention for the trust that they have shown in me, and the honor that they have presented to me by making me your temporary president.

While I'm here, I would like to take this opportunity to thank an old friend of mine for the service he has given to this Convention. In 1949, when I served in this chamber, I met a then young man by the name of Walter Marshall, that was the Clerk of the House. And over the years, I have seen Walter Marshall at legislative assemblies in varied capacities, and he has obtained and gained an expertise over the years in legislative bodies.

He has sometimes been with the House, sometimes with the Senate. He is always cheerful, always willing, and always a hard worker, and this was demonstrated when he gave unsparingly of his time in the pre-organization meetings, to help us and to explain things. And at this time I want to thank you, Walter Marshall, for the tine service you have given, not only to this Convention, but to the State of Montana over these many years.

No one, so far, has really expressed the thanks and appreciation that I know this Convention feels for our Constitutional Convention Commission. They have given unsparingly of their time and their effort, at considerable personal sacrifice to themselves, and they have stayed away from their own affairs, their own businesses, and devoted their time and energy and businesses to the State of Montana for the preparatory work of this Commission.

They have supervised the staff, headed by Dale Harris, who has done an outstanding job in preparing material for our education. And I want to take this opportunity, not only in my own behalf, but in the behalf of all the delegates, to thank the Commission, our good friend Dale Harris, and his staff for the wonderful job that they have done in preparing for this Convention. Thank you.

The next order of business. Nominations are now open for the office of convention president. Mr. Aasheim.

DELEGATE AASHEIM: Mr. Chairman, I'm Magnus Aasheim from District 4. I wish to place in nomination a man who is well qualified for this position. He has been active in numerous and varied civic projects in Cascade County.

One of the more recent and farsighted endeavors was the promotion of the seven million dollar Great Falls Airport project. This was no small accomplishment, and it was made possible because of the needed ability and the personality of the coordinator.

I am proud to place this man in nomination for chairman of the 1971-1972 Montana Constitutional Convention, Leo Graybill, Jr.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Leo Graybill, Jr. has been placed in nomination. Is there a second? Mr. Holland.

DELEGATE HOLLAND: Dave Holland, District 20. It is with great pleasure that I second the nomination of Mr. Graybill, who is, by his training and by his education and by his ability, is very well qualified to handle the position for which he has been nominated.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Are there any other nominations for the office of president?

DELEGATE: Mr. Temporary President.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Felt.

DELEGATE FELT: Without any objection, I would prefer to step just this far to the side and use it [microphone] this way because, otherwise, I would have my back to too many of you delegates.

I feel that I'm somewhat ill equipped to make the remarks and suggestion that I intend to make, but I shall do the best I can and hope that all of you, in your own judgment, can fill in gaps in my capabilities.

It's my purpose here to again deal with the question of harmony within the Convention, but in this instance, it's my purpose to nominate a fellow delegate that I consider very well qualified. And I do this for the purpose of giving this Convention the opportunity of a free choice of a presiding officer who could have the support of a large number-or the majority of the delegates.

And at this opportunity I would like to express our feelings that this be done in an open Convention, as we are now undertaking.

I wish to pay my respects to all of the individuals who offered themselves as candidates. I feel that each of them had legitimate reasons for doing so, and I am certain that many others amongst the delegates also could have had reasons for offering their services.

And I submit to you that when we, as I shall now do, offer a delegate as a choice for the position of presiding officer, that it's done in the same sense that all of us, collectively, will eventually offer to the people of Montana a proposed constitution, which they may accept or reject. We will do so sincerely, believing it's in the best interest of the State.

I am certain that all of us are equally dedicated to this cause, and are conscious not only of our own individual responsibility as we perform duties here each day, but in the final result, it will be the people of the State of Montana who will make the decision as to whether or not they will accept the Constitution that we propose.

I feel that, in some ways, we have not gained the confidence of the people of Montana, and that there has been a lack of harmony within the Convention over this matter of the selection of a presiding officer. Whether it was necessary that this occur, I'll not comment upon that, but I became quite conscious, as things were happening rather rapidly yesterday, that while I felt I had reasons to offer my own services, and to continue the work that I have been engagedin, and my time to render a service in that position, that perhaps my general exposure in the field of partisan political activity in the past caused me to be looked upon as a particular example of partisanship.

And even though I may not have felt that this was a justified feeling, I knew that it existed. And therefore, while I could protest my disinterest and point to the fact that I have equal reason to question the disinterest of those who do not wish to submit this question openly to a full Convention, where all one hundred delegates have an opportunity to choose, this would not establish the fact of my own disinterest.

As I saw that various candidates were withdrawing from the field, for one reason or another, and the other Republican candidates informed me yesterday that they did not intend to have their names placed in nomination, I began thinking about this matter as a personal responsibility.

My decision was further moved along as I listened to our distinguished speaker at the banquet last night, and at the conclusion of the banquet, I felt it advisable that I withdraw my own candidacy and so advised theindividuals who had planned to nominate me.

I regret taking the time of having to explain this to you, but I have not had the opportunity to explain, either to the people who had urged me to become a candidate, and obviously, I had no opportunity to point it out to the people of Montana in general who, if they are interested enough to read the newspaper accounts, might wonder why it happened that I filed as a candidate to be nominated this day, and am now withdrawing.

So, in that general spirit, I'll now make a nomination. I feelit'snecessary-and I regret that it is necessary-to point out that, in the first decision we made here, we didn't only depart from the decision we ourselves made, but we departed entirely from the American tradition, under which people are elected by secret ballots, and that the open vote of "Yes" or "No" is confined to issues where the people are particularly interested in knowing how someone voted on a certain issue, that the custom of secret election of individuals is not only traditional, but founded naturally upon logic.

It does not then, again, disrupt the mutual good feelings that are intended to exist within a deliberating body, or within any group trying to move toward a common goal, and I do very much regret that this change occurred, because I think it places us at some disadvantage under these circumstances, and for those reasons which were so ably presented and led to a different decision being reached only yesterday, when we were trying to conserve time.

The individual that I propose to nominate, I must say, was somewhat reluctant when first approached, and totally surprised. I'm glad he doesn't wear false teeth because he was completely shocked when we suggested to him that, in the event that would he be willing to accept this position of responsibility, that I would be happy to withdraw. And after some consideration, however, Mr. Bruce Brown did agree that he would permit me to place his name in nomination.

Mr. Brown, the delegate from Custer County, does have the qualifications for this position. He is a human being, and therefore imperfect, as are all of us. He is a particularly human individual, I feel, having more humbleness than many of the rest of us, and I think this would stand him in good stead and be exemplified, of course, by his not attempting to push himself into this position, but is one of the few instances where a genuine draft occurred.

He is, of course, of a fair and balanced temperament and would be fair to all individuals. He is a dedicated man, as dedicated to this cause as are all the rest of us. He is an independent thinker, but one who accepts the right of every other individual people to also think independently.

It's sometimes pertinent to mention the things that a person is not. I would say, in particular, he is not narrow in outlook, nor would he be at all dictatorial in the way he would lend his services to this Convention. Perhaps, above all, he's not ambitious for political advancement, or deferment or personal advantage whatsoever, to be gained from serving in any capacity in this Convention.

I feel that all of us as delegates, and certainly all the people of Montana, have a great stake in the action we are about to make-in the decision we are about to make. We do not, obviously, wish to waste our own time, nor would the people of Montana wish us to waste their money or their time in an endeavor here which is torn by disharmony if they felt at the time of our first steps that decisions were being made by less than a majority, by negotiations which led to results that might not have been obtained if an open choice had been pending.

That we may dispel that question by the procedure that we are offering to you now, and we would pledge to you that there will not be an effort made to criticize the decisions made, nor the methods used, to reach those. We are grateful for the opportunity to present a choice to the Convention, just as we were all grateful for the opportunity to speak for five minutes yesterday to all of the delegates, and we think that something which almost might have been yesterday, in the event that it might be continued on as they were, we may have an opportunity yet today.

As I said, I feel somewhat inadequate for the task of dealing with this entire matter, and other things might be said, but I do not wish to take more of your time. If I have omitted something of importance, I do rely upon each of you to think about this decision, to be guided by your own conscience and your own dedication to our mutual cause. I thank you.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Are there any other nominations?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Yes.

DELEGATE: My worthy colleagues, I am Catherine Pemberton from District No. 1. As one of 19 women delegates to the Montana Constitutional Convention, it is a special privilege to second the nomination of the native Montanan who believes in Montana and who has been born, educated, and makes his living in our Big Sky Country.

He is a successful Miles City attorney, whose family history in Custer County and eastern Montana goes back into the eighties. He is from an old Scotch family with a conservative background. The family ranch, called by its brand the "SH," is famous in the southeastern part of the state where the Montana Stockgrowers organized in 1884 and continued to hold the annual meetings in Miles City until 1918. Bruce Brown's grandfather was president of the Stockgrowers in 1912.

The Browns have five children, a daughter and four sons. Two are university graduates, and one son is captain on the Custer County High School ball team.

Brown has been city and county attorney, he's served on various civic boards in the city and county and over the state.

He was graduated from the university School of Business Administration and the School of Law of the university.

He was a pilot in World War II, and is still a pilot.

Bruce Brown is from an old time Montana family. His wonderful grandmother was one of the first white children born in Custer County.

Brown's thinking would represent all thinking in Montana, not just one segment, and I have the privilege of asking your support of my friend, Bruce Brown, Independent delegate from District 2, for president of this historic conference.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Thank you, Mrs. Pemberton.

Are there any other nominations for the office of president? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: Otto Habedank from District 3. I came to this Convention dedicated to a bipartisan convention. A proceeding was held yesterday afternoon which I did not attend because I was not invited.

Yesterday afternoon I listened to 13 candidates express their desire as to why they felt they should be president of this Convention. I heard many comments as to why we should not delay these proceedings by having a choice made among these candidates by the members of this Convention.

I got to searching my conscience during the night because I attended a lot of rallies throughout the State of Montana and I heard many other candidates say that this Convention should be nonpartisan-or bipartisan, and that partisan politics has nothing to do with it. And I came here expecting to have an opportunity to decide among those 13 candidates, and such others as should be nominated, and I don't intend to be denied that opportunity except by the specific withdrawal of nominations of Democrats and Republicans and Independents who offered themselves.

If they, themselves, publicly wish to withdraw, that is their privilege, but unless I'm stopped by order of the Chair, or vote of this Convention, I intend to nominate the people who spoke to us. And at this time I nominate the first speaker yesterday, a farmer, rancher, educator and school administrator for eight years, Mr. Magnus Aasheim.

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Aasheim.

DELEGATE AASHEIM: At this time, I'd like to express my appreciation to Mr. Habedank for his courtesy, but I'm not now a candidate for this position.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: You withdraw your name from nomination?

DELEGATE AASHEIM: Yes.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Thank you, Mr. Aasheim. Any other nominations? Delegate Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I wish to place in nomination a school administrator for 19 years at least, a do-something man, Harold Arbanas.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Harold Arbanas has been placed in nomination.

DELEGATE: Harold Arbanas, District 13. I intend to be a do-something man, but I would now withdraw.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Arbanas has withdrawn his name from nomination. Are there any other nominations? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I next wish to place in nomination a teacher from Laurel, a man whom we all know, Mr. Chet Blaylock.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Chet Blaylock has been placed in nomination. Mr. Blaylock.

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Habedank, thank you very much, but I think one. of the things that we have to remember is, when you go into a caucus as we all did yesterday, that if we had received the majority of the vote in there, we would have wanted those people to stay with us regardless of how else we might feel, and so at this time, I decline.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Blaylock has withdrawn his name from nomination. Are there any other nominations? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: Mr. Chairman, I place in nomination-and I heard his statement that he is not seeking nomination-but I nominate Jim Felt.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Jim Felt has been placed in nomination. Mr. Felt.

DELEGATE FELT: Mr. Temporary President, I withdraw my name. Thank you for the courtesy.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Jim Felt has been withdrawn from nomination. Now, are there any other nominations for the office of president? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I place in nomination as candidate, the attorney from Butte, David L. Holland.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of David L. Holland has been placed in nomination. Mr. Holland.

DELEGATE HOLLAND: Thank you, Mr. Habedank. I bet you'd be surprised if I accepted, but I must respectfully decline.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Holland has declined the nomination. Are there any other nominations for the office of president? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I nominate Geoffrey Brazier, attorney of Helena.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Geoffrey Brazier has been placed in nomination. Yes, Mr. Brazier.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Mr. Temporary Chairman, with all due respect for the courtesy and motives of Mr. Habedank, I don't think I could rally enough support, and I therefore respectfully withdraw.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Jeff Brazier has been withdrawn. Now, are there any other nominations for the office of president. Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I realize you think this is an exercise in futility, but I still hope that one of these fellows will accept, and regardless of what Mr. Holland says, I nominate Jack Schiltz, attorney at Billings.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Jack Schiltz has been nominated for president. Mr. Schiltz.

DELEGATE SCHILTZ: Mr. President.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Schiltz.

DELEGATE SCHILTZ: I think I'm just as good a man as I thought I was yesterday, but I must respectfully decline.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Jack Schiltz has been withdrawn from nomination. Are there any other nominations? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I nominate Sterling Rygg of Kalispell.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Sterling Rygg has been placed in nomination. Mr. Rygg.

DELEGATE RYGG: Thank you, Mr. Habedank, but I too decline the nomination.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Rygg has declined the nomination and his name is withdrawn from nomination. Is there any other nominations for president? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I nominate John Toole.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of John Toole has been placed in nomination. Mr. Toole.

DELEGATE TOOLE: Mr. President, I'm not a candidate. Thank you very much.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of John Toole has been withdrawn from nomination. Are there any other nominations for the office of president? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I nominate Charles Mahoney, Independent from Helena.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Mahoney.

DELEGATE MAHONEY: Mr. President, I really appreciate this nomination because us Independents got practically told off yesterday, but we really appreciate this, but I'm just solidly supporting Bruce Brown, and I therefore withdraw.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Chuck Mahoney has been withdrawn from nomination. Are there any other nominations? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: Mr. Chairman, I nominate Leslie Joe Eskildsen of Malta.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Leslie Joe Eskildsen has been placed in nomination. Mr. Eskildsen.

DELEGATE ESKILDSEN: Mr. Temporary President, I withdraw.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Leslie Joe Eskildsen has been withdrawn from nomination. Are there any other nominations for the office of president? Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: Mr. Chairman, I nominate Paul Harlow, a long-time friend in education and otherwise, from Thompson Falls, Montana.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Harlow.

DELEGATE HARLOW: Mr. Temporary Chairman, I'm even better off than Mr. Rygg. I feel I'm a better man today than I was yesterday, but I must decline because I don't think I'm good enough to be chairman today.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: The name of Paul Harlow has been withdrawn from nomination. Are there are any other nominations for the office of president?

Are there any other nominations for the office of president?

(No reply.)

Are there any other nominations-yes, Mr. Holland.

DELEGATE HOLLAND: I move the nominations for the office of president be closed.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: It's been duly moved that nominations for the office of president be closed. Is there any discussion? Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: All those in favor, signify by saying Aye—

DELEGATES: Aye.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: -opposed No.

(No reply.)

The Ayes have it. The nominations are closed. Mr. Clerk, would you be kind enough to read the names of the individuals who have been nominated for the office of Convention president?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: For the office of Convention president, Leo Graybill, Jr. and Bruce Brown are the two nominees, sir.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: In accordance with the motion previously made, voted on and carried, the vote will be by roll call, open. Call the roll.

DELEGATE CATE: Mr. President.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Mr. Cate.

DELEGATE CATE: Mr. President, with the Convention's indulgence, I would like to explain my vote. I'm Jerome Cate from District 8. I'm 32 years old. I have been a Democrat for 20 years. I was the president of the Young Democrats in the Eighth Grade at Sacred Heart

High School in Miles City. I have been active in the Democratic Party all through my high school and college years.

I worked for Senator Lee Metcalf in Washington for five years. I've been a delegate to the National Convention for the Democratic Party. I've worked for the Senate of the State in 1959 and 1961. I have been President of the Yellowstone County Democratic Club. I have been Chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of Yellowstone County, which is a tough county to be a Democrat in. I have participated on those committees for the Democratic Party for many years. I have been on the Executive Committee of the Democratic Party.

In the first rule of legislative session, fellow delegates, if this were a legislative session, I would be telling the Republicans in the balcony that this is not a legislative session. This is a Constitutional Convention where each and every candidate should exercise his own judgment on each and every issue and not be dictated to by any party machine.

Ladies and gentlemen, for that reason I wish to cast my vote for Bruce Brown, Independent candidate, for president of this Convention. Thank you.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Cate votes Brown. Now, back to Brown.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Thank you, Mr. Marshall.

Does anyone wish to examine the ballot?

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Yes. Mr. Brown has the floor. Mr. Brown.

DELEGATE BROWN: I would like to thank the delegates to the Convention for the great honor they have given me, and I'm now going to work with Mr. Graybill, and I'd now like to move that we cast a unanimous ballot for Mr. Graybill.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Thank you, Mr. Brown. Your action, Mr. Brown, is a most kind and generous motion, and on a standing vote, I take it, you have instructed me to declare this election unanimous?

DELEGATE BROWN: Yes.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: I now cast a unanimous ballot for Leo Graybill, Jr., for president of the Montana Constitutional Convention of Helena, Montana, this day.

TEMPORARY PRESIDENT ARONOW: Leo Graybill, Jr., receiving a majority of votes cast, has been duly elected president of the Convention.

I hereby appoint the following committee to escort the president to the Chair: Marshall Murray, Joe Eskildsen and Tom Joyce. You gentlemen will perform your duty and escort the president to the Chair.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Temporary Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the Constitutional Convention, I must say, it's a very humbling process to be elected by this body, and I want to thank all of you.

I think, friends, that we can now say that all had a fair shot at it, and I appreciate the support I got, and I appreciate the unanimous vote afterwards. Let's make it a bipartisan Convention from here on out.

I have no long statement to make, but I would like to remind the delegates and myself, right here at the outset, that we are actually representatives of the people of the fine State of Montana, and I hope that we will keep in front of our minds as we go through the Convention, at all times, the fact that all we are doing is fashioning for the public a constitution that we can honorably and honestly present to them, and ask them to support it when we place it before them next fall.

So, with that in mind, let's put ourselves to the task of putting together the best constitution that we can get the public and the State of Montana to pass.

The Chair would now entertain a motion about rules.

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Romney.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: Mr. President, I'm Delegate Romney, District 22. I move that the Convention adopt, as temporary rules, the Joint Rules of the Forty-second Legislative Assembly. Note the word "temporary."

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair has heard a motion from Delegate Romney that we adopt the Temporary Rules of the Montana Legislative Session, so that we can proceed on that basis.

Mr. Mahoney.

DELEGATE MAHONEY: As a point of information from the Chair and from the author of the motion, would we be adopting at this time, as temporary rules, Rule H7-1? This is in regard to committees. I'd like to know.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: What I think we have in mind, Mr. Mahoney-well, we could ask Mr. Romney. Mr. Romney, do you want to answer that?

DELEGATE ROMNEY: It's obvious that we would not use the Joint Rules and the House

Rules to conduct the proceedings of the Convention throughout. Consequently, in order to facilitate and expedite the transaction of our work here today, tomorrow and Wednesday, it is our thought that we could use these rules until such time as the new Rules Committee can perfect a new set of rules which we will use throughout the Convention.

As the Senator knows, in previous conventions, almost always, some set of rules has been perfected by the membership of the convention. For example, the United States Constitution itself, drew up its own rules during the first few days, as you have no doubt known from reading James Madison's notes on the Constitutional Convention.

DELEGATE MAHONEY: I'd ask the distinguished gentleman from Ravalli County another question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Mahoney.

DELEGATE MAHONEY: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: May we make the observation-I don't know, but I think that it is the intention of Mr. Romney to back up the Montana Rules by Mason's, where they are not specific. Is that correct?

DELEGATE MAHONEY: Do you have any objection to removing Rule H7-1 from this proceedings? This is in regard to committees.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: As far as the Mason's Rules are concerned, they are implanted in these Rules themselves, anyway, and at any place where these Rules do not pertain, why, Mason's takes over, but I have no objection to taking that out.

DELEGATE MAHONEY: Mr. Chairman, in order to get the whole Convention-and this is a very important thing, and this is going to hinge on something that could be done.

I'm going to move, as a substitute motion to this motion, that we remove this Rule from the temporary rules of this Convention, and will be adopted later. I hope I'm in order, and I will now move that Rule H7-1—and I will now read it—

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Will you give the delegates the sense of Rule H7-1?

DELEGATE MAHONEY: I have now my glasses. Mr. Chairman, this is on page 72 of the House Rules:

"The Committee on Rules and Journal shall consist of the Speaker and four members appointed by him. The Speaker shall appoint other Standing Committees, Select Committees, and House membership on Joint Committees and Conference Committees. The Standing Committees of the House are as follows..."

Now, I'm not going to worry about these committees. This is the part that I would like to have this Convention determine, how they would like to have these committees appointed, and if this should be adopted in there, then it would run straight over to the president of the Convention.

So, Mr. Chairman, I move to remove that from Mr. Romney's motion, this one rule in regard to committees. Let the Rules Committee come back to the Convention with another rule on this, if they so desire.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, Mr. Mahoney, we understand your motion, and we'll let them vote on it here in a minute.

It is the intention of the Chair, in any event, to call for another motion about the appointment of committees, and especially about appointment of a Rules Committee, but we do want some rules to operate under.

Yes, sir.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: I rise to second the motion of Mr. Mahoney.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Brazier.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Delegate Brazier from District 12.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, you have heard the motion of Mr. Mahoney-or the substitute motion of Mr. Mahoney, that we adopt the Montana House Rules, backed by Mason's Rules, with the exception of the Rule on appointment of the committees.

Is there any further discussion?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Blaylock.

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: If this is a substitute motion of a substitute motion, doesn't that replace the entire motion of Mr. Romney's? This is just an amendment, isn't it?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I think Mr. Mahoney called it a substitute motion, but if I understand him correctly, he's willing to operate under the Montana Legislative Rules, backed by Mason's, but without the committee Rule. Is that correct, Mr. Mahoney?

DELEGATE MAHONEY: All I'm trying to do is remove the one section, and if the Chair can determine how to do it now, I'll do it.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Right. So now, we have before us, a substitute motion of Mr. Mahoney, that we adopt as our temporary rules the Montana Legislative Rules, backed by Mason's, without the Rule on committee appointments.

Now, is there any other discussion?

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Felt.

DELEGATE FELT: Begging the indulgence of the Assembly-and when this is completed, I can assure you you won't be hearing from me this frequently-I thought that this would be an amendment, and I intended to speak, but since it's been treated as a substitute motion, I feel that there are a few other things that need to be mentioned because these House Rules that we're adopting in a temporary manner, are quite well, but unfortunately, I doubt if many of us-1 know I do not-have a copy of them with us.

But, speaking from some memory of these Rules, I-and, of course, the point that Mr. Romney made is well taken, as well as Robert's Rules, and we are using them because they are in the Enabling Act and they are duly incorporated in the House Rules, and in that respect, they are adequate for our purposes.

At this time, I-if I recall these House Rules correctly, they are developed in the overall purpose and sense of being a set under which a House of Representatives of this state can operate efficiently, recognizing rights of minorities; but, by golly, they give the majority the power to control, and do they ever give the Speaker of the House power, way beyond what anyone has ever suggested giving the president of a Convention such as this.

That I know because I held the position. It gave you not only the possibility of naming the committees, but naming all the members to every committee, and deciding who will be the chairman and vice-chairman. Deciding what proposals go to each committee. And in all the parliamentary procedural matters, the power is granted way beyond those that have been discussed in the pamphlets that have been distributed to us, and the discussions we have had amongst ourselves, and this comes as quite a surprise to me.

I thought that we would follow the procedure reviewed for us in the last couple of days of our orientation period, which calls-and this is in the pamphlets that were handed to you-for the creation of a committee to deal with rules of our organization. Now, this committee would then be able to report and give us the proposals that they think would be appropriate for our proceedings.

I feel that with all of the parliamentary procedural rules, we already have a workable set in the rules that were given to us by the Enabling Act through Mason's Rules, so we are fully capable of doing whatever we wish to undertake, and that it's not necessary, and I think that Mr. Mahoney put his finger on the most single important matter that we have all discussed at length, but they are certainly inappropriate for us.

He is asking us to adopt, as our rules, something that is not comprehensive, something that we do not have before us, something that we understand only in a general way. We have had this presented without benefit of committee report or investigation.

For those reasons, Mr. Chairman, I move as a substitute motion for all motions pending, that the Mason's Rules of Procedure be continued as the rules of this body until such time as we have the benefit of the report of the Committee on Rules of Organization and I would, if this motion should carry, be pleased to make a motion calling for the Chair to begin the process of selecting a committee-temporary committee-to deal with the organization, although I would hope that the membership of the committee would at least be ratified by a voice vote on the floor. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, the Chair understands that you have made a substitute motion, Mr. Felt, and your substitute motion is that the Mason's Rules, rather than the Legislative Rules backed by Mason's Rules, be the rules—temporary rules--under which we operate, just until the Rules Committee reports, is that the sense of your motion?

DELEGATE FELT: That's correct.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, the Chair is in doubt and will ask the parliamentarian. Is this second substitute motion in order?

PARLIAMENTARIAN BADEN: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The second substitute motion is in order.

I understand, then, that no further substitute motions are in order?

PARLIAMENTARIAN BADEN: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: No further substitute motions are in order, and we're now open for debate on the second substitute motion, or we'll vote.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Romney.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: Delegate Romney, District 22. I enthusiastically endorse the proposition of Delegate Felt because it's precisely what I said in the first place.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATE MAHONEY: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Mahoney.

DELEGATE MAHONEY: I don't think there is enough people that has gotten House Rules, let alone trying to operate under Mason's Rules. They are quite a problem to get copies of.

I think we could operate very handily under this substitute—not Mr. Felt's motion, but under my thing, if we cleared up the main points of this issue at this time, and I would like to oppose Mr. Felt's motion and stay with the House Rules, very temporarily, with my amendment to take out appointment of committees. That is what I would like.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there further discussion?

The Chair would like to make the point that when you delegates stand, to say your name and speak up because A, I might not know all your names, but B, there is an awful bright light in my eyes--which I hope won't be here after today-so speak up.

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes.

DELEGATE: I'm Richard Nutting from District 7.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I recognize Delegate Nutting.

DELEGATE NUTTING: I rise in support of Mr. Felt's motion. I had drawn up a tentative proposition to which I would like-that I would like to present if this motion endures.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, is this matter that you are going to present, another matter?

DELEGATE NUTTING: This is in support of Mr. Felt's motion.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, you may allude to it. Go ahead.

DELEGATE NUTTING: The motion that I would be interested in, which would replace this motion, would be that a temporary committee be selected on rules and organization, to be dissolved after presenting its final report to the Convention. That it consist of seven delegates to be nominated by the president and approved or disapproved by a majority vote of the delegates. Its duties shall be to present a final report tomorrow, recommending various officers to be selected by the Convention, and the method of selection to be utilized, the names of all substantive committees now created, the number of delegates to make up each such committee, and such other matters as such committee believes to be pertinent to the organization of the Convention.

That such committee may have its own organization meeting during a brief recess of the Convention this day, so that it may select its own chairman and consider holding a committee hearing, and meeting in the Senate Chamber immediately following adjournment this day, or other procedures it may wish to utilize; and that it be permitted to utilize stenographic and clerical help from the staff of the Constitutional Convention Commission, or such other persons as it may wish to employ.

Now, I think this does what we're all trying to do, without-it would mean that there would be a temporary rules committee, which would come back and report. So, if Mr. Felt's motion would prevail, I would be very happy to present this in substitution, and we would not-we would be operating under a clear set of rules when the Rules Committee reports back.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair is under the impression that similar motions are going to be made if these motions-when we clear up the matter of what rules we're under.

Now, we're still debating Mr. Felt's motion. Is there any more discussion?

(No reply.)

Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. The question, then, is on Mr. Felt's motion that we use Mason's Rules as the temporary rules until the Rules Committee meets and brings in, for our consideration, a separate set of rules for this Convention.

We'll use the voting machines, Mr. Marshall. All those in favor of Mr. Felt's motion vote Aye, all those opposed vote No.

Have all the delegates voted? Do any of the delegates wish to change their votes? The vote is now closed.

Mr. Marshall, will you tell us the result of the vote?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: 71 have voted Aye and 24 have voted No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: By your vote, we have adopted Mr. Felt's motion making Mason's Rules of Order the temporary rules of this Convention.

The Chair would now entertain a motion about the appointment of a temporary Rules Committee so that we can get on with the job of making rules.

Mr. Blaylock.

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: Mr. Chairman, Chet Blaylock, District 8. I move that the president appoint a temporary Committee on Rules of Organization, and report to the afternoon session. The Committee to consist of three members of each party, the president acting as ex officio member.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, you have heard Mr. Blaylock's motion that there be a committee of six, was that?

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Three from each party, with the president also to act on the committee and to bring in rules to an afternoon session under which we could conduct the remainder of the preliminary business.

Now wait a minute. I want to find out if the other side wants to amend-or it's roughly the same thing as you said, but is there any other amendments or motions?

DELEGATE MAHONEY: I just hate to be disenfranchised the first day.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. First, I'll recognize Jeff Brazier.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Mr. President, I offer a substitute motion that the Committee be a seven-member committee, to be elected in its entirety from the delegation. A legal ballot in such election, as being one which does not include more than seven names of nominees.

The reason I suggest this method, is so that we can dispose of the matter with one ballot, and get on with other business.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, if I understand you correctly, you're saying that we should elect them, but we would only allow seven people to be nominated?

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Well, there's no magic in any particular number, just so far as it's an odd number. What I'm getting at, is the problem that Mr. Mahoney has.

To be specific, it's a choice of whether the delegation itself-or the Convention itself-select this Committee, or whether the president appoints it. I just submit that it can be disposed of with one ballot.

We can take the nominations, and have everybody sign and file a ballot, with not more than seven names among the nominees.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Felt, we are now debating the amendment to Mr. Blaylock's motion, the amendment to be that we would have a ballot instead of appointed from the Chair, and that the ballot would be limited to seven names.

DELEGATE FELT: Well, whether it's an amendment or a substitute motion, I would like to speak on it.

I had originally intended to ask the gentleman, Mr. Blaylock, a question, but I think you have perhaps answered it.

I would, therefore, oppose the motion of the gentleman, Mr. Brazier, because I feel that it would be appropriate to have the president nominate the delegates. And as long as the motion includes a spread upon party relationships, and I would anticipate, certainly, that this would properly cover other acts of trying to get a representative group on the Committee, but the one thing I hoped might be included, and it's too late for me to offer it as an amendment now, it would be simply that-well, it might be a rather routine procedure as to ratifying and confirming the nominations made by the Chair. And I would somewhat prefer to see the Floor holding the authority which it has, and exercising it, while delegating to the Chair the duty and the ability to make nominations, but that the Floor would confirm this, and it could be done by voice vote, or any method desired.

So, if we reach the point where I would be able to offer this type of amendment to the motion made by the gentleman, Mr. Blaylock, I would contemplate doing so, and would support the motion if my amendment could be in.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there other discussion about the substitute motion of having a ballot?

May I ask the Body if it would be appropriate if the Body knew whom the Chair would appoint to the Rules Committee, if it did appoint?

No one rising to speak to that, I would take it that there is no more discussion, and we'll vote on the amendment, which is that we have a ballot to select the temporary Rules Committee of seven. Are all seven to be elected, Mr. Brazier?

DELEGATE BRAZIER: That's the intention of my motion, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: May I ask another question, because the Chair is in genuine doubt as to whether you have any restrictions as to whether these all be in one party, or any number from any one party, or just the first seven that happen to get nominated.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Well, the seven pulling the highest number of votes. I just had a feeling, with the cross section of thinking in this delegation there is no way we're going to have them all from one party.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: In other words, we can nominate as many as we want, is that true, but only seven are elected?

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Now, I understand you.

So the point is, we are now voting on an amendment to elect the temporary Rules Committee, the amendment to the original motion that the Chair appoint a temporary Rules Committee, three from each party, and that the Chair sits as a member.

Is there any further discussion?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. We'll vote by the machine. All those voting in favor of the amendment, mainly to have the temporary Rules Committee chosen by a ballot, the top seven to be selected, indicate by saying Aye. All those opposing it vote No.

Have all the delegates voted?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Not yet, sir.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Have all the delegates voted? Does any delegate wish to change his vote? The vote is now closed. Will the clerk tell us the vote?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 18 voted Aye, 79 have voted No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The motion has failed.

Now, is there any further discussion on the original motion of Mr. Blaylock?

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Blaylock.

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: I have no objection to Mr. Felt's point that the nominations be ratified by the body.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. You're putting that as an amendment, or a condition of your original motion?

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: With the permission of the Convention, since I made the original motion, I should like to make that motion, so that this will be ratified by this body.

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, Mr. Aasheim.

DELEGATE AASHEIM: The original motion specified three from the Republican and three from the Democratic Party. I just wonder if we aren't excluding from this motion-and I'd like to amend that motion to say, three from the Democratic Party and three from any other area that the Chair might wish to select.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Very well, you have made an amendment. Is there any discussion on the amendment? Mr. Harper.

DELEGATE HARPER: George Harper, District 12. I just think we ought to get something sort of out and on the boards right at first. The six of us who happen to be here as Independents are not another party. We also consider ourselves to be members of this Constitutional Convention. When the people of our district elected some delegates as Republicans, they did not send those people here to represent the Republican Party. They sent them to represent our district, and likewise with the Democrats, and the same way with us as Independents. They certainly did not send me as an Independent to represent myself, but to be a part of the whole district procedure.

Now, if this keeps up, in effect-that is, this idea of having bipartisan and meaning Republican and Democrats-those of us who are Independents may as well go home, or register as visitors in this kind of a delegation.

Now, I'll go to this point, though, I don't think we ought to always be classified as Republicans. Now, this tendency was shown yesterday, when the Democrats assumed they would be against the rest of us, and I noticed that the Chairman once today said, "theother side." Wedonotwantto consider ourselves as being the "other side" from the Democrats, and I don't know why we might not have an Independent as one of the three Democrats who are on the Committee, as well as one of the three who are from outside.

I feel very keenly about this, and I don't want to prolong this session except to say that I think this kind of thinking betrays what most of us said when we were running for office, and this goes for most of you, that the sooner we get through with this business of mentioning parties, the sooner we get through this idea of caucusing and going we and they, the sooner we can settle down and get the job done, and the much more attractive the outcome will be to the people of this state.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Any more discussion on the substitute-or the amendment, rather, which is that the Chair select three from each side-whatever that means?

DELEGATE: Mr. Graybill.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, sir.

DELEGATE: Delegate James. I think George has a very good point there. I think from now on we should make appointments according to ability and talent. We are here to draft a constitution for the State of Montana, not a Democratic or Republican or an Independent. We have given you a vote of confidence, and you expressed during your campaign, you might say, the fact that you would conduct this meeting in a fairway. We have given you this vote of confidence, and we feel it's up to you, and if we disagree, we'll let you know.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there any further-Mrs. Pemberton.

DELEGATE PEMBERTON: Catherine Pemberton, District No. 1. I believe it was Mr. James over here who just spoke. I'd like to also call our attention to remembering the fact that we are 81 men and 19 women, and we are all working towards the interests of Montana in this Convention, and I'd like to have us think that way from here on.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Thank you, Mrs. Pemberton.

Is there any other discussion on the amendment?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, sir.

DELEGATE: I'm Bill Burkhardt from District 12. I rise to just try to clarify what, to me, has been a confusing procedure, and I'd like to know the length of tenure of the temporary Committee. I would like to know the scope of their responsibility, and I'm just not certain. I'm hearing sentiments expressed that I agree with in terms of keeping this an open and nonpartisan and genuinely citizen-oriented work, and yet we're just getting tired enough that we're going to slip through and wonder later what we did. And I'd like some clarification about precisely how long this Temporary Rules Committee will be functioning and precisely what the scope of its duties are and, now, just what the amendment really is.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, the Chair would like to say, in his opinion at the moment, subject to change, the idea is to elect a temporary Rules Committee to come up with rules which would allow us to proceed to pick a vice-president and other necessary officers, and to organize committees, and carry us through what we all understand is the first two or three days here.

At that time, or later on, a regular Rules Committee will be adopted, and the regular Rules Committee will, in my opinion, have the duty of determining how we will proceed when we get to the assembly part next January, how things will be done. All of that business will be done later.

This is only to facilitate the setup, and it really isn't a matter of temporary, it's a matter of this Rules Committee will set up the first rules for our organization. And later on, the later Rules Committee would set up the operational rules under which we act now.

That is the way I see it, and I'm perfectly willing to hear discussion, but that is what I think we are trying to do now.

Is there other discussion? Mr. Romney, I'm going to recognize the lady.

DELEGATE: Mae Nan Robinson, District 18. I would like to offer an amendment to Mr. Blaylock's motion, that the Chair nominate a temporary Rules Committee composed of seven people, to be nominated without reference to party or any other consideration other than ability.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I think the Chair will temporarily rule your motion out of order, until we have disposed of the matter-we have an amendment here, and your amendment is not to the amendment itself, it's an amendment to the original motion. Do you follow me?

DELEGATE ROBINSON: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Stand up again, if you want to, but let's dispose of Mr. Aasheim's amendment, which is whether or not the Chair is to pick three Republicans or three from the "other side."

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, Mr. Aasheim.

DELEGATE AASHEIM: Magnus Aasheim from District 4. I sense the sentiment of the group, and I would like to withdraw my motion.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there any objection to the withdrawal of the motion?

(No reply.)

All right, the motion is withdrawn.

Now, we're back to Mr. Blaylock's motion that the Chair appoint three Democrats and three Republicans and that the Chair sit with them to make a committee of seven.

Now, I'll hear from the delegate from-Mrs. Robinson from Missoula.

DELEGATE ROBINSON: I would like to offer that the Chair nominate seven members to the temporary Rules Committee without reference to party designation.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, the motion has been made that the Chair, as a substitute-no, as an amendment to Mr. Blaylock's motion, that the Chair nominate seven members to a temporary Rules Committee.

Is there discussion on that motion? Yes.

DELEGATE: I believe that she meant appoint-excuse me, Rod Hanson, District 15. I believe she meant appoint instead of nominate.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Well, I think the sense of Mr. Blaylock's amendment is, that whatever I do will be put before this body for ratification, so I think she really means nominate, and then if you agree with the group I select, fine, and if not, we start over.

DELEGATE ROBINSON: I really mean nominate.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: She really means nominate, Mr. Hanson.

Are there other delegates wishing to discuss the amendment which would have the Chair nominate seven members?

(No reply.)

If not, we'll proceed to vote on the amendment, which is that the Chair appoint seven members to a temporary Rules Committee, with it understood that the temporary Rules Committee is operating only to set up organizational rules, and that this temporary Rules Committee, when the Chair has made the appointments, will be submitted to you for your ratification, and the Chair is not now, at the moment, bound by party designation by this motion.

Are you ready to vote?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The vote is open. Those in favor of the motion say Aye, those opposed vote No. Have all the delegates voted? Does any delegate wish to change his vote? If not, th'e vote is closed.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 91 have voted Aye, 7 voted No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Well, then, the motion is carried. The vote has carried in favor of the motion making it the Chair's obligation to nominate seven members of this body to a temporary Rules Committee.

Yes, sir.

DELEGATE CATE: Mr. President, the last two or three votes haven't shown on the board up here. The last two votes haven't shown.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I guess, Mr. Marshall, unless we direct you otherwise, we would like to see our votes go up in lights.

I think-if the Chair may have just a moment.

All right, the Chair would nominate the following members to the Rules Committee, and none are to be designated by me as chairman because that wasn't in the motion. First, Joe Eskildsen; second, Margaret Warden; third, Miles Romney; fourth, Tom Joyce; fifth, Tom Ask; sixth, Marshall Murray; seventh, John Toole.

The Chair is mindful that it didn't have to do anything, and that there are all types of people here, but that's what I nominated. It looks to me like it would be a good list, and I submit it to you.

The Chair would now entertain a motion that we put it before this body, and this group see if it wants to ratify or not.

DELEGATE FELT: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Felt.

DELEGATE FELT: I move the body approve the nominations made by the president, and I'll just mention now that I would hope, after this, that perhaps in line with comments that have come from different members of the floor, perhaps Mr. Nutting might make a motion, including the miscellaneous questions on the proposal dealing with the duties and term of office, and the various details of the function of that committee.

I now move that we approve the nominations made by the president.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, Mr. Champoux. You were on your feet, do you have anything to say?

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: Nothing but to say that I came here to Montana with a Boston accent, and I second his motion.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, the motion has been made and seconded that the Chair's nominees be ratified by the Convention as the temporary Rules Committee to set up the operational rules under which we would operate for the balance of our initial term here, between now and the next two or three days when we adjourn until January.

Does everybody understand the sense of the motion?

(No reply.)

All right, is there discussion?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Come on, aren't you going to discuss it? All right. You're ready for the question. We'll take a vote on the machine. The vote is now open. Those in favor of Mr. Felt's motion; that the Chair's nominees to the temporary Rules Committee be sustained, or ratified, vote Aye, those opposed vote No.

Have all the delegates voted? Do any of the delegates wish to change their vote? Now we'll close the vote. Will the clerk show the vote?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 96 delegates have voted Aye, none have voted NO.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, we are getting more bipartisan all the time.

Okay. That's the temporary Rules Committee, then, and I would like to ask that the temporary Rules Committee remain after we adjourn, or after we recess-maybe over here in the right-hand corner-to pick a time and place when they can meet this day.

Now, the hour is getting late. The Chair will recognize--all right, Delegate Nutting.

DELEGATE NUTTING: Delegate Nutting, District 7. I move that the temporary Committee be dissolved after its final report to the Convention. That the Committee's duties shall be to present a final report recommending the various officers to be selected by the Convention and the method of selection to be utilized, the names of all substantive standing committees to be now created, the number of delegates to make up each such committee, and such other matters as the Committee believes to be pertinent to the organization of the Convention. That such committee will have its own organization meeting during a brief recess of the Convention this day, so that it may select its own chairman and consider holding a committee hearing and meeting in the Senate Chamber immediately following adjournment this day, or such other proceedings as it may wish to utilize, and that it may be permitted the use of the stenographic and clerical help from the staff of the Constitutional Convention Commission, or such other persons as it may employ.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Nutting, first of all the clerk would like a copy of your motion which, I take it, you can supply them.

DELEGATE NUTTING: May I ask for clarification from the Chair?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes.

DELEGATE NUTTING: You listed substantive committees. May this Rules Committee also deal with procedural committees? Can we get that out of the way?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes.

DELEGATE NUTTING: It says, "and such other committees."

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, you have heard the motion, which is to tell this Rules Committee what to do and to get them started. Is there a second? Mr. Romney.

DELEGATE ROMNEY: I note that the hour is getting late and the stomach is speaking up. The proposal sounds good to me, but it's long. I think it would be wise to have it reproduced so that all delegates may have possession of it, and we can take action on it after the recess.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, Mr. Romney, I don't understand what you mean. You mean we would not vote on it now, or that we would have it reproduced even though we vote on it?

DELEGATE ROMNEY: I would like to know what I'm voting on. I think it should be reproduced so we would be able to ponder it, and then we can proceed. So, I move that we have it reproduced and that we consider it after therecess.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: May I ask you a question, Mr. Romney? Is it your understanding that the Committee could still get together and meet, or are they powerless until we—

DELEGATE ROMNEY: If everybody is aware that this will be before us, about all we can do now is to get together and decide when we are going to meet and where.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right—

DELEGATE ROMNEY: In the meantime, we're operating-have been operating in a vacuum without any rules.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Well, we've got rules, now, but no Rules Committee. But the Chair understands that there was an amendment to the motion. So there is an amendment that the motion be made available to the delegates and that they will not consider it at this time.

Is there any discussion on the amendment?

(No reply.)

All right, we'll open the vote. All in favor of the amendment that we have this reproduced and then we vote later on the duties of the Rules Committee, or the outline of what the Rules Committee can do, please vote Aye. All those opposing that motion vote No. The vote is open.

Have all the delegates voted? Do any delegates wish to change their vote? The vote is closed. Will the clerk announce the vote?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 52 have voted No, 42 have voted Aye.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, the amendment has failed. We are now considering Mr. Nutting's original motion that we direct the Rules Committee, according to the tenor of his motion, to proceed and report back to us. Is there any further discussion?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Aasheim.

DELEGATE AASHEIM: Magnus Aasheim, District 4. The hour is getting late, as Miles Romney said. This is a rather lengthy resolution, and in view of the dinner hour, I move that we recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The motion has been made that we recess, subject to the call of the Chair. No one is required to second. Is there any discussion? It's nondebatable. All right, it's amendable, but not debatable. Any amendments? If not, we'll vote now. The vote is now open on whether or not to recess, subject to the call of the Chair.

DELEGATE FELT: Mr. Chairman, a point of order-or a point of information. I would like to know if that clock is one hour off, or my watch is an hour off.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: That clock hasn't worked in 10 years, Mr. Felt. You know that.

DELEGATE FELT: Mr. Marshall, you also know that you have to put your question, sometimes, in a rather ridiculous manner to get to the point. Everyone's looking at that clock and saying it's late.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: It's 12:25.

All right. Now the vote is now open on whether or not to recess, subject to the call of the Chair, and those in favor of that motion vote Aye, and those opposed to that motion vote Nay.

Have all the delegates voted? Does any delegate wish to change his vote? The vote is now closed. Will the clerk announce the vote on recessing?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 62 have voted Aye, 35 have voted No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair would like to announce that it will attempt to see if we can't get these matters straightened out, and we probably will have a call of the Convention yet this afternoon, so don't go away. I guess we stand in recess.

What time? All right, the Chair would say about 3:30. We are in recess until 3:30.

(The Convention recessed at 12:30 p.m.—reconvened at 3:30 p.m.)

Afternoon Session

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Will the delegates please now be in order.

Has the rules-the temporary Rules Committee returned to the floor?

Mr. Marshall, do I understand, Mr. Marshall, that you've been designated the Chairman of the temporary Rules Committee-Murray, pardon me. Marshall Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, the Rules Committee-the temporary Rules Committee has met and I would like to report that I was elected the chairman of that committee and Leslie Joe Eskildsen has been elected the vice-chairman of that committee, and I move the adoption of that committee report. I guess we don't need to move that adoption. All right.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Hearing no objection, we'll assume that you're the chairman and that Mr. Eskildsen is the vice-chairman.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Fine, thank you. All right, for the next matter. I think there's some doubt as to whether or not there is a motion before the Convention.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Marshall informs me there is no motion, but that the matter handled here could be handled, perhaps, at the end of the day as to the directions to the Rules Committee as to what to do with your final report.

DELEGATE MURRAY: For the rest of my report, then, and in order to alleviate any doubt, I would request that Mr. Nutting withdraw his motion if, in fact, he's made it.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Nutting.

DELEGATE NUTTING: Mr. Chairman—President, I withdraw my motion until a future date.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Now, Mr. Murray, do you have a report from the temporary Rules Committee on the problem of the vice-presidency, or the officers?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, let me explain how we went about this matter. We discussed the matter of the procedural committees and the matter of the substantive committees first, and arrived at a result. We also arrived at a recommendation regarding the appointment of those committees. Now, we understand that after doing so, that it is the interest of the president of this Convention to have the statutory vice-president elected so that these committees could be selected, if they are adopted or accepted by this Convention. In this respect, we ran out of time. It is the consensus of the temporary Rules Committee that there should be three elected vice-presidents. We could not determine their specific duties within the time limit of our meeting and, therefore, it is the report of this committee, at this time, that the Convention shall elect a first vice-president-or the statutory vice-president, who shall have such duties as the president assigns during the 3-day organizational meeting, now and I move the adoption of that committee report.

Now, may I speak to it, Leo, for just a moment?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: May I make one request for clarification? Do I assume, then, that when the committee finally reports, it will have come in with some duties for this vice-president, permanently?

DELEGATE MURRAY: We are in doubt as to that.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Well, in any event, at the moment, do you want to get him elected?

DELEGATE MURRAY: At the moment, I— it is the consensus of the committee that we would like to have the vice-president referred to in The Enabling Act elected so that he can meet with the president and they can perform the function of appointing the various members to the committees.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: (inaudible— both speaking at once) Could the Chair understand that he, at least, would have the duties assigned him by The Enabling Act, of taking over if anything happens to me?

DELEGATE MURRAY: At least those duties, yes. We contemplate that.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Now, that's your motion. Do you wish to speak to the motion, Mr. Murray?

DELEGATE MURRAY: No. With that explanation, I think that's sufficient.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. You have heard the motion of the chairman of the temporary Rules Committee that we proceed to elect the statutory vice-president, that he have such duties as the chairman assigns-as the president assigns him for the 3-day period, that he have, certainly, the statutory duty of replacing the president in the occasion of my sickness or absence, and that the Rules Committee will come up with other rules for the remainder of the officers at a later date.

Is there any discussion about this proposed rule-or this proposed resolution by the Rules Committee?

(No reply.)

Are you ready for the question? No? Mrs. Payne.

DELEGATE PAYNE: Did I understand Mr. Murray correctly to say that you are going to elect three vice-presidents? Is this what you recommended?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: (inaudible) I'll give you Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, Mrs. Payne, it is the consensus of the committee, and I'm sure this committee will eventually report out the recommendation, that this Convention elect three vice-presidents.

DELEGATE PAYNE: But at this particular time, it would just be voting on whether or not to elect one?

DELEGATE MURRAY: That's correct.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there other discussion on the resolution? Mr. Berg.

DELEGATE BERG: Mr. President, Ben Berg from District 11. I should like to inquire as to whether the first vicepresident is to join with the president in its selection of committees, or do I misunderstand that?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Under my suggestion, that is true because I move that he shall have such duties as the president assigns him, and by that, I mean after talking with the president, that he wants the vice-president to meet with him so that the committee assignments can be made.

DELEGATE BERG: So that this is at least one duty that will now be undertaken by the first vice-president? And other duties are to be assigned by the Committee on Rules later?

DELEGATE MURRAY: The recommendation will be made by the committee later. We're in doubt as to whether each of the vice-presidents, as in the case of one of the conventions, should have the duties assigned by the president, or whether the rules themselves should spell out their duties, and we're trying to iron that out amongst us.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The president will announce that it would be his intention to confer with such a vice-president on any committees that were appointed, if the Chair had anything to do with those committee appointments.

Is there further discussion? Mr. Felt.

DELEGATE FELT: Your last comment may have clarified the question I had because I did not recall, at least, whether we had given authority for committee assignments to any person, president, vice-president, or committee, or any group, but it seemed to be assumed that both would have powers. But that really has never been acted upon, and there actually could be-certainly be some question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I think you're correct that I, certainly, have no power to do that, and we'll see what they come in with. But if I do have any power to do that, then I'm going to confer with the vice-president on that.

Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, with respect to the question of Mr. Felt, we considered that, and that is why this motion contains the language "such duties as the president assigns him," because we are about to take up the other issue. We have a recommendation with respect to the appointment of committees.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, is there further discussion on the motion?

(No reply.)

Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, we're voting-on the res-on the rule-on the temporary Rules Committee's first resolution, that we proceed to elect a first vice-president, who would have the statutory duties, who would have such other duties as assigned by the president during the first 3-day session, and the president has already indicated that this would include going over committees with the first vice-president, if the chairman has any such right, and that we proceed after we approve this, to elect such a vice-president.

The vote will now be taken by the machine. The vote is open. Those in favor of the resolution vote Aye, those opposed to the resolution vote No.

Have all the delegates voted? Do any delegates wish to change their votes? If not, the Chair will close the vote. Mr. Clerk, will you tally the votes?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 99 delegates have voted Aye, none voting No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Very well. I take it that the Convention, then, is ready to proceed to the nominations for first vice-president—statutory first vice-president.

Nominations for statutory first vice-president? Mrs. Robinson.

DELEGATE ROBINSON: Mae Nan Robinson from District 18. The delegates of this Constitutional Convention are, for the first time, representing a new constituency in Montana. That constituency is the 18-, 19-, and 20-year olds who were given the privilege to vote. It's my hope, that this Convention will see fit to involve the youth of this state in the formulation of this Constitution at all phases and in all aspects.

In judging from the number of young delegates in this Convention, it's further my hope that the Convention will see fit to grant some positions of responsibility to some of the younger delegates.

At this time, I would like to nominate, for the office of vice-presidency of this Convention, a man who has gained the respect and trust of both the young and old. And in nominating this person, I would like to read a letter that appeared in the Missoulian November 12th. This letter was written by a Mr. Ed Bursette, an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for the Constitutional Convention. The letter reads:

"The voters of District 18 have selected an excellent slate of candidates. The leading candidate in the primary was John Toole. The leading candidate in the general election was John Toole.

All delegates trying for the Convention favored a Convention that would be nonpartisan. John Toole has acquired the qualifications for the selection as the presiding officer of the Convention. He has experience in government, the ability to get along with people; and is fair-minded in his dealing with others. I sincerely hope that our delegates will start at once to promote John Toole for the prestigious office of chairman of the Constitutional Convention."

As a delegate of Missoula County, District 18,

I would urge you to support John Toole, a man who will unite rather than divide this Convention, a man who will lead rather than push, a man who will speak rather than shout, a man who has put Montana above party and above political ambition. I present John Toole, a man for Montana.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there-if any of you are seconding, I'd like to know that.

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Schiltz.

DELEGATE: Mr. President, a point of order.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Excuse me, I'll take the point of order.

DELEGATE: Mr. President—

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: State your name and—

DELEGATE: Maurice Driscoll, District 20. Before we go any further in the proceedings at this Convention, I think we should do it legally. We have one delegate who has not yet been sworn in, and is participating in the organization of the Convention.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair happens to-the delegate, Mr. Dahood has seen the Chair and has been sworn in by the Chief Justice and filed his affidavit. I'm sorry that I did not announce it. The records from this time forth should show that it has been done, and we aren't going to let him vote unless he did it, but he did it, so we're okay, Mr. Driscoll.

Now, Mr. Schiltz. (Clapping — Applause)

DELEGATE SCHILTZ: Mr. President, it's with a great deal of pleasure that I have this opportunity to second the nomination so eloquently made by the lady from whatever district Missoula is in.

I have known John Toole for almost 35 years. I'm going to be very brief and I'm going to say the best thing I can say about any human being, in my opinion, and that is that he has the absolute honesty and the absolute integrity to do the job that this Convention needs at this time to project ourselves as a serious and a good body, and it's with great-a great deal of pleasure that I second the nomination.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Thank you. The delegate—

DELEGATE: Bob Campbell, District 18 in Missoula.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, Mr. Campbell.

DELEGATE CAMPBELL: I'm a Democratic delegate from Missoula, and I would also like to second the nomination of John Toole.

The Toole family, of course, since the beginning of Montana history, has been very active in public service. John has continued his fine family tradition through his service to the State, to the county and to the local governments.

As a Republican, he is endorsed by every organization and group in Missoula, including labor. We feel that his past service and his capabilities and personal integrity cannot be questioned. It gives me great pride to second that nomination, and personally recommend that he be elected by this Convention.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there other nominations for the office of first vice-president? Mr. Nutting.

DELEGATE NUTTING: Mr. Chairman, I'm not going to belabor the point, you all heard Sterling Rygg speak yesterday and you're familiar with his views, and he would be interested in being a candidate for vice-president, and I would like to place in nomination the name of Sterling Rygg from Kalispell.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there seconds for Sterling Rygg? Seconds are not required, but are there seconds?

All right, are there further nominations for the office of first vice-president? Are there further nominations for the office of vice-president? Mr. Kelleher.

DELEGATE KELLEHER: From District 8, Mr. President. There is a young man who's made a terrific impression on me the first time I met him in 1964, and in the 7 years since that time, I've only grown to greater appreciate his integrity, his honesty and his capability, and that man is Marshall Murray of Kalispell, and I'd like to nominate him for the office of first vice-president.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Marshall Murray has been nominated, are there further seconds?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray, I'll recognize you.

DELEGATE MURRAY: I'm flattered by this nomination, but it is not my desire to serve in this capacity, and therefore, I respectfully withdraw.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray has withdrawn his name.

Are there farther nominations for first vice-president of the Constitutional Convention? Mr. Cate.

DELEGATE CATE: I would move that the nominations be closed.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, just a moment. I don't want to cut it off. I'd like to say three times, are there any further nominations?

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Driscoll.

DELEGATE: Dave Drum, District 8.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Oh, Mr. Drum. Excuse me.

DELEGATE DRUM: Before the nominations are closed, it appears that no more nominations are going to be made, and I would-would request, on behalf of a consensus of the non-Democratic delegates, that this unorganized group be allowed the use of the voting machine as a method of selecting a vice-president of this Convention.

As a courtesy to this group, we would request that the Democrats present abstain from voting, and that only the totals for each candidate, as indicated by an Aye vote on the voting machine, be read as the total. The machine would then be cleared and the next candidate voted upon.

The non-Democratic delegates, which includes those identified as Independents, are invited to partake in this voting, and we hope that they will include themselves.

We feel a principle is involved here, and the secret ballot has been one that we have revered-revered for many years, and we feel that it is applicable in this case, and we would appreciate this courtesy from the Party.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, Mr. Drum, if I understand the sense of your suggestion, or your motion-is it a motion? Let's make it a suggestion a minute. It is, that the Democratic members let the Republican and Independent members vote independently on this matter and abstain, and then, if that's allowed, you want to use the voting machine and, I take it that-do you want to use the voting machine and once for one candidate and once for the next candidate?

DELEGATE DRUM: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, now we understand that, and before we make a motion on it, the Chair would like to have the sense of any Democratic delegates here as to whether there is any Democratic delegate that objects to abstaining on this expression of opinion by the Republican Party while we're in the House, so that they don't have to move over to the Senate and do this.

Hearing no objection from the Demo-oh, wait a minute. Mr. Cate, do you want to talk? I'm looking for Democrats, Mr. Habedank. All right. Fine.

DELEGATE CATE: I really thought George Harper would get up on this, but aren't we getting back to this thing we've been trying to get away from, division on the basis of parties? I'd like you to consider that, Mr. Drum. And-I think we're just aggravating the situation by making that type of division.

The opportunity was presented to the Republicans to caucus if they wanted to. They didn't take advantage of that opportunity, and I would like to have the opportunity to cast a vote for vice-president for John Toole. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Let me ask this question: Are there any Republican or Independent members here who object to this procedure?

DELEGATE: Mr. Chairman.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: There's one Republican member here who objects. I think it's about time we buried the hatchet as far as partisan politics are concerned, and I'm perfectly willing for this body as a whole to elect whoever they see fit to vice-president.

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Berg.

DELEGATE BERG: As a Republican, I want to see all officers of this Convention elected by all delegates.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, we have heard from you. Mr. Mahoney.

DELEGATE MAHONEY: I agree with Mr. Berg, that we don't want any more division, and that with all due respect to Mr. Drum's remarks, I would like to see it one vote because we got to have it seconded and we can't be letting this-1 would like to-1 would question-I would think this is probably poor strategy.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Gysler.

DELEGATE GYSLER: District 13. I would just like to second the last three statements that have been made. I think that the faster we forget any party designations in our deliberations and everything, the better off we will be.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Dahood.

DELEGATE DAHOOD: Mr. President, I'm a Republican from District 19. I agree with my fellow Republicans who have indicated the entire assembly should vote on the candidate for vice-president. I think the man nominated, John Toole from Missoula, is an excellent choice, and I think the entire delegation should have the privilege of voting upon his candidacy.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Davis.

DELEGATE DAVIS: Carl Davis, District 21. As long as this matter is before the floor, let's give some serious consideration to not having any more caucuses throughout this entire Convention. (Applause)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Now, we had a suggestion which was not made in the form of a motion. The Chair certainly does not want to stop it from being made into the form of a motion. The Chair, without expressing any opinion as to whether either side is right, is perfectly willing to entertain a motion from the Republicans for a recess, if you do want to caucus, or it's perfectly willing to go ahead.

Do any Republicans 'want to make a motion one way or the other?

If none are made, the Chair will proceed and ballot the whole group. If you want to make a motion to do what you suggested, Mr. Drum, or if you want to make a motion to recess, somebody do it.

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I take it from the "question," from the fact that some of you are ready for the question, that we can go ahead and vote the whole delegation on Mr.-the whole Convention on Mr. Toole and Mr. Rygg as candidates for first vice-president.

Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Now the Chair, then, is ready to put the issue of whether Mr. Toole or Mr. Rygg will be the first vice-president, and I would think in line with what we did this morning, then, that the way we would do it is on roll call vote, and the members would answer by stating the name of the candidate for which they wish to vote. Now, that's what the Chair is, at the moment, considering doing.

Mr. Arbanas.

DELEGATE ARBANAS: Delegate Arbanas from District 13. I'd like to make a suggestion to the Chair. I know neither of these gentlemen, and I would appreciate a chance to have them speak to this assembly for a short moment, to make a responsible judgment.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The-both of these members spoke yesterday at the caucus; however, I would certainly be willing to have both of them stand.

Are you, Mr. Rygg, on that issue?

DELEGATE RYGG: Would it be in order for me to withdraw my name now? I think we could save a lot of time and-in the best interest—

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: We always like to hear those withdrawals, Mr. Rygg.

DELEGATE RYGG: Well, I-I think it would be in the best interest for me and everybody to give it to Mr. Toole, and if I could withdraw from that, I would do so now.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Let's see. Mr. Rygg was nominated by Mr. Nutting. Now, Mr. Nutting, would you consent to the withdrawal? There's been quite a lot of time go by. I don't want to put you in a bad position.

DELEGATE NUTTING: I defer to Mr. Rygg's judgment.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Rygg, do I understand that you would now like to withdraw as a candidate?

DELEGATE RYGG: That's right, and I would give it to Mr. Toole.

One other thing, Mr. President, while I have this mike in my hand, I have a reason for getting it. I thought I should get up once and use it before my seatmate wore it out, so I'd just like to have the opportunity to try it. (Applause)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mrs. Robinson, would you care to make a motion to cast a unanimous ballot of this convention in favor of your nominated candidate?

DELEGATE ROBINSON: It would give me great pleasure to make a motion to cast a unanimous ballot of this entire Constitutional Convention to Mr. John H. Toole as our first vice-president.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. You have heard the motion, which is to cast a unanimous ballot of this Convention for John Toole for first vice-president of the Montana Constitutional Convention.

The Chair will open the voting, and those in favor of that motion vote Aye, those against that motion vote No.

Have you completed voting? Have all the delegates voted? Any delegate want to change his vote? The Chair will close the vote. Mr. Clerk, will you tally the votes for the motion?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 95 delegates have voted Aye, none voting No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The motion having been sustained 95 to 0, the Chair will request that the record of this Convention show a roll call-on the roll call issue, will show a unanimous vote of this Convention for John Toole for first vice-president.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: As temporary secretary of this Convention, I hereby cast a unanimous ballot for John Toole of Missoula for vice-president, a Montana delegate for the Constitutional Convention. John Toole. (Applause)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair would ask that Delegate Otto Habedank and Delegate George James escort Mr. Toole to the podium for introduction.

John, it's my sincere pleasure to congratulate you on that, and I would like to present to the Convention, John Toole, who's been elected your first vice-president. And John, bearing in mind that we're all going somewheretonight, would you care to say a word or two to the Convention?

DELEGATE TOOLE: Mr. President, it would be only a word or two. I'm really overwhelmed by all of this. I'm humble and proud. I'll do my very best, and thank you all so very much. (Applause)

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Blaylock.

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: Chet Blaylock, District 8. If it is in order at this time, I should like to move that the delegates to this assembly remain seated in alphabetical order, as we are now.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair was considering a report of the Rules Committee, and we're only partly through it; however, before we adjourn tonight, I would call upon you, Mr. Blaylock, to make such a motion so that we'll know what to do tomorrow morning.

So, if you would allow-if you would withdraw your motion temporarily, we'll consider it, continue the Rules Committee, and when we finish, and before we adjourn-before we recess, we'll come back to you.

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: I'll withdraw then.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, then, now back to Mr. Murray, the chairman of the temporary Rules Committee. Have you a second part of your temporary, or your first, report concerning committees for this Convention? Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, we, your temporary Committee on Rules of Organization, respectfully report as follows. The following committees were established as the permanent committees of the Convention.

Procedural committees:

- Administrative.
- Rules and Resolution.
- Public Information.
- Style, Drafting and Transition.

Substantive committees:

- Bill of Rights, Suffrage and Elections.
- Legislature.
- Executive.
- Judiciary.
- Local Government.
- Revenue and Finance.
- Education.
- Public Health, Welfare and Labor.
- Natural Resources and Agriculture.

General Government and Constitutional Amendment.
Now, let me go through those again—

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, Mr. Murray, may the Chair observe for the delegates that the committee has caused to be printed these sheets, on which you have indicated preferences. Now, I want it clear, that by handing these out we are not suggesting that these are the final or official committees until this action-this body has acted upon them, but we want you to be able to look at them and have them in your hand.

We may amend them or we may change them, we may add or subtract to them. At least this will give everybody, in his hand, an idea of who the committee-of what the committees are. Then, when we have finished adopting what the committees shall be, you can amend those sheets in your hand, and then you can write in the names of the committees you want to be on before we leave tonight. But there is no suggestion, as I understand it, from the Rules Committee, that this is their proposal, and you don't have to adopt it this way. This is so you'll see what you're doing.

Okay, Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, we, as the Committee of Rules, move for the adoption of this committee report. And now may I speak to that motion, please?

With the assistance of Dale Harris, we analyzed, as all of us I'm sure have done since we became candidates for this Constitutional Convention, the various material given to us-furnished to us with respect to what other conventions have done relative to procedural committees and substantive committees, and have attempted to weigh, as best we can, the problems inherent in the State of Montana and in our existing Constitution.

We feel that the procedural committees, as such, are relatively standard. The Administrative Committee would be the housekeeping committee, related to the operation of the Convention, and the hiring and firing of the staff, and this sort of detail.

The Rules and Resolutions Committee would be doing that work that this temporary committee is now doing.

The Public Information Committee is the committee which we envision-and others in other states have envisioned-as being the committee which assumes the responsibility of conveying to the public the work and the progress of the Convention itself.

And the committee entitled Style, Drafting and Transition has to do with, we hope, the spirit of the entire document itself, the style of the language and the drafting of each of the sections and articles involved. And the word "transition", we trust, has to do with the dovetailing of all of these provisions into one document, and the matters related to the transition of that document, and how it might relate to various statutory provisions which presently exist-or should exist-after the adoption of the Constitution, if it's adopted.

Now, are there any questions with respect to those four committees that we entitled procedural committees?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Questions on the procedural committees?

(No reply.)

DELEGATE MURRAY: There being none, let me discuss, briefly, the substantive committees.

First of all, we recognize that this Convention will have a great deal of work on some matters, and not so much on others. Now, we have attempted to design these committees so that they will, as much as possible, have, each of them, a substantial work load, and so that none of them will be considered to be light work loads, or unimportant, or uninteresting committees to serve on.

And we considered, with respect to the Bill of Rights, Suffrage and Elections, that these matters can be handled under one committee. Certainly the Legislature itself, the Executive, the Judiciary, Local Government, Revenue and Finance, and Education speak for themselves.

Public Health, Welfare and Labor is a committee which we designed after looking at the various committees proposed and used in the other states, feeling-and after discussion with Dale Harris-that they are all matters that this committee could well consider, and that it might be a significant committee by itself.

Natural Resources and Agriculture has been suggested by us because of the considerable interest, in our area and others, according to the Temporary Rules Committee during the campaign, with respect to natural resources. And we felt even though natural resources automatically included agriculture in most of our eyes, that it might be nice to say "Natural Resources and Agriculture," since some of the other conventions have done so.

And the substantive committee entitled General Government and Constitutional Amendment. The Constitutional Amendment portion of that concerns itself with revision and amendment, and the General Government portion of that is what we would call our miscellaneous, or catch-all, type committee-which-and I'm not suggesting that it would, because this matter would just, ofcourse, be in the discretion of the president, subject to veto, I guess, by the members of the Convention itself-such things, perhaps, as lottery, gambling and things of that nature.

We feel that there will be many matters of considerable import which would be referred to that particular committee, in addition to the duties assigned thereto, entitled Constitutional Amendment.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there questions of the chairman of the temporary Rules Committee concerning the substantive committees? Mr. Harper.

DELEGATE HARPER: George Harper, District 12. Mr. Murray, did your committee consider, at all, a kind of committee which might be called a "General Review Committee," and I'll just tell you what I had in mind.

I note in reading the Model Constitution book, and the suggestions from people who went through other constitutional conventions, that when you get all done with your individual committees doing their work and drawing up their parts of the bill, still the whole constitution is to be a unified document, needs to be styled in other ways,and sometimes it's important to get together all of these factors.

I would have a suggestion, if your committee didn't discuss it, to see what your reaction would be; mainly, that the chairman of all of these committees, meeting on the call of the president of the Convention, be named as a "General Review Committee."

DELEGATE MURRAY: I appreciate your suggestion, but let me say that I believe we did consider this matter. I think it's the consensus of the committee that that work be procedural—considered procedural rather than substantive and, therefore, we consider it to be within the responsibility of the Style, Drafting and Transition Committee, and we hope that that committee would undertake the-have the spirit of this Convention at heart, and hopefully that it will assume those duties. I suppose, that there being no other committee, and if that burden is placed on that committee by the president, that that duty will be so assumed.

DELEGATE HARPER: Mr. Chairman, George Harper, District 12. I'm not pushing this, it's just that we ought to take the time now to do what we think we need to do.

I mentioned style. I should have been more specific. I'm not concerned so much about style, perhaps, as the idea that when we have 10 committes, we're going to have committees that naturally deal with-in some areas, with the same thing. There's going to be an overlap, and somewhere in the process there ought to be a chance for us, not just at the end of the process after all the committees have worked and handed out their individual opinions.

There must be some way, I think, so that we can share what's going on, and I think maybe an occasional meeting of the chairmen might do this. I called it a "General Review Committee." Maybe it needs no name at all, but there's somewhere along the line, the chairman of the Legislative Committee could say to this group, well now, this is what we're dealing with. And somebody else could say wait a minute, we're talking about that same thing. And if it's obvious there's going to be a disagreement, then maybe they'd go back to their committees and ask them to, you know, to consider something a little bit different, or to consider what the other people are doing.

This is the area I'm thinking in. I have no definite proposal to make particularly on it.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Harper, Mr. Harris has pointed out that in some conventions, the chairman or president later appoints such a committee to do that, and I think that the temporary Rules Committee chairman--I'd like to ask you this: Isn't it the understanding that we can add to committees, or change committees later on. This is a skeleton to start working with. May we not add committees later on?

CHAIRMAN MURRAY: Mr. President, it's my understanding, that we can change our rules at any time we so desire.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I'm not suggesting that we shouldn't make the change now, Mr. Harper, but I think it is possible to do exactly what you say, even with this structure.

CHAIRMAN MURRAY: Mr. President, may I also say that this matter has been expressed to me by other delegates. They are concerned with this, and I think that if it's within the scope of the duties of the temporary Rules Committee, we'll give this matter further consideration.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there other questions concerning the substantive committees? Mr. Monroe.

DELEGATE MONROE: I had a question for Mr. Murray.

I was wondering; in some of the constitutional conventions, I noticed public lands was on one of the committees. I didn't notice it here specifically, but in your mind, does that fit within, say, Natural Resources and Agriculture-the public lands?

CHAIRMAN MURRAY: I refer that to Mr. Harris. We did discuss that. Where does that seem to lie within this group of committees?

MR. HARRIS: I would defer that to the president when he assigns the committees. It would appear to come under Natural Resources.

CHAIRMAN MURRAY: I think that was the consensus of the committee, yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there other questions of the temporary Rules Committee chairman on the substantive committees? Mr. Felt?

DELEGATE FELT: (inaudible first sentence) I wonder if there is any-and this is a very important decision, of course, and though it may be tentative, it is quite likely that it will structure the work of the Convention, and any changes, if they occurred, would probably be rather disruptive, at least if we were to consolidate some committees, or to abolish them.

The matter of public lands, for example, dealt with natural resources more than education, and could become kind of confusing, and I would like a little time, I think, myself, to consider that type of question, just as one example.

I'm also concerned as to whether we are-perhaps we're not setting a precedent, I hope, because I'm in hopes we're going to have public hearings of committees, for a very good reason, so the people can present their thoughts to the committee prior to the time the committee reports to the Convention. And it will not be necessary for us to answer these questions, so called, but actually make our suggestions while we are here taking up the time of the whole Convention.

I would be quite interested in knowing the possible number of members of the different committees. I think if I knew that I would be more certain whether I liked or disliked the names given to substantive committees.

Because of the total importance of the question, I would wish for a little more comprehensive statement of the reasons for designating the names of some of these committees. Some are quite self-explanatory, but some are not, and I would like to know, too, if the committee expects us to vote here immediately, today, or whether they might contemplate a public hearing at which not only delegates, but any persons who have perhaps been working for 10 years or so on this question and have things on their mind that they would like to express, to give us the benefit-or give the committee the benefit of their thoughts.

Perhaps I have a strange feeling that-I'd almost like to know how this happened to be handed while the committee report was being read to us, and just how much the committee really was able to-how much time and thought and analysis they have been able to submit, and who they've heard from, and find out what they have considered.

(Inaudible)...all of this, particularly because I feel we may be making decisions here without full knowledge ourselves, without the opportunity for the public to participate. To my knowledge they haven't even been invited, and perhaps if they were invited, and given some time, they would appear. Or perhaps they would not. Perhaps they don't care, but I sure would hate to see this first committee report-and one on a matter of great magnitude-presented to us without knowing that all the people in the State of Montana were given some opportunity to present their thoughts.

Now, I may be all wrong on all of this, but I would certainly hate to be asked to vote right now on all this, without knowing the numbers, without knowing such things as what committee will be dealing with the question of our school lands, what will be the Natural Resources Committee, the Education Committee, and possibly other questions which I just would not want to take your time now to (inaudible) bring up.

But I did want a chance to bring it up because I know it's common in many other states to split the Legislature Committee up into two, one of which deals with the structure of the legislature and the other with the general powers of the legislature, and there seems to be considerable approval by the text writers and persons with much experience in legislative and constitutional revision, for that type of a division. And I suppose it could be handled through subcommittees, and it could be brought to you in some other ways, but it would depend upon how many members there might be on all the legislative committees, and it just seems like an awful big order.

But, of course, I am completely in the dark as to what the committee has contemplated for the next 2 days, but having elected our general officers, as called for, it would appear to me that we are proceeding at a very commendable pace-and we hope that we will always do that-but we cannot lose track of the axiom involving haste makes waste, and that full consideration must be given to matters of great importance.

I thank you for your time.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Felt, the Chair would like to respond to one portion of your statement.

The Chair asked the temporary Rules Committee, when it began its session at 2:00, to consider the committees first, and when it had completed consideration of the committees, to send the list to this office so that this memorandum that you have before you could be prepared.

The reason for this, is that the Chair is anxious--regardless of how the committees are appointed-the Chair is anxious to get started with that task.

I am convinced, personally, from talks with many of you, that probably the most important next thing to the delegate, is to find out what he's going to be doing here, and we want to get that on the road.

So, it's because of my request that they do that, and it was typed while they did consider the other matters, but it was not typed in advance, and it has, in fact, been typed since 3:O0. So, that answers that.

Mr. Murray, did you have any other points to make?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Although it was not announced by anybody after this-the appointment of the temporary Rules Committee, the committee meeting was public. There were guests. Nobody did ask to speak.

And, as far as our consideration of the matter is concerned, we counseled extensively with Mr. Dale Harris. We reviewed the various books and documents that we had. All of us, I'm sure, have been through this several times on our own in advance of the committee meeting, and we also consulted, at length, with Mr. President.

I-with respect to the proposal of the public hearing, relative to the-the names of the substantive committees, let me say this. I-I feel, and I think the committee feels, that we have covered all of the matters which might come forth during this Constitutional Convention under the titles of these committees as we have them now labeled. With perhaps one suggestion.

It occurs to me that most of the lands in the State of Montana that are public owned, relate in some way, shape or form to education, and it might be that that particular committee could be entitled "Education and Public Lands," if that meets with the consensus of the Convention itself. But I do really feel that there is little need, if any—in fact, none, as far as I'm concerned, to have a public hearing, or invite people other than delegates to address themselves to the issues of the names or titles of the substantive committees themselves.

Of course, all of those matters which will be considered by the Convention will be heard publicly, those substantive matters considered within each of the committees, and I submit that that probably is the time to have the public hearings, rather than at this date.

I, for one, am interested in the committee assignment that I will have and, frankly, I urge that you give consideration to the early adoption of this committee report and the committees as we now have them labeled.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Grace Bates.

DELEGATE BATES: Grace Bates from District-am I on? Grace Bates from District 11. I was wondering; what about a preamble. Perhaps putting a preamble and the Bill of Rights together, Suffrage and Elections and Constitutional Amendments under another--oh, you can't hear it? There, is that better?

Grace Bates from District 11. I was wondering about a preamble, and perhaps preamble and Bill of Rights should be listed under one committee and Constitutional Amendments and Suffrage and Elections, perhaps, under another.

This is just a suggestion, but I wondered if you'd considered a preamble.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Yes, we did give this matter consideration, and we felt that the preamble could be considered, I believe, if my memory serves, with the Bill of Rights, Suffrage and Elections.

We feel that the Bill of Rights, Suffrage and Elections Committee pretty well-we would have to consider-well, I think-we think that the three-the four things are kind of, you know, they're intermeshed.

The preamble, in a sense, is a statement of declaration of rights and, therefore, we probably could have entitled the committee "Preamble, Bill of Rights, Suffrage and Elections," but our efforts were spent towards reducing the titles of the committees as much as possible so that any reports and journal, and all of this other matter that has to come, wouldn't forever have these long titles, and that matter was given consideration, and we think it fits within that committee.

We also think Suffrage and Elections fits within the Declaration of Rights subject, and should not be separate from it. We also thought that because we wanted to give a considerable work load to that particular committee.

DELEGATE BATES: Then you feel that—PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now just a minute Mrs. Bates. Okay.

DELEGATE BATES: Then you feel that Constitutional Amendments, then, should not be with Elections and Suffrage?

DELEGATE MURRAY: I really don't think that-no, that's what's right, I don't think that it needs to be there, and again, we've put that down with General Government, so that there is something of interest in that field in that committee, in an attempt not to have any committees not important enough, so that people will want to serve on every committee.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there other -Mrs. Pemberton.

DELEGATE PEMBERTON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to move the adoption of the tentative committees proposed by the temporary Rules Committee.

Catherine Pemberton, District 1.

DELEGATE MURRAY: I second it.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, we'll allow your motion to move the resolution and Mr. Murray to be a second.

Now, is there discussion-I don't want to cut off debate. Is there further discussion on adopting the temporary Committee's proposed procedural and substantive committees, with the clear understanding that at anytime we can-the Committee can-the Convention can either add or subtract from them? Mr. Skari.

DELEGATE SKARI: Chairman—Carman Skari, District 14. It seems to me from the reading I've done in our material, that the 10 committees might be possibly quite a number, and that we might be better off with perhaps a smaller number, more like eight or nine, or possibly even seven.

Often, too large a number of committees leads to a longer document. I think it would be a more unified document if we did try to hold these committees down, and possibly to combine some of them as Mrs. Bates suggested; Constitutional Amendment up here in the first committee and possibly, and I would suggest, General Government in with Local Government.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, is there other discussion? Mr. Champoux.

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: Rich Champoux from District 16. A question I would like, if it isn't out of order-two of them.

First of all, how many do they feel are going to be on-did the Rules Committee consider how many are on each committee?

DELEGATE MURRAY: May I answer that?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Go ahead—

DELEGATE MURRAY: Our consideration in this respect was deferred until the president could have the desires and wishes relative to the committees you would like to serve on.

We know, at this time, that there are two or three committees upon which we should have many members, as opposed to some on which we should have fewer, and I think particularly of the Legislative and the Judiciary. Local Government is another in which there has been considerable concern expressed, and we thought, in all fairness to this Convention, that the expression from you people as to the committees you would like to serve on should help us in governing those numbers.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Champoux.

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: The second question I would like to put to the committee chairman is; did they consider whether they were-how they were going to split up, in terms of two committees per person, or did you consider this at all?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The number of members, Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: It is the consensus of the committee, that each delegate should serve on one substantive standing committee, and that is the next recommendation-

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: And isn't it also understood that some of the delegates could then also serve on procedural committees, although maybe everybody wouldn't be assigned to a procedural committee? Is that correct?

DELEGATE MURRAY: We considered that there would probably be 99 of us serving on substantive committees, and we really thought that perhaps only the president would not serve on, or have a role, in any special substantive committee.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Well, what my question, Mr. Murray, is that people can serve on two committees, if one's procedural and one's substantive? Isn't that right?

DELEGATE MURRAY: That's right.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I think that was the intent of the original resolution. Does that answer your question, Mr. Champoux?

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. Mr. Choate.

DELEGATE CHOATE: I'm Lyman Choate, delegate from District 2. I would say, after listening to this discussion, that Mr. Murray and his committee have worked these committee divisions out in pretty good order. There appears to be good background for the recommendations they've come up with. I think that with 100 delegates, or 99 to serve, we can easily handle 10 committees.

I agree fully with the appointment of only one delegate to one substantive committee. I would join Mrs. Pemberton on her motion, and I would like to second the motion that we adopt this procedure.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there other discussion? Mrs. Bugbee. Just talk—

DELEGATE BUGBEE: I'd like to ask Mr. Murray; have you considered a group of people, or a small group of people, who would do the integrating between these committees, whether it be a vice-president, or a couple of vice-presidents?

It seems to me, you said 99 people, minus the president, but shouldn't there be a small number of people-say three or four-who would do nothing but the integrated work between, for instance, Finance and Taxation and Local Government? This is going to be one of the key things that is going to have to be integrated.

DELEGATE MURRAY: My statement is probably warped by my legislative experience, but it seems to me that at a given time, under the rules which we will propose, we will all serve in that capacity, and that as these matters are brought to this body-to the Committee of the Whole-or whatever that may be entitled, we should all have the opportunity to express our concern thatitmay conflict, or have some effect, on something that some other committee is handling, and then make an appropriate motion to take it out of discussion and to refer it to the other committee, or to consolidate those two things-get them in at that time.

However, I really think that the Style, Drafting and Transition Committee, through whom I envision, probably, that all of the completed sections or proposals would pass, at some time or other, would be also serving in that capacity.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there other— go ahead, Mrs. Bugbee.

DELEGATE BUGBEE: I would just like to say that part of the problem with the Legislature is its lack of integration [inaudible sentence-two speaking at once followed by laughter].

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there other discussion?

DELEGATE FURLONG: All right, Mr. President. Furlong—

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Furlong.

DELEGATE FURLONG: I'd like to ask a question of Mr. Murray, if I might.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, sir.

DELEGATE FURLONG: Mr. Murray, in discussing Education and Natural Resources, you suggested that perhaps Education might include public lands, since the majority of the public lands are educational lands.

My question is, will this then become a change in your recommendation of the adoption of this committee report?

DELEGATE MURRAY: I have not so moved, but I make that suggestion, and if you wish to make a substantive motion to that effect I would concur in it.

DELEGATE FURLONG: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, sir.

DELEGATE FURLONG: Is a motion to include public lands in with the Education Committee in order?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I think a motion to amend the title of the Education Committee to be Education and Public Lands is in order. Do you wish to make such an amendment?

DELEGATE FURLONG: I so move, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Motion's been made that the title of the Education Subcommittee in the resolutions proposed by the temporary Rules Committee be amended to include the word "and Public Lands," so that it now reads, "Education and Public Lands."

Is there any discussion on the amendment? (No reply.)

Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. The Chair will open the vote, and all in favor of the motion to include Public Lands in Education vote Aye. All those opposed to putting Public Lands in Education vote Nay.

Have all the delegates voted? Does any delegate wish to change his vote? The Chair has closed the vote. Will the clerk tally the vote?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 80 delegates have voted Aye, 16 delegates voted NO.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: By your vote, you have amended the title of the Education Committee to be "Education and Public Lands."

Is there further discussion of the proposed committees? Mr. Brazier.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: I'm Jeff Brazier from District 12. I just have a couple of questions with respect to this committee assignment blank.

Do I understand that when we vote on Mr. Murray's motion, that that closes discussion on the entire subject, or will I have a chance to ask a couple of questions?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: No. sir. We'll be glad to discuss the blank with you, if we know what we're going to be—

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Fine. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Any further discussion? Mrs. Eck.

DELEGATE ECK: I'd like to comment that1 think that during the campaign, we all discussed a good deal that our Constitution should be fundamental and not statutory. It appears to me that the inclusion of the section on Public Health, Welfare and Labor, Natural Resources and Agriculture, without any mention here of either industry or corporations which we have now, could open the door to a great deal of statutory material which really could better be omitted from the Constitution.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, I'm not sure that that's—my comment was made by way of inquiry to me, but I will speak to it, anyway.

We feel, as the temporary Rules Committee, under the short time that we had to meet, that it is as important to delete from our present Constitution those matters which are obsolete, or which ought better be in the statutes and not in the Constitution, as it is to add things, and we don't believe that because we propose a committee to you, and something is proposed to that committee, or assigned to it as a duty, that you have to do something with it by way of enactment. We feel you can kill it.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Or at least take it out. (Laughter)

All right. Is there any further discussion on the proposed substantive committees?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are you ready for the question? Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. The Chair will put the resolution of the temporary Rules Committee that the procedural committees shown before you on the sheet, and the substantive committees, including the amendment, "Education and Public Lands," that these be the committee-that this be the committee structure of the Convention at this point. It's understood by everyone that the body can add or subtract from these at a later date, but to allow assignment, this is the committee structure.

All those in favor of this committee structure signify so by voting Aye on the voting machines, and those opposed by voting No.

Have all the delegates voted? Have all the delegates voted? Does any delegate wish to change his vote? Okay, the Chair will close the vote. Mr. Clerk, will you tally the vote?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 98 delegates have voted Aye, 1 delegate has voted NO.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: 98 delegates having voted Aye, and 1 delegate having voted No, you have adopted as your committee structure the procedural committees and substantive committees, as amended by the addition of the words "Public Lands," shown on the sheet before you.

Now, we are going to take up in a minute, if it's all right with you, how to appoint these committees, but to clear up the matter Mr. Brazier raised, it is theintention of the Chair, unless the Convention instructs him differently, to ask each of you to fill these out and put your name on them, and some of you have already expressed to me the fact that you want to meet as a delegation and see that you don't-that you get some spread among the delegation. And I would suggest that could be done immediately following our meeting, but the Chair would like to have these filled out this evening, so that whatever comes of how to appoint them, we could have them to work with, and the office could tally them and figure them out before tomorrow morning, so that we will have time early in the morning to start working on these committees.

Now, are there any questions about how to answer or fill out these blanks? Mr. Brazier.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Mr. President, one question. One suggestion.

Do I understand that it's the recommendation of the committee that the delegates each indicate the order of preference on the substantive committees?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I think we would consider the top line your first, the second line your second, and the third line your third preference, yes.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Just a suggestion, it might be helpful for the committee on committees, if somewhere, on any available space, the delegates indicate what there is in their background that may tend to qualify them for the committee.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I'm sure we have no objection to doing that. The staff tells me they've got some biographical data on us that we can refer to, but you certainly may add any comments you want.

Are there any other questions about the questionnaire?

(No reply.)

If you will see that the questionnaires get either to the pages, or to someone in the office before you leave, so that we can take cars of them overnight, we'd appreciate it.

Now, let's go on to the next matter. Does the temporary Rules Committee have any recommendations concerning how the committees should be appointed? Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, we further recommend the following rule regarding committee appointments:

"The president, after consultation with the vice-president(s)"-because we may have more vice-presidents-"shall appoint the committee members; that any appointment on the announcement, thereof, may be rejected by the majority of the members of the Convention prior to adjournment on January 19, 1972. Each member, except the president, will serve on one substantive standing committee."

This follows, very much, the Illinois proposal, as I understand it.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: If I understand the sense of the committee's recommendation, it is that the president appoint the committees, after consultation with the vice-president-or presidents-

All right. "The president, after consultation with the vice-president-or vice-presidents-shall appoint the committee members, but any appointment, on the announcement thereof, may be rejected by a majority of the members of the Convention prior to adjournment on January 19, 1972. Each member, except the president, shall be on one substantive standing committee."

The Chair would also like to point out that if there are appointments that take place later than that, it's the Chair's intention to always give a member 2 days, at least-1 think that's 2 days-to complain and have his assignment, even if it's late in the session, changed, if there is a new assignment. But, in other words, I take it, that January 19th is 2 days after we come back into session, is that right?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Two days-two days after we come back. That's right. It would be 3, I suppose. We come back the 17th...18th. The 19th would be the third day.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Three days. Now, is there discussion?

DELEGATE: I move the adoption—

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair has got a question, if nobody's got any discussion.

Is it the intent of the committee that the Chair not serve at all, or that the Chair be ex officio?

DELEGATE MURRAY: We haven't gotten to the rules about you. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Okay, but at the moment-

DELEGATE MURRAY: I guess we're going to see how you behave.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I'm a little behind everybody at the moment.

All right. Now, is there any discussion? Miss Reichert—Mrs. Reichert.

DELEGATE REICHERT: Arlyne Reichert, District 13. I know that, as soon as we were elected, we were very pleased that we were to have this initial session at this particular time, so that we would have time to know what committee we would be serving on and we have an opportunity between now and January to do some thorough studying in our particular area.

Now, if we are not pleased with our committee assignment, if we are to wait until January to request another assignment with the consent of the majority of the Convention delegates, we would not have that opportunity to do this studying in the area in which we're interested, and my question is, since we're proceeding at such a beautiful pace today, why could we not handle this Wednesday, if we are dissatisfied with our initial committee assignment?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, I'm not sure that I understand your inquiry. Shoot that by me again, will you please?

DELEGATE REICHERT: Well, if we are not assigned to the committee in which we are particularly interested, and if we would like to request that the majority of the delegates to assist us in having our committee assignments changed, and if it must wait until January before this change could be made, we will not be able to study in our respective area.

DELEGATE MURRAY: You've gotten to me. You're making an assumption that this proposal and recommendation does not consider. We feel that you could do that any time after the appointment, but not later than January 19, 1972.

If these committee appointments are made tomorrow, as I trust they may be, (Delegate Reichert: Yes) or Wednesday at the latest, you should have the opportunity to object then.

DELEGATE REICHERT: Oh. Fine. Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Other questions? Mr. Brazier.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: My apologies to Mr. Murray. I was writing feverishly my selections for committee when you stated your recommendation, or your motion, and as a result, it went over my head.

I'm not clear whether it's your recommendation that the Committee on Committees would be constituted of the President, or just exactly what you're getting at in that respect.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: The recommendation of the committee is that the president, after consultation with the vice-president, and if the appointments of these committees should be made tonight it would be Mr. Toole, our vice-president, will make the appointment. We have no Committee on Committees. We didn't propose those either in the procedural committee list or under the substantive committee list, and we don't-we have not given consideration to that, as such. We feel as a committee, that the president should have the opportunity to appoint, in consultation with the vice-president-who is, in this particular instance, of another political party.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: So in other words, if I understand it correctly, you are dispensing with the committee on committees?

DELEGATE MURRAY: We don't have such a thing.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Wilson, you were on your feet next.

DELEGATE WILSON: A question for information. Archie Wilson from District 6.

Would the members, or the delegates, be assigned to more than one committee-substantive committees?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Each delegate will be assigned to one substantive standing committee. I would imagine, that if your interests vary among the members in your district, that probably each of you will be on a different standing committee. And if you'll note that for the president, I'm sure he'll give that consideration. Or note it to Mr. Toole, who will be in consultation with the president.

DELEGATE WILSON: That answers my question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Other questions? Mr. Berg.

DELEGATE BERG: Mr. Murray, I understand that the president, with the advice and consultation of the vice-presidents, will make the committee assignments. My question is, will the committee chairman or co-chairman be appointed by the same committee, or are they to be elected by the committee members themselves? Has your committee considered that problem?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Our committee has not considered that at this time. I would presume we would give consideration to that before-well, perhaps sometime tomorrow, but at this stage, we felt the appointment of the members to the committee was of most urgency to most of us. And that's as far as we were able to get in the hour and a half that we had within which to meet.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair has been asking for questions, and I don't mean to stop you from making statements. I should be saying, is there further discussion? Mr. Brazier.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Mr. President, I think what is suggested here has some profound implications, and maybe this is more properly classified procedurally as rising to a point of order, but I wonder if there is some way whether, whereby we could test a consensus of the delegates as to whether we ought to have an elected committee on committees, or bestow that power upon the president at this time-or officers, excuse me.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: We're certainly going to have an expression of that in a minute if we vote on this, but if you've got another way that you want to test it, the Chair would certainly be interested in hearing what it is.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: I'd like to hear— I'd like to test Walter Marshall's expertise on this procedural point.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Well, there's a motion, now, that says that if you do it this way you wouldn't have a Committee on Committees. If you want a Committee on Committees, it would seem to me you would vote against this, or if you want to do that, there's another way that I can think of, and I could tell it to you if you want me to. In other words, you could make a substitute motion.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: I therefore make a substitute motion that we have a duly elected Committee on Committees, and I think I can go into more procedural depth, if such is necessary, but I think that will test the question I had in mind.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Just a moment -Mr. Brazier, the parliamentarian would like you to say a little more. In other words, you want an elected Committee on Committees, is that it? By nominations from the floor? Or by appointment by the Chair? Or do you care how we get the Committee on Committees?

DELEGATE BRAZIER: If you'll all kindly bear with me, I'll see if I can compose one off the top of my head (inaudible) here.

I offer a substitute motion that a seven-member committee on committees be elected by nomination-be elected in its entirety by nominations from the floor, with the authority to designate one of its number as chairman, and to report back to the Conventionits recommendations upon the makeup-size and makeup ofcommittees. And for the purposes of electing such delegates I would further include in that motion that a legal ballot be one which does not include the names of more than seven nominees.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: You lost me again. What do you mean? You can't have more than seven nominees. Or are we going to have seven elected—

DELEGATE BRAZIER: My motion was based upon the assumption that there would be more than seven nominees-

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Oh, I see. You can only vote for seven.

DELEGATE BRAZIER: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: May the Chair ask Mr. Brazier a question? Now, I don't care, but I want to know the sense of your motion.

I understand that the Chair would have nothing to do with the committees if your motion prevailed, is that right? Okay. All right. Mr. Roeder.

DELEGATE ROEDER: Rich Roeder from District 11. I'd like to ask Mr. Brazier a question or two. I wonder if he has read the section in the manual here prepared by John Peale and sent to us, on pages 48 and 49, on the question of who assigns to committees?

DELEGATE BRAZIER: I read it, but I did not commit it to memory.

DELEGATE ROEDER: Well I suggest that you might look at it. It points out some of the dangers of the sort of thing that you're proposing, and I would also like to ask if you heard Mr. Whitwer last night talk about this very question?

DELEGATE BRAZIER: I heard him, and I also heard him say that the Illinois situation was not necessarily comparable to the Montana situation-

DELEGATE ROEDER: I think he was pretty emphatic on his point that his experience would apply, however. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there other discussion on this motion? Mr. Berg.

DELEGATE BERG: This is Ben Berg from District 11. Earlier, I took the opportunity to review the Memorandum 1 on Constitutional Convention Rules, and I found that in not one of the states was a committee on committees realized. In almost all instances, either the president, or the president with the consultation of vice-presidents, selected the committees. I think that might be a very worthy precedent for us to follow here.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there other discussion of the motion? Mrs. Bowman.

DELEGATE BOWMAN: I'm Jean Bowman from District 8. As I understand the proposal by the temporary Rules Committee, we are to elect three vice-presidents. I therefore feel that this committee, on the selection of committees, should not be made until the other two vice-presidents have been elected.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I think the Chair would say, that assuming we can get to the business of whether or not to elect other vice-presidents tomorrow, the Chair would certainly hold up-if I had anything to do with it-putting it out until they'd had a chance to look at it. Now, if we get into late Wednesday, I-we might have a different situation, but I'd certainly reconsider that with you, Mrs. Bowman, tomorrow.

I would like the other chairmen, if we get them appointed-the other vice-presidents, if we get them elected tomorrow, to have a look at this. The Chair does not intend to hurry it out ahead of them, and I'll at least come back to you before I would do that, if I have anything to say about it.

Is there any other discussion on the motion?

(No reply.)

Question-are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, the voting is open on the machine. The voting is on Mr. Brazier's motion that a committee of seven members be elected, all nominated from the floor, with no more than seven to be voted for. And the committee, when it's elected, choose its own chairman, the committee to recommend to this body the status and makeup of all committees.

Have I fairly stated that, Mr. Brazier?

DELEGATE BRAZIER: (The delegate indicated in the affirmative.)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. If you're in favor of Mr. Brazier's motion, vote Aye. If you're opposed to Mr. Brazier's motion, vote No.

Have all the delegates voted? Does any delegate wish to change his vote? If not, the Chair will close the ballot and have the clerk tally the ballot.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 89 delegates have voted No, i'delegates havevoted Aye.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: 7 delegates have voted Aye, 89 have voted No. Mr. Brazier, your motion has failed.

We're now back on the issue of whether or not to support the resolution of the temporary Rules Committee that the Chair, with the concurrence of the vice-presidents, nominate the members of the committees.

Is there further discussion on that proposal by the Rules Committee?

(No reply.)

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are you ready for the question-Mr. Clerk may I have that—haven't we got that written out somewhere?

Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. The question is on the temporary Rules Committee's proposal-or resolution, that the president, after consultation with the vice-presidents, shall appoint the committee members. That any appointment, on the announcement thereof, may be rejected by a majority of the members of the Convention prior to adjournment on January 19, 1972. Each member, except the president, shall be appointed to serve on only one substantive standing committee.

The Chair has further made the point that any appointments that happen to be made after that, there would be a 3-day opportunity to ask for a change, and the Chair has agreed with Mrs. Bowman that I will not appoint it with only the vice-one vice-chairman unless we don't get to that until Wednesday.

All those in favor of this resolution by the Rules Committee vote Aye, all opposed vote NO. The ballot is open.

Have all the delegates voted? Does any delegate want to change his vote? Will the clerk close the ballot?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: No, that's your job. You close the ballot.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Oh, all right, I'll close the ballot. Now-(laughter&you're going to keep me honest, Walter. All right. Walter, will you tally the ballot.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Gladly so. 98 voted Aye, 2 voting No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: 98 having voted Aye, and 2 voted No, the proposal of the temporary Rules Committee that the committees be selected and nominated in this manner is hereby approved.

Now, Mr. Blaylock had a motion-Mr. Cate, do you have a motion?

DELEGATE CATE: Mr. President, I would like to call it to the attention of the committee that there were 100 votes cast there, and there were only 99 people eligible to vote. The president did not vote, as I understand it—

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Well, I voted here-1 think I'm eligible to vote yet. I hope I haven't lost that one yet. (Laughter) I did vote and Mr. Dahood is here, so I think there are 100 eligible to vote, seeing no vacant seats.

All right. Now, Mr. Blaylock, earlier you wished to make a motion?

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: Mr. President, I'd like to ask a question of you, first, before I repeat that motion.

Do you have a desire that Mr. Toole should have a different seat to help on the floor?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Well, I don't know. Let's let the Rules Committee finish this officer thing up tomorrow, but regardless of that, I'm sure we can make adjustments later for any odd seats, and I trust you're going to make that motion about alphabetical seating.

And the Chair would assume, unless he hears to the contrary, that if we adopt such a thing, and it later became necessary for floor managers, or for vice-presidents to sit in certain spots, that we would simply adjust for that one change.

Now, what is your motion?

DELEGATE BLAYLOCK: Mr. President, I move that this Convention remain seated in alphabetical order, as it is now.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Blaylock has moved that we remain seated in alphabetical order.

DELEGATE: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Berg.

DELEGATE BERG: Ben Berg from District 11. I want to join in thatmotionforaverypersonal reason. I find I occupy seat number 13, the same seat I had in 1957. I am most comfortable. (Laughter & Applause)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there other delegates who wish to discuss the matter? Mr. Skari.

DELEGATE SKARI: Mr. Chairman, Carman Skari, District 14. I, too, would advise alphabetical seating. I think the state has gone to considerable expense here on the charts and all this. I think it also is an aid to bipartisanship, and I like the present arrangement. (More Laughter & Applause)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The House having taken constitutional notice of your proposal, Mr. Skari, will be so advised.

Now, do other people want to discuss the alphabetical seating arrangement?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Joyce, you don't want to do anything except sit down, do you? Okay.

Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The ballot is now open. All those in favor of retaining, for the balance of the Convention, or at least until further order of this Convention, the alphabetical seating arrangement, please indicate so by voting Aye, and those opposed vote No.

Has every delegate voted? Somebody hasn't voted. Does any delegate wish to change his vote? All right, the Chair has closed the vote. Mr. Clerk, will you tally the vote?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: 99 delegates have voted Aye, and 1 person made a mistake and voted No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: By your vote of 99 Ayes and 1 No, we will retain, at least until we make another such motion, the present alphabetical seating arrangement.

Now, we are not quite through. But the Chair would like to-I've been asked by the secretary, and I did not do it earlier, and I should have-but at least for this first tentative-first session, both she and I would appreciate it if you would stand and repeat your names so she can get it in the record. I'll try to repeat your name. Sometimes I get mixed up, but we want to try to do that for her.

Secondly, I've been asked to announce that there's a possibility-that there is a request that tomorrow at 3:00 p.m. all the women would have their photo taken to show how many women we have in the Constitutional Convention. Mrs. Cox will make further announcements as to place, and if the time has to be changed slightly, we'll do that, but the women might like to know today that they might have-be in a picture tomorrow. (Snickers from the men)

Furthermore, the Chair would like to be advised as to the hour that the Governor has invited us to his home this evening, if anybody knows.

DELEGATES: 7:00.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: 7:OO. All right.

Now, we have covered quite a bit of ground and I'm real proud of us. Is there any other business to come before our meeting today, or can we recess 'til tomorrow? Mr. Murray.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, I would like to ask the members of the temporary Rules Committee to meet with me to the right of the convention hall immediately after our recess.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray, there was another matter.

Mr. Nutting, do you want to make your further-your first suggestion in the form of a motion, directing the Rules Committee-temporary Rules Committee on the scope of the rules that they are to deal with between now and the end of the first session?

DELEGATE NUTTING: I think we're dealing with just the matters that I had in mind, and I'm very happy with it. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, then, we're not going to have a motion. Mr. Furlong.

DELEGATE FURLONG: Furlong, District 16. Mr. President, I would like to ask a question, if I may, and perhaps make a very short statement.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Surely. Go ahead.

DELEGATE FURLONG: Is it permissible, having voted on the prevailing side on the committee appointments, to ask for reconsideration?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Just a minute. I'll find out.

Parliamentarian says it doesn't make any difference, and you can move to reconsider.

DELEGATE FURLONG: Well, not at this moment, but I'm a little bit slow at this game, and it strikes me that we have given the body the ability to challenge any committee appointment for cause, which I have no objection to, but I'm not so sure that we have given the individual member the right to challenge the Chair to a committee appointment of his choice.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Furlong, the Chair would interpret that to mean that any member may address the Chair and raise the issue, and then the body will have to decide whether or not his committee appointment is right. A majority of you have to agree before he could get it changed-he or she-but it would seem to me, and I will certainly recognize anyone that wants to object to them, and you can make your explanation to the body and the body can leave you or move you.

DELEGATE FURLONG: Thank you for the answer.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, Mr. Choate.

DELEGATE CHOATE: Yes-Lyman Choate, District 2. I would suggest that before we recess, that these questionnaire forms be picked up, so they don't get lost or thrown away.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Those of you who have your questionnaire forms ready should give them to the pages, or, if you are holding them, leave them with the girls out in the office before you leave. And if you want to stay, some of you, and talk to your district members, why-just retain them and put them in the office before you leave. The pages are passing among you to pick them up.

Is there other business to come before the House? If not, I would recognize the vice-president, Mr. Toole-Mr. Martin.

DELEGATE MARTIN: Fred Martin, District 11. I think we're off to a good start, and I think we should give a vote-or make a motion that we give a vote of appreciation to the excellent work of the Rules Committee.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I think the Rules Committee can take that round of applause as a vote of approval so far.

Mr. Toole, unless someone else stands up with you, I'm going to recognize you to make a motion to recess until 11:00 tomorrow morning, and the reason it's 11:00 is so that the committees can be started to be worked on.

DELEGATE TOOLE: Mr. President, I make such a motion to recess until 11:00 tomorrow morning.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there any objection-I guess we can't debate that.

All in favor say Aye.

DELEGATES: Aye.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Opposed, No. (No reply.)

We will recess until tomorrow morning at 11:00 a.m.

(The Convention recessed at 5:30 p.m.)

Morning Session November 30.1971 11:10 a.m.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Convention will please be in order.

Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. I would like to ask Harold Arbanas if he would give us an invocation from his chair-or seat-from his position, let's say.

DELEGATE ARBANAS: Our Father, we'd like to express thanks for the progress of our deliberations. We ask for the gift of wisdom, the grace of courage and an awareness of Your presence. Amen.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The voting machine has been opened, and if you are present vote Aye, so that the clerk may tally the roll.

Has each delegate voted?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: No, sir, they have not.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Do some of the delegates wish to leave? (Giggles) No lights?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, sir. Yes, Mr. Clerk.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 98 delegates are present. A quorum is present.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Very well, close the ballot. Just a moment.

The Convention should know that we are, this morning, on the orders of business of Mason's Manual. We are going to pass reading and approval of the journal of the previous day, since this seems hardly necessary until we get to the substantive session in January.

The next matter that I would like to take up are messages, and I would like to recognize Mrs. Babcock for a message.

DELEGATE BABCOCK: Mr. Chairman, honorable delegates, I'd like to read a telegram that I received this morning:

"Best wishes to you and your fellow delegates as you start deliberations on a new constitution. My conference here in Moscow, U.S.S.R., preclude my attending personally. I feel confident this important document will emerge as a model to guide Montanans to a great future," and you'll never guess who that's from. (Laughter and Applause)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Thank you, Mrs. Babcock, and please express to him our gratification at having received it.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, sir.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: The other two delegates are present.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: So we are all here now?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Fine. I will show them all present on the roll, then.

Now, the next matter of business will be the reports of standing committees, or of special committees, which I presume includes the Rules Committee. If someone has something other than that, that is in order now, I would be glad to recognize you, but we do intend to go to the Rules Committee.

Did someone here have a motion they wanted to make, or an observation?

(No reply.)

Very well, the Chair will recognize Marshall Murray, the chairman of the temporary Rules Committee.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, the Rules Committee has been meeting since 8:00 this morning. We have several recommendations to make.

One has to do with the election of two more vice-presidents, one from each congressional district, if you adopt the rule as we have it.

Another has to do with the election of a secretary, who shall be a delegate.

Another has to do with the appointment of an executive director of the Convention, who shall be appointed by the president and be primarily responsible for the Convention.

Another has to do with the appointment of such other employees as may be necessary.

And the last item that wediscussed this morning, which will be considered, as I understand it, this afternoon, has to do with the appointment or designation of the chairman and vice-chairman of the respective committees.

I make particular mention of that last item because there is on your desk, ahead of the delivery to you of the recommendation of the Rules Committee a substitute motion, and I'm sure that you have seen it, and are concerned about when that matter might be considered.

The president has advised me that he would like to consider these matters in this order today. He would like to have us consider the vice-presidential matter and the secretary matter, and then he would like to have a 15-minute recess. And then he would like to call for the election of those officers this morning,

He would like to work 'til about 12:30, unless we are able to get done with this business earlier than that, and then come back this afternoon, 3 or 4 o'clock, depending on what our workload looks like, and go into the other matters that we haven't considered in this committee report. And by that time, hopefully, the committee will also have a rule on lobbyists, and an amended order of business.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray, we are having the pages distribute the first two or three of those matters you're taking up, so everyone'll have them before them.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Thank you, Mr. President.

The first matter of business is this: "Two additional vice-presidents shall be elected, one from each congressional district of the State of Montana. Their duties shall be assigned by the president and neither shall have the right of succession."

Let me explain this briefly. We feel, in the temporary Rules Committee, that the additional vice-presidents-and we don't call them second vice-president, or third vice-president-as such—will be basically honorary positions. We feel that you will treat them as such. We do believe that their election should be as we have specified, from each congressional district of the State of Montana, one residing in each.

We feel that their primary responsibilities in the interim will be in the publicrelations capacity, and therefore, we would like to have it in each district. We do not believe that in case of some tragedy and we should lose the president and the present vice-president of this Convention, that these people should be considered in line of succession. Therefore, we have added the language that neither shall have the right of succession. It is our opinion that the Convention would want to convene and have a new election and reorganize itself in that event.

Mr. President, I move that this Convention adopt the rule as I have stated it, and as it is written and being delivered to the desks.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, the motion has been made by the Rules Committee chairman that we adopt a resolution that there be two additional vice-presidents elected, one from each congressional district, that their duties be assigned by the president, and neither have the right of succession.

Is there any discussion on this resolution? Mr. Harlow.

DELEGATE HARLOW: I am in accord, to a certain extent, with this remark. I was thinking, primarily, of trying to spread these vice-presidents, along with our present president and vice-president, geographically over the state rather evenly.

At the present time, our first vice-president is from the west-from the western area. We realize-or I realize, that our president is from the—one congressional district, and our present vice-president is from another congressional district, but my thinking was geographic-a little better geographic distribution, so that one of these vice-presidents would be elected from sort of the southeast quarter of the state, and the other vice-president more from the northeast part of the state, to give us a little better geographic distribution, so that we would have a better public relations position from our various administrative officers, and that's the only thought that I have in mind.

If we elect them from those two areas-in other words, from the southeast and northeast, we would-get them both from the eastern congressional district.

I'm not going to suggest that we change this resolution to take out the one from each congressional district, I merely want to put that out here for you to think about and consider, and if you think it's a good idea, then maybe we should change this around so that we would meet with that resolution, if you feel it is necessary to change the wording.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there further discussion?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, with respect to this matter, the committee did consider where these people should be elected from, and whether they should be a woman or a man, and it was our consensus after discussing this thing at length, that this is the best that we could arrive at, and that the delegates themselves should have the prerogative, in each district, who they would like to elect and whether it should be a man or a woman, or Independent, or a Republican, or a Democrat.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Very well. Is there further discussion on the resolution? Mr. Felt.

DELEGATE FELT: This is going to happen, and I'm not particularly opposed to it, as I suspect that it's unimportant and about the samedecision that's been made.

I hadn't thought, until the very last few words I heard that perhaps the-if I heard them correctly-that only part of us would vote on this election of one of the vice-presidents, and the other part vote in selecting one from the congressional district, only if we happen to reside in that district, but maybe I misunderstood those remarks.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Murray—

DELEGATE FELT: Frankly, I'm glad if one would be a man and one would be a woman, but I think that we should base this on merit, (inaudible) and I think the same principle applies to our geography.

I think that our president represents the entire state, and I think that our vice-president and all other officers should represent the entire state, and that we shouldn't vote on these by geographical lines, any more than on the lines of sex, age, or any other qualification or disability.

Only for that reason, do I frankly prefer to say that the delegation elect an additional two vice-presidents, the duties to be assigned-(inaudible) anyone could be elected by all the delegates.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there further discussion?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, we feel that the entire Convention should be entitled to vote, and I think we have already settled this issue on the floor of this Convention, but we feel the entire Convention should be entitled to vote for each proposed vice-president. And we felt that the only fair way to do this, would be to have one from each congressional district, if we had any restrictions at all, and whatever the Convention would like to do in this respect is tine; however, our deliberations were as the rule is proposed.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there further discussion on this first proposal? Mr. Dahood.

DELEGATE DAHOOD: Mr. President, I'd like to rise to support the suggestion of the committee report. As I understand it, from my inquiry, the reason for having vice-presidents is for the purpose of assisting the work of this Convention being adopted by the citizenry of the State of Montana. So consequently, it seems to me, it would be more workable and more practical if we had a vice-president in each of the congressional districts, so that his travel arrangements could more easily be put together, and he could serve our purposes with less expense and less inconvenience to himself.

So, as a consequence, I think we should adopt the suggestion that has been made, and elect a vice-president from each congressional district.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Further discussion on the resolution? Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, the clerk informs me that we should be taking roll call votes on these things. So I think what we will do is; I'll open the ballot, and then I'll ask you to vote, and when I close the ballot I'll ask the clerk to make the machine take its roll call. So-is-was that right, Walter?

Well, wait a minute. There's no sheets for the machine until tomorrow. Maybe we ought to just start taking roll call votes tomorrow. It'd take us a long time, though.

Let's-would the Convention be agreeable to taking the roll call vote after we get the paper, and for these procedural matters, let's dispense with the roll call vote? Unless I hear to the contrary, we will do that, then. I thought the machine was ready.

All right. So now the ballot is open on the resolution of the Rules Committee that there be "two additional vice-presidents elected, one from each congressional district in the State of Montana. Duties to be assigned by the president, neither to have the right of succession."

Please understand that if you adopt this rule, and the following one, or whatever you do with the following one, then we will take a short recess. We'll talk it over, and then we'll go ahead and ballot on these matters before we recess for lunch.

Now, all those in favor say-vote Aye, those opposed vote No.

Have all the delegates voted? Does any delegate wish to change his vote? If not, the ballot is closed. Will the clerk please tally the vote.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, sir.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: 96 delegates have voted Aye, 4 delegates have voted No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: 96 having voted Aye, 4 having voted No, the resolution has passed. May I inquire of the clerk, that isn't a roll call vote?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: The names aren't on it.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The names aren't on it. I see. We got them all down but not the right names. Okay.

Now, we'll go back to the chairman of the Rules Committee. Do you have another resolution? Do you want to give power to the chairman?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Let me read the next proposal:

"A secretary shall be elected who shall have custody and preserve all proposals, resolutions, committee reports, and all other records, books, documents and papers of the Convention, and shall not permit them to be taken out of his custody, except in the regular course of the business of the Convention.

After consultation with the president, the secretary may delegate part of the duties to the executive director, or another employee designated by the president. The secretary may not, however, delegate the duty of certifying the revision or alteration of, or amendment to, the Constitution approved by the Convention for submission to the electorate."

It is the consensus of the committee that we should have an executive director of the Convention, and that we should have a secretary who would be primarily responsible for overseeing the duties of the executive director, and who would be the-according to the rules, the person in charge of those items stated in this rule.

I think, frankly, that this matter is self-explanatory, and at this time, I move the adoption of the committee recommendation.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, you heard the resolution, is there discussion on the resolution? Mrs. Warden.

DELEGATE WARDEN: Mr. President, as a member of the Rules Committee, I thought I'd gotten all the "he's" and "she's" out of this resolution, but it turned out that I didn't. It says "his custody." I would like to amend that to say "the custody of the secretary."

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, in deference to Mrs. Warden, and I defer to her wisdom in this respect, somehow in my handwritten notes, the word "the" was omitted.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: She just wants to get the word "his" out of there, and that's the point, I think.

DELEGATE MURRAY: I tried to strike the word "his" and add the word "the."

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: May we consider it amended?

DELEGATE MURRAY: I would ask that it be considered amended.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: I do hope that— I'm glad you raised the point, Mrs. Warden-but I think we ought to have a basic understanding that if, in the syntax of English, we slip a "his" or a "her" in the rest of this Convention, it really doesn't mean that. (Laughter)

Recognize the delegate from-Mr. Champoux.

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: I'm a Montanan from the Flathead, rather than just Kalispell.

The question I'd like to submit to the chairman of the Rules Committee is the-what about this certifying? What exactly did you mean by that? Could you put in a little more detail? You said something about certifying therevision. How did you—what's—

DELEGATE MURRAY: We're just talking about certifying the revision.

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: What's the reason for that?

DELEGATE MURRAY: What's the reason for that? The reason for that, is because The Enabling Act specifies that the president or the secretary shall sign those.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is that clear, Mr. Champoux?

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: In other words, it's a matter of official signing. She can't delegate the duty of signing the papers.

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: What I was concerned about, was what they meant by it, and I understand by those clarifications. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is there other discussion of the-all right, Mr. Habedank.

DELEGATE HABEDANK: I would like to-this is Otto Habedank from District 3. I would like to direct a question to the chairman of the Rules Committee, as to whether or not, in their discussion relating to this, if it was determined by them that a non-delegate secretary and executive director could perform both of these functions?

DELEGATE MURRAY: Inresponse to that, the matter was considered. It was my proposal to the committee because of the language of The Enabling Act, and because of my personal opinion, that the secretary should be a delegate, and the committee agreed, after discussing this matter yesterday and today, that we should elect a secretary from the members of this Convention, and that the executive directorship should go to an employee, and this meets with Mr. Harris's approval, too.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Further discussion on the resolution?

(No ieply.)

Are you ready for the question?

DELEGATES: Question.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, the question is on the Rules Committee's resolution that a secretary be elected-and although the resolution before you doesn't say that, it's to be from within this body-who will have custody of and preserve all the proposals, resolutions, et cetera. And after consultation with the president, the secretary may delegate part of the duties to the executive director, or other employees, which means that the actual keeping of the records may be done by the clerks, but the secretary may not delegate the duty of certifying the records and revisions, and so forth, the work of the Constitutional Convention.

Now, those-I've opened the ballot, and those in favor of that resolution please vote Aye, and those opposed please vote No.

Have you all voted? Does anyone wish to change his vote? All right, we'll close it quickly. Mr. Clerk, can you tell us what that vote was?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Yes, sir. Mr. President.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Yes, sir.

SECRETARY MARSHALL: 100 delegates have voted Aye, none voting No.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Since you have unanimously voted Aye, that resolution is adopted.

The Chair will now recognize Mr. Marshall Murray again.

DELEGATE MURRAY: Mr. President, I move that this Convention recess for 15 minutes, or until, by the clock—

SECRETARY MARSHALL: The new clock, sir.

DELEGATE MURRAY: -the new clock, 11:50, November 30, 1971.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All those in favor say Aye.

DELEGATES: Aye.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: —opposed—

(No reply.)

We're in recess until 11:50, at which time we will take up election of these officers, so that's what the recess is for.

(The Convention recessed until 11:50 a.m.)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Convention will be in order.

The Convention will now proceed with the elections, and the Chair would like to suggest that in the event there are more than two candidates nominated for any of these offices that we are going to vote on, we'll take the preliminary vote, at least, orally, so that we'll just go around the room and shout out the name of the one we're voting for. And then if there's less than two, we can do it on the voting machine.

Secondly, if there are many people nominated, it is my intention to knock off either the last one, or the last two, depending on how many are nominated, until a majority is reached by some candidate. That doesn't mean that we're down to two, but until a majority is reached by some candidate. Is there-is there-anyone objects to these ground rules for the election?

All right. Now, Mrs. Bates, you had a matter?

DELEGATE BATES: Mr. Chairman, I wondered if there would be any objection to taking the secretary-the office of secretary-the election of secretary before the vice-presidents. I would like to have—

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: You want to vote on secretary before the vice-presidents?

DELEGATE BATES: Yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mrs. Bates has made a suggestion that the Convention vote on the office of secretary before the vice-presidents.

DELEGATE: Why?

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mrs. Bates, they want to know why.

DELEGATE BATES: Because I have a candidate in mind that is interested in this position, and it may make a difference, then, in the vice-president selection, also.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: NOW, the Chair's position is this: Does anyone object to this? If no one objects, we could go ahead and do it, but if anyone objects, let's do it in the reverse order.

Pardon? Does someone care to stand and make an objection? All right, Mrs. Bugbee's objected, so the Chair takes it-the Chair is going to rule, unless you raise a point of order for the parliamentarian, that we'll go ahead and elect the vice-presidents first, Mrs. Bates, and the secretary second.

Now, I trust you wouldn't mind if the Chair ruled that we vote on the vice-president from the east before the vice-president from the west (laughter), or do you want to vote on that issue? Let's vote on the east one first and the west one second.

Mrs. Bugbee.

DELEGATE BUGBEE: Mr. President, I object again. I'm sorry. Let's take one first and then two.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Is the west one?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Oh, yes.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Oh, well pardon me. (Laughter)

Mr. Champoux.

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: I object. I think it should be done by a toss of the coin, please.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Call it, Mr. Champoux.

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: Heads.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: You're right. Which district do you want?

DELEGATE CHAMPOUX: East. (Laughter)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mrs. Bugbee, you've been had.

All right, we're going to vote. Nominations are now in order for vice-president of this Convention from the eastern congressional district. Mr. Choate.

DELEGATE CHOATE: Mr. President, I'm Lyman Choate from District 2. Well, I'd like very much to place in nomination the name of a man that I think commands the respect and a good deal of admiration, I think, on the part of most all the delegates here in this room.

He's a man, an Independent from the eastern district, a constituent of mine, and it would please me very much to place in nomination the name of Bruce Brown.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Bruce Brown has been nominated for eastern congressional district vice-president.

Let's see. Mr. Davis.

DELEGATE DAVIS: Mr. President, Carl Davis, delegate from District 21. I would like to second that nomination. Bruce is an outstanding practicing lawyer in the eastern part of Montana, and I think he could do a great deal to help pass whatever constitution that may develop from this Convention.

I have a further reason, too, which I should share with the Convention, perhaps. When my wife found out I didn't vote for Bruce, my old long-time classmate and friend, yesterday, she left and returned to Dillon, so this may avoid a big alienation of affection suit. So I heartily recommend Mr. Brown.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there further nominations? The Chair recognizes Mark Etchart.

DELEGATE ETCHART: Mr. Chairman, I would like to place in nomination as vice-president from the eastern district, the name of Mags Aasheim.

Mags is no stranger to this body. He was candidate for president. He's a four-term legislator, and I think that in order to get some balance in our officers, that we should recognize an important segment of the state, which is agriculture, and Mags is a farmer and a rancher.

He's from the very eastern part of the eastern district. He would be representative of a great part of the state, and I think that he'd make a very fine vice-president.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Now, the Chair rules that we don't need seconds, but if there is a second, I want to get in before the next nomination. Mr. Hanson.

DELEGATE HANSON: Mr. Chairman, I rise to second the nomination of Mags Aasheim.

Although I have nothing against attorneys, believe me, they're a. necessary evil at times and at other times they're necessary, I do think that we have two attorneys so far, that we should look at the agricultural segment of our state because, believe me, Montana is still primarily an agricultural state and I believe that Mags Aasheim would well represent that interest in this Convention.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, are there further nominations? Mrs. Mansfield.

DELEGATE MANSFIELD: Rachel1 Mansfield of District 14. I would also like to go along with Mr. Hanson on Mags Aasheim.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, are there further nominations?

DELEGATE DAVIS: Mr. President, a question, please.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right, a question.

DELEGATE DAVIS: When you referred to two attorneys, to whom are you referring, Mr. Hanson?

DELEGATE HANSON: Well, I believe that Mr. Graybill is an attorney, and I believe that Mr. Toole is an attorney.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Toole will appreciate that honorary law degree, I'm sure.

DELEGATE HANSON: I'm sorry, Mr. Toole—I had you in the wrong camp.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Toole, you just had a very high compliment paid you.

Are there other nominations for-Mr. Foster.

DELEGATE FOSTER: Mr. President, Don Foster, delegate from District 10. I rise to second the nomination of Bruce Brown.

I was not going to get on my feet and belabor the time of this Convention, but when the question of farmers and lawyers was raised, I felt that we might all consider another consideration, and that being the question of an Independent. And in spite of the fact that I'm the first one that wants to see partisan politics taken out of this Convention, I think it's important to note that Bruce Brown is an Independent. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: That's no political party, though. All right, now-Mr. Harbaugh.

DELEGATE HARBAUGH: I thought we got rid of the partisan issue yesterday, but apparently we didn't.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Except for Mr. Harbaugh, we're not serious today. Go ahead.

DELEGATE HARBAUGH: I think that we ought to vote on these men on the terms of their qualifications, and I believe that Mr. Aasheim is very well qualified to represent the east district, and I would speak in his behalf.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there other nominations? Mrs. Pemberton.

DELEGATE PEMBERTON: Mr. Chairman, I seconded the nomination for Bruce Brown yesterday and gave quite a bit of information on his family background, and this included information about one of the oldest ranches in the state of Montana. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Are there other nominations? Are there other nominations for vice-president from the eastern congressional district?

(No reply.)

If not, the Chair will entertain a motion that nominations be closed. Mr. Drum.

DELEGATE DRUM: Mr. President, Dave Drum from District 8. I, too, would like to rise in support of the nomination of Bruce Brown.

I would like to make a point that I think may be pertinent, at this point, in the consideration of these two candidates.

The point is this, that the ratification of our final product is probably, as we go along here, going to be the most important one factor on the minds of all of us, and I would feel that Bruce would do an excellent job-a superior job-in presenting the final product to the electorate for ratification. He is such a well respected gentleman in the eastern part of Montana.

I say this, probably, with a bit ofpartiality, as I grew up with the man in Miles City. I've known him for about 50 years, and he is held in reverence by the people that have known him and by people of both political parties, and I feel that his opinion, when presented at a later time, is going to be taken by many, many people as gospel. And I think we should consider this at this time. Thank you.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: The Chair would entertain a motion to close the nominations-Mrs. Bates, is that what you want to do?

DELEGATE BATES: No, I was going to make another seconding.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. I don't know what the count is now, but the Chair would like to suggest that we don't need any more seconds.

Yes, sir, Mr. Campbell.

DELEGATE CAMPBELL: I would like to move that the nominations for vice-president from the eastern congressional district be closed.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: All right. All in favor say Aye...

DELEGATES: Aye.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Opposed, No.

(No reply.)

All right, the nominations are closed.

Now, the clerk has suggested that the easiest way to do this, is: he will call the roll and you will please state your choice, either Aasheim or Brown, alphabetically.

Are you ready?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Yes, sir.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Please call the roll for vice-president from the eastern congressional district.

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Will the clerk announce the tally?

SECRETARY MARSHALL: Mr. President, 57 delegates have voted for candidate Brown, 43 delegates have voted for candidate Aasheim. (Applause)

PRESIDENT GRAYBILL: Mr. Brown, if you'll remain in your seat 'til we get the other vice-president, I will have you escorted. I'm not overlooking it.

We'll now entertain nominations for vice-president of this Convention from the western congressional district. Mr. Dahood.

Mr. Dahood, pardon me a moment. The Chair would like to suggest, in the interest of the noon hour, that we limit the seconds to one apiece. That's a little different rule than in the east, but I think the west can work with that rule. (Chuckles)

Go ahead, Mr. Dahood.

DELEGATE DAHOOD: Thank you, Mr. President. I think Delegate Dave Drum highlighted the need of having someone serve in the vice-presidential capacity that is articulate and persuasive and can go out among the citizens and convince those citizens that the work that we have done here deserves their recommendation and their approval for the progress of the State of Montana.
