Introduction

This paper contains the results of the House of Representatives election held on 7 September 2013 and the half-Senate elections held on 7 September 2013 (all states and territories except Western Australia) and 5 April 2014 (Western Australia).¹ There are summary tables for both the House of Representatives (Table 1) and the Senate (Table 15) together with details for each House of Representatives electoral division (Table 7).

The regional and party status classifications used in the paper are the same as those used by the Australian Electoral Commission.² Party status and safeness of seats are determined by the two-party preferred vote at the 2010 election adjusted for the effects of the 2010 redistribution in Victoria and the 2011 redistribution in South Australia.³

The 'safeness' of an electoral division (see Appendix 1) is determined by the size of the swing required for the division to be lost by the party holding the division. A marginal division requires a swing of less than six per cent, a fairly safe division requires a swing of six per cent to ten per cent and a safe division requires a swing of over ten per cent.

In all tables, first preference votes are expressed as a percentage of formal votes, formal and informal votes are expressed as a percentage of total votes, and total votes are expressed as a percentage of electors enrolled. In the detailed electoral division tables the swing percentages for the candidates will not necessarily sum to zero because of the different range of candidates at the 2013 election compared with the 2010 election.

To complete the 2013 election, party and candidate results for the voided half-Senate election in Western Australia have been included at the end of the paper in Appendices 3(a) and 3(b).

Summary results of all Federal elections from 1901 are shown in Appendices 2(a) and 2(b) but more detailed information can be found in S Barber and S Johnson, Federal election results 1901–2014, Research paper, 17 July 2014, Parliamentary Library, Canberra, 2014–15.

The numbers in this paper are derived from Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) data which have been provided to the Parliamentary Library by the AEC.

1. Due to the closeness of the 2013 results for the final two seats in the WA Senate election a recount was carried out. However, prior to the recount, 1370 votes were lost and the recount produced a different result for the final two seats. The Court of Disputed Returns voided the WA outcome and a new Senate election was held in WA in 2014.

Note 1: Pendulum shows two-party preferred swing required for division to change party at the next election, except for Independent, Greens, Katter's Australian Party and Palmer United Party held divisions. These divisions are shown with the two-candidate preferred swing required.

Note 2: In the "non-classic" contests where neither of the major parties were successful: Indi, Fairfax and Kennedy are notionally LP/NP divisions with two-party preferred margins of 9.10, 11.68 and 17.15 per cent respectively; Denison and Melbourne are notionally ALP divisions with two-party preferred margins of 8.91 and 19.25 per cent respectively.

(a) Other "non-classic" contests were held (two-candidate preferred margins to the first named party in the brackets) in Wills (15.20 per cent, ALP v GRN), New England (14.46 per cent, NP v Ind), Batman (10.61 per cent, ALP v GRN), Mallee (6.21 per cent, NP v LP), Durack (3.98 per cent, LP v NP) and O'Connor (0.95 per cent, LP v NP).
