Psalm 11

“The foundations are destroyed” 11:3

Who is saying this? David's assoc.'s

What are the foundations?

--personal and public righteousness

The civil foundation of a nation or people, is their laws and constitutions. The order and power that's among them, that's the foundation of a people; and when once this foundation is destroyed, What can the righteous do? What can the best, the wisest in the world, do in such a case? What can any man do, if there be not a foundation of government left among men?

--Joseph Caryl

Sinning times have ever been the saints' praying times: this sent Ezra with a heavy heart to confess the sin of his people, and to bewail their abominations before the Lord (Ezra 9:1-15). And Jeremiah tells the wicked of his degenerate age, that "his soul should weep in secret places for their pride" (Jeremiah 13:17). Indeed, sometimes sin comes to such a height, that this is almost all the godly can do, to get into a corner, and bewail the general pollutions of the age. "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?"

What is the “shoot”?

Psalm 11

Not Flight, but the Foundations Reaffirmed

There is no help nor answer in such a case but that which follows in the fourth verse of the Psalm, "The Lord is in his holy temple, the Lord's throne is in heaven: his eyes behold, his eyelids try, the children of men;" as if he had said, in the midst of these confusions, when as it is said, "All the foundations of the earth are out of course;" (Psalm 82:5), yet God keeps his course still, he is where he was and as he was, without variableness or shadow of turning.
