Setting the Mood with Your Date

Nothing makes for a more romantic gesture than one that is made purely for the sake of romance itself. When it comes to seducing a woman, if you want to make a really great impression on her, then you'll want to pull out all the stops and create a romantic date without waiting for a special occasion. Not to mention there is no rule that says you have to wait for a certain day or time.

This particular tip requires knowing a bit about your lady and what she likes and does not like. But you do not have to know her like the back of your hand in order to make a truly romantic evening for the two of you to share. The most important thing is to consider what you know she finds romantic and then do your best to create that for her. The very fact that you thought of her and wanted to romance her out of the blue will really impress her and make her feel truly special.

Many of these suggestions would take relatively little time for preparation. Remember, it is sometimes the smallest gesture that will really make a woman feel special. The first romantic setting is a candlelit picnic in a park or other quiet location. This is sure to make your lady feel special. There is no special occasion needed. This is also easy to put together with a bottle of wine, some cheese, strawberries, whatever the two of you like.

If you have a portable CD player, you can bring that along with a disc of romantic music and you will have an evening that both of you are sure to remember. Just do not forget to check the weather and be sure to bring the blanket!

The next suggestion I have is good for any weather, a nice candlelit meal consisting of her favorite foods and dessert at your place. When you are planning this evening be sure to have soft, romantic music on and a nice bottle of wine. Her favorite flowers would be an extra nice touch. This meal could be prepared by you or ordered and picked up from a restaurant.

As long as you have taken care to choose what she likes it's sure to be a huge hit! If your place tends to be a bit messy, be sure to take the extra bit of time to clean it up so that she is not tripping over your tennis shoes or gym bag.

How to Flirt Effectively

Men and women flirt differently, for different reasons and expect different outcomes to the flirting. However, if you put aside that outcome and flirt just to be friendly you are opening yourself to different opportunities. You may well end up with a new lover but if that does not work out, you could meet someone who becomes a good friend and who knows who he or she might introduce you to. Keep your options open.

After you have exchanged glances and smiles across a room and you are fairly confident that HE or SHE thinks that he or she might like to get to know you better, send a drink to him or her. But remember that ALL you are buying is a drink. Do not expect him or her to fall at your feet. Sometimes it is nice just to send someone a drink, watch when he or she receives it and smile, then look away – look back again later to show your interest.

If you find yourself invited to his or her table, keep your mind on the conversation and not on getting a date with him or her. Most women or men want to know what kind of person they are going out with long before they actually go out with them. Make an effort to get to know him or her and give him or her the opportunity to get to know you before diving in for a date.

Do not ever approach two women or two men in the same group. No one wants to feel like second best. Refrain from approaching one after another in the same group. You look like a loser and the women or men may think you are desperate and looking for any port in a storm. Even if you are, do not show it.

When you compliment somebody, make certain that it is a genuine compliment. There is nothing worse than someone giving out a load of overblown lines. Everyone has something great about them, notice that and compliment them genuinely.

Do not ever put your hands on somebody uninvited. Some women or men have no objection to 'touchy feely' encounters, others are horrified by it. Respect the person until you have had the opportunity to know more about him or her. Touching can be a lovely flirty action, but should be confined to the arms or resting the hand just above the arms and NOT touching, until you know more. Test the personal space by moving closer, noticing the reactions then moving back a little to remove the threat.

Respect yourself at all times. People always fall for someone who is that little bit unreachable. Do not hover or grovel or act desperate. Think of yourself as special and know that you deserve the very best.

A Woman's "Don'ts" of Online Dating

There are some things that women should never do while engaged in an online relationship with a man. These things are certain to put a quick and final end to any further communications with him.

While chatting online or by email, do not write your life story. His eyes will glaze over and he will fall out of his chair. Keep it short and sweet until he asks for details...then provide them slowly and only answer the questions he asks. For instance: If he asks how many siblings you have, he is NOT asking for the details of your interaction with them. He really just wants to know how many you have. Say you have 2 (or whatever is true) and then ask how many he has. For every question he asks you, you should ask one of him. Nothing turns a man off like a long-winded woman who just does not know when to shut up or how to listen.

Never, ever, EVER lie. I really believe that lies will catch up with you sooner or later. Many women (and men) lie about their age, marital status, employment, height, weight and a host of other things in their online profiles. That is a huge mistake. If you find a man who you are really interested in, he will find out you lied and there goes any possibility of the relationship progressing. So, just be honest. There is someone out there who will like you...even come to love you...for exactly the person you are.

Do not be too eager. It makes you look desperate and it really puts a man off. They are first and foremost conquerors and if getting the person of their desires to like them too is just too easy, they will quickly lose interest. I do not mean play "hard-to-get". I mean, do not push for a face-to-face meeting. Do not email them or IM them too frequently. Play it safe and play it cool.

Double Dating

Double dating is a fun way to go out and have a good time with your significant other. It gives your date the opportunity to meet your friends and it also can provide a comfortable experience for someone who might be a little nervous to go out on a one-on-one date quite yet. Double dating is an excellent idea if you want to meet someone new and you are not quite comfortable with being alone with him or her yet. You can invite a couple you know to come along too. This allows for you to be around people you are comfortable with while you are getting to know your date. Some people like to go on a double date first so they are not so nervous on the first date.

Going on a double date also gives your date the opportunity to get to know you through your friends. It might be a good idea to invite a couple that will say good things about you if you really like your date and you want to see him or her again.

Your date can get a good idea what type of person you are by who you are hanging out with and the things they say about you. It is a really good way to get another perspective on the person you are going out with or if you want your date to know more about you.

Double dating provides a comfortable experience when you do not want to go out with your date alone but you do want to get to know him or her. In addition, double dating provides an excellent way for you or your date to see how both of you interact with your friends and get a different perspective.

Dutch Dating

Dutch dating means that each person will pay for themselves when they go out on a date. This method of dating is often the best when both parties are new to each other, independent, or just friends. Many people often like to go Dutch because they are not comfortable with someone else paying for them. This is common with women who are liberal or independent in their thinking. It is also common if funds are low for both parties. Both people will split the costs of dinner and any other activities chosen to do on the date. They also might meet at the locations or drive themselves so the other party is not responsible for their transportation.

Dutch dating can be extremely casual and creates a comfortable atmosphere many people are happy with when a relationship is new. Some people just are not comfortable with someone else paying for anything for them until they get to know them better. In addition, they do not want to feel as if they owe them for anything later.

Dutch allows the date to go in a successful manner without the feelings of being 'owed'. In addition, many women understand the expenses associated with dating and do not believe it is fair that the guy should pay for everything, especially if the two go to an expensive restaurant and do something even more expensive later.

Dutch dating is common for people who are not comfortable with someone else spending money on them. There are many liberal and independent women who are very proud and who prefer to pay their own way also. This creates a comfortable atmosphere because no one feels like they owe them for anything later.
